NOTE.—The arrangement of this list is as follows: The first name is that of the mortgagor, the next that of the mortgagee. The description of the property then follows, then the date of the mortgage, the time for which it was given, and the amount. The general dates used as headings are the dates when the mortgage was handed into the Register's office to be recorded.

Whenever the letters "P. M." occur, preceded by the name of a street in these lists of mortgages, they mean that it is a Purchase Money Mortgage, and for fuller particulars see the list of transfers under the corresponding date.

J. T. LINDSEY, Business Manager.

NOVEMBER 15, 1884.

Now that the election is over there is an improved feeling in trade circles. Stocks are firmer; there is more inquiry for improved real estate, and a more hopeful feeling obtains in every department of business. Considerable quantities of gold are coming from Europe, and the greatest corn crop ever grown in this country will soon begin to move. Nothing that Congress can do will injure the trade of the country, and unless something unexpected happens we ought to have better times up to the close of the present crop year.

The Broadway surface horse-car road seems now to be a fixed fact. Apart from the questionable influences which were brought into play to affect the action of the Aldermen, the city will be a gainer by the arrangement finally arrived at. The company guarantees to pay 3 per cent. of its gross receipts at first and 5 per cent. subsequently into the city treasury, while all who ride in the Broadway cars are to receive transfer tickets entitling them to go to the upper end of the city for five cents. Neither the city nor the patrons of the cars have anything to complain of in this arrangement. The change will be a relief to Broadway, as it will rid that thoroughfare of the lumbering omnibuses. Then again a surface horse-car road will not interfere with the building of an arcade under Broadway; a cable road would necessarily interfere with that proposed improvement.

The adoption of the constitutional amendment limiting the indebtedness of localities to 10 per cent. of the assessed valuation of real estate is taken advantage of by Mayor Edson to suggest all manner of disagreeable possibilities. It may put a stop, he says, to the acquisition of the parks in the annexed district, to the work of the Dock Commissioners, the purchase of school sites and local improvements of all kinds. Ten per cent. of the valuation of the city is within a fraction of being $112,000,000. Our nominal debt is now $125,810,579.33, but then there are $35,479,579.33 in the sinking fund, so that our real debt is $90,331,000, exclusive of revenue bonds issued against taxes to be collected. In any fair construction of the law it is our real and not our nominal debt, which the constitutional amendment will affect. If there is any doubt about it the next Legislature must abolish this absurd fiction of the sinking fund, which is good for nothing except to employ additional clerks and conceal the real condition of the finances of the metropolis.

The Mayor seems disposed to be an obstructionist. His special animosity is directed against the parks in the annexed district, but if these are desirable there is no reason why the city should not have them, as the amendment does not go into effect until January 1st. Were commissioners appointed now to condemn the land the work could practically be consummated before the beginning of the new year. The aqueduct expenditure is expressly exempted by the terms of the amendment. We want these parks as well as other local improvements to go on, and the $112,000,000 debt has not yet been reached by a good deal. With the steady growth of the city a permanent debt of that amount could be very easily handled and would become less onerous every year.

The empire of Austria has determined to get rid of its paper and silver money and will resume specie payments in gold. The kingdom of Greece also is about to leave the Latin Union and to adopt the gold unit of value. The former empire will require $250,000,000 of gold immediately, and Greece some $40,000,000. This additional demand for the yellow metal will further depress the price not only of silver [illegible] of all commodities dealt in by the commercial world. The "scramble for gold" between the nations is becoming more eager as the years go by. This results in a steady addition to the value of gold, which shows itself in the lower prices of everything produced by the human race. This reduction of values checks production, for no one wishes to add to the stock of goods on hand in a falling market. Hence the accumulation of money at the trade centres, the stoppage of manufactures and the throwing out of employment of hosts of laborers. The wiseacres who write on finance, pointing to the piles of unsalable goods, declare they are due to over-production, yet the world is full of empty stomachs and naked backs. The real explanation, however, is the discarding of silver as a money metal and the making of gold the sole unit of value at a time when the production of gold is falling off, and the commerce of the world demands both its precious metals and every paper agency which facilitates exchanges to transact the growing business of the modern world. It looks now as if England will be the chief sufferer, as all the rest of the world is demanding part of her hordes of gold, which she cannot spare so well as could either France or the United States. Although the discount rate in the Bank of England is 5 per cent., gold flows out of its vaults to the United States where money cannot be loaned even at 2 per cent

There is some mystery about the steady imports of gold in view of the condition of our foreign trade. We are sending less to Europe than we did last year. During October, for instance, our provision export was $7,458,333, against $8,650,963 last year. Since January, that is, for ten months, our exports of breadstuffs were $120,998,047, that is some $24,137,284, or 16 per cent., less than for the corresponding ten months of last year. The lower price of our flour and wheat explains some of this falling off. Our cotton export is much less than that of last year in value. It would seem, therefore, as if Europe was again buying our stocks and bonds, a fact rendered probable as the London scale of prices has been higher than those that have obtained here recently. When our corn commences to go forward there will be a check to our cheap wheat export as well as an increase in the total valuation of our cereals sold abroad.

Jay Gould.

There is a curiously bitter and apparently unreasonable feeling against the great speculator whose name heads this article, not only in Wall street but among the outside public. For years the Herald and Times have attacked him almost daily, and in a spirit which, to put it mildly, is simply malignant. The Wall Street News recently intimated that Gould was in danger of being hung to a telegraph pole. That this feeling is shared by the populace is shown by the fact that in the excitement which followed the election a mob gathered at Gould's house threatening to do him bodily injury. The police, however, succeeded in dispersing them before any harm was done.

How are we to account for this general detestation of such a bold and successful operator? A bad man in the ordinary sense of the word he is not. In fact he is an exemplar of all the domestic virtues. He is a model husband and father and is not known to have any personal vices. He has been called a wrecker of railway properties, yet for the last three years he has confessedly made heavy sacrifices to sustain market prices. Were he to let go his hold on Missouri Pacific, Western Union or the miscellaneous stocks in which he is interested there would be a panic on the street, and the bulls in stocks would all be ruined. Yet somehow he is regarded as the evil genius of the speculative arena, while the general impression seems to be that were he out of the way a more natural market to trade in would result.

It is alleged that he is treacherous—that he does not keep faith with his associates. Yet somehow during his career he has succeeded in forming alliances with all the leaders of the street and with every prominent railway man in the country. Not so with the Vanderbilts or with James R. Keene, who attempted at one time to become his rival. The former attract to them but very few persons outside the officers of the properties they control. But observe the directories of the Gould enterprise—Western Union, for instance—and see how rich it is in weighty names compared with the boards representing rival interests.

Then, again, his career has been a marvellous one. The course of his life from the time he came to New York to sell his famous patent mouse-trap has simply been a wonder. What remarkable faculties he must have had to form the combinations and carry out the enterprises which has made him for so many years the greatest speculator and railway organizer in the world!

The secret of the universal dislike felt for him may perhaps be found in the belief that his object in life has been merely to accumulate money and wield power. Business men are not popular with the American people, and for the same reason which makes Gould disliked. At our elections the suffrages are given to lawyers almost exclusively, for they work for others directly and only indirectly for themselves, while the great business organizing intellects of the nation are rigidly excluded from public life because of a feeling that the pursuit of wealth alone does not develop the highest moral qualities in the ordinary man. Jay Gould with all his wealth and opportunities has done but little for the community. He has been a huge sponge drawing everything to himself, giving out nothing. It would be better for his reputation if he had some popular weakness such as a love of horses, or a fondness for display and would distribute his money more freely, but he never comes before the public except as the leader of a bull or bear movement to put money in his own purse and "scoop up" the property of his rivals or associates. No doubt also but that envy has much to do with the hearty personal dislike felt for him. He is charged with duplicity, that is, with getting the best of his business associates, but then that is true of all successful Wall street men, and only shows that Jay Gould is superior in their own line to the people with whom he does business.

There is an impression in Wall street that Jay Gould is nearing the end of his wonderful career. He is heavily loaded with Missouri Pacific, Western Union, Wabash, Union Pacific and other well-known securities, and an attempt by him to unload would be his ruin. He was never nearer destruction than at one time last May. Then he has lost some of his ablest associates. Edwin D. Morgan is dead, Russell Sage crippled and scores of former backers alienated. The Vanderbilts co-operated with him as late as last spring, but are now his enemies unto death. It is this great interest which is depressing prices on the market and doing what it can to drive Jay Gould from the "street." But the Vanderbilts are far more popular than Jay Gould, or perhaps it would be more accurate to say are less unpopular. Somehow it seems that in the eternal fitness of things Gould should meet the fate of all prominent Wall street operators. Nemesis comes at last to the greatest of operators, and it would seem but poetical justice that this great speculator should drink to the dregs the bitter cup which he has presented in times past to so many lips. But in the meantime he should not be treated unjustly, and the appeals to the baser passions against him made by papers like the Herald and Times should not be tolerated in a law-abiding business community.

Our Prophetic Department.

CITIZEN—Now that the election is over suppose you give us your impressions as to the political future. In previous conversations you stated that there would be no danger of any change in the tariff. There will not be so many Democrats in the House as during the last session, while there will be more Republicans in the Senate. As the Democrats failed in carrying a very moderate tariff reform bill when they had seventy majority it is not likely that they will be more successful when that majority is reduced one-half, as it will be in the next Congress. But what will be the result of this last contest on the future nominating conventions?

SIR ORACLE—I have said all along that if Mr. Blaine had decided majorities in Republican States it would have induced both parties hereafter to put to the fore their most distinguished leaders. "Dark horses" would be in disfavor; but as Mr. Blaine was antagonized so sharply, and a candidate so weak in some respects as Mr. Cleveland received so large a vote, it follows that our traditional policy will be kept up and that our Presidential candidates in the future, as in the past, will be either unsuccessful lawyers or successful generals.

CITIZEN—That is an astonishing statement. Do you really mean that a brilliant and able lawyer is necessarily disqualified for the Presidency, or that a first-class business man has no chance to be chief magistrate of the nation?

SIR O.—We can only judge of the future by the past. With the exception of Abraham Lincoln, our presidents have been lawyers of very mediocre capacity or popular generals. Jackson, Pierce and Hayes were both generals and lawyers. Brilliant men are distrusted. Witness the fate of Calhoun, Clay, Webster, Seymour, Greeley and others less noted. Then it is a very remarkable fact that in this country of business men no great captain of industry has ever been mentioned seriously for chief magistrate. Our people distrust first-class men in the presidential chair. Had Blaine been elected, he would have broken through the rule, for he is not a lawyer nor a general, but he is the best debator in the country, a historian whose abilities are a credit to American letters and a business man, though not a very scrupulous one judging from the Fisher-Mulligan letters. Mr. Cleveland seems to be the ideal American President. He is a hard-working common-place man, anxious to do right, unimaginative and technical. He will do nothing rash, will keep peace with foreign countries and rigidly guard the Treasury against all attacks. We will have in all probability an economical do-nothing administration. The tariff will not be interfered with, nothing will be done to revive our commerce, all appropriations for rivers and harbors will be cut down to the lowest figures, and there will be no interference with the great monopolies. Their vested rights will be respected by the new President, who from his training as a Democrat and lawyer will construe the constitution strictly and will not permit the government to interfere with the free play of economic forces, which in the present age means a great development of the corporate enterprises, that is the monopolies.

CITIZEN—That is not a very hopeful outlook. How about the cabinet? Will it be a strong one?

SIR O.—That is the question. An old fogy politician like Chester A. Arthur surrounds himself with very common-place men so as to magnify his own personality. In this he has succeeded admirably. He has shown good common sense, and has not allowed any brilliant cabinet minister to overshadow him. On becoming chief magistrate his first object was to get Roscoe Conkling out of the way for fear he would get some credit for the administration. He nominated him for the Supreme Court, but Conkling not consenting President Arthur deliberately broke with him, and they are not now on speaking terms. Mr. Cleveland having no personal reputation of his own may wish to strengthen himself by calling to his councils statesmen like Bayard, Thurman, McDonald or Hewitt. This was the course pursued by presidents of mediocre talent like Polk, Pierce and Hayes. Even Mr. Lincoln, who eventually proved a very superior man, invited to his cabinet all the strong men in his party. If Cleveland should choose common-place men like himself his administration would probably go to pieces during the first session of the next Congress. So I expect to see a strong cabinet, one of the members of which will be an Independent Republican. George William Curtis ought to be made Secretary of State. If he is not recognized, then Senator Bayard should have that position, and either Thurman or Hewitt should be made Secretary of the Treasury. Yes, I think the chances favor a good strong cabinet. The South of course will be recognized, and has plenty of able men anxious to serve the public.

CITIZEN—How about civil service reform?

SIR O.—That will be a most serious problem for Mr. Cleveland to solve. He is committed to the principle, and he knows that the Independent Republicans will leave him in a body if he goes back to the spoils system; but the party behind him, who for twenty-five years have not tasted any federal patronage, will insist upon their share at least of the hundred thousand offices in the gift of the government. The pressure on Mr. Cleveland will be terrific, and though he is a stubborn man and will make a fight he will be forced to give way partially at least; but civil service reform in the end will win. The time is not far distant when all the minor offices, federal, State and city, will be appointed for life or good behavior, and will not be changed with every new administration.

CITIZEN—Now, as to business. What have you to say about stocks?

SIR O.—On its face the situation looks hopeful. Gold is pouring into this port, the corn crop will soon be moving, giving the railroads all they can do, and the freight war must soon stop, for these contests never continue when business is good. There would be a strong and advancing market were it not for the attitude of the Vanderbilts toward Jay Gould. They are on the war path, and hope to cripple that operator. The settlement of the West Shore fight will be the beginning of a decided bull movement.

CITIZEN—How about grain?

SIR O.—Wheat is certainly cheap at present figures. The visible supply in Europe is one-third less than it was last year, and when the corn begins to move in this country the farmers will stop selling their wheat. There is no profit for them in wheat at present prices, but they are forced to sell because of their necessities. When corn is available it will come to the market instead of wheat, as even 35 cents a bushel pays splendidly. I do not believe the corn of this year cost the farmer to grow more than 17 cents a bushel. Hence I expect to see a large falling off in wheat receipts during December and January, and a heavy movement in corn, which being a more bulky article will be a profitable crop to the railroad.

CITIZEN—How about cotton?

SIR O.—That seems also to be a purchase. It is now settled that we have had two short years of cotton. True, consumption has fallen off, and the cotton goods in first hands are in excess of former years, but the short crops, the settlement of the war between China and France, and the gradual exhaustion of cotton goods will I think by next spring see cotton selling at higher figures. But there is one factor steadily at work reducing the price of goods and raw material the world over, and that is the steadily augmenting value of gold. As this now by common consent is the sole measure of values the price of all commodities will shrink from this time forth. The year 1885 will be one of bitter distress to the working classes and all engaged in business. Those who have money will do well, for their incomes will have greater purchasing power, but the outlook for the producing classes—for merchants and manufacturers—is gloomy in the extreme.

The Manhattan Company will be controlled during the coming year by Jay Gould, Cyrus W. Field and their associates. Mr. Wormser, who goes into the directory in place of Jose Navarro, is understood to hold a very large block of Jay Gould's Manhattan stock as a collateral for money lent. It would give the company and the stockholders more credit with the public if there were more new names among the directors. The Manhattan system is not half developed. Increased accommodation is promised in an East River front line, extending from South Ferry to the Canal street station on the Second avenue road; but nothing is said about an "L" road along the North River front, or the use of the system for carrying parcels and light freight. True, Mr. Cyrus W. Field promises that within the incoming year an electric motor will be tested which, he claims, will be cheaper and make less noise than the locomotives now in use; but electrical motors have not proved cheaper than steam so far as tried, and in this case, as the patent to be employed is held by a member of the Field family, its success would probably be of more benefit to the latter than to the public or the stockholders.

There has been an apprehension that Gould and Field would lease the New York & Northern and the Suburban Rapid Transit when built to the Manhattan Company, repeating the famous Kansas Pacific deal with the Union Pacific; but Field pledges the stockholders that this will not be done and he announces it to be the intention of the company to deal justly if not generously with the public in all things. It must be confessed that on this score there is no cause of complaint. New York has the most comfortable and the swiftest and cheapest means of inter-mural travel in the world; but it is a pity that its managers are not persons in whom the community could have more confidence. During the year ending September 30, 1884, the company carried 96,702,630 passengers, as against 92,124,943 the previous year, and the gross earnings were $6,726,358, as against $6,386,505 during the previous fiscal year.

The bridge over the Harlem River at Second avenue is rapidly nearing completion and it is understood that the Suburban Rapid Transit road will soon be under way. The company secured all the land they could at private sale, and about a month since commissioners were appointed to condemn the land of persons who could not be induced to sell. As soon as the commissioners' action is endorsed by the proper court this very necessary work will be undertaken and some time during 1886 the two wards beyond the Harlem will have swift and cheap communication with every part of New York island. When this work is under way, if Mayor Edson does not succeed in putting a stop to the proposed new parks, there will be a lively real estate speculation in the Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth Wards.

Concerning Men and Things.

Henry Irving's versatility is unexampled upon the stage. An actor who can play Hamlet, Louis XI., Benedict, The Inn-keeper in the Bells and Malvolio with equal acceptance must possess an extraordinarily pliable genius, for the theatrical public is very exacting and rarely patronizes actors who go out of what is supposed to be their specialties. The late E. L. Davenport was an admirable Hamlet, but the public would not believe it because he could give a realistic presentation of Bill Sykes. Clara Morris told the writer that she thought she could play humorous as well as emotional parts, but she did not dare attempt it because of the non-success of other artists who had played a wide range of character parts. Anyone who knows that bright lady in private life can testify to her remarkable talent for humorous mimicry off the stage. Yet, for professional reasons, she adheres to the weeping roles. But Henry Irving can attempt any part with a certainty of popular recognition. In this respect, as in many others, he is superior to any actor of his age.

More serious dramas are beginning to take possession of the stage. Robert Buchanan's new piece, at Wallack's, has been successful, and the farces at our leading theatres will soon give place to more ambitious plays. But these lighter works have developed a great deal of humorous talent both on the part of American writers and actors. In the "Parlor Match" at the Third Avenue Theatre there is really some admirable acting by an eccentric comedian named Evans and Miss Jennie Yeamans. The piece itself is trashy and unnatural, but it contains many humorous situations and its mirth is innocent. If Miss Yeamans was in a first-class stock company she would prove a worthy successor of Mary Gannon, and would rank as a first-class soubrette. By the way, these traveling companies are now our only school for actors. The long runs at the leading city theatres keep back the development of histrionic talent.

A former publisher of the New York World is authority for the statement that James Gordon Bennett is both disheartened and frightened at the falling off in the circulation and business of the New York Herald. He is now willing to lease his paper to a responsible company. He will take £17,000 sterling cash down and a guarantee of £100,000 sterling per annum for a certain number of years, but under no consideration will he part with the title to the paper; the use of the Herald building, however, to go with the journal to the lessees. A. Oakey Hall is said to be conducting the negotiation for the lease. The great trouble with the Herald seems to have been Mr. Bennett's jealousy of any of his staff who showed ability or was a commanding personality. Self-respecting, cultivated gentlemen found it impossible to get along with the proprietor of the paper. The people who could stand his personal insolence were not fitted to conduct a great paper during his frequent and prolonged absence abroad.

It is rumored that a new daily paper of conservative politics is to be established in this city to take the place made vacant by the defection of the Times and the inability of the Tribune to please certain sections of the present administration party. There is room in New York for an able, high-class, independent paper with Republican leanings, but scrupulously just to all parties. Of cheap trashy journals we have more than enough already.

Home Decorative Notes.

—A very lovely set of doilies is of very fine linen lawn, on which is etched in filoselle sea mosses of different kinds copied so perfectly that they look as if they were pressed on the linen, and so preserved in all the beauty of color and form.

—The latest and most fashionable tablecloths with napkins to correspond are of momiecloth, hemstitched by hand, which is the newest method of finishing them.

—Tiny table bells are made of glass with silver tongue and handle.

—The Royal Lisbon umbrella stands with branches of the Virginia creeper in natural coloring twined gracefully about are indeed very elegant.

—Hanging lanterns of rare design are hung in corners of æsthetic apartments.

—An odd set of after-dinner coffee spoons have silver bowls, while East Indian coins of gold are set in the handles.

—One of the newest designs for embroidery is a bunch of yellow asters; a brown plush sofa pillow with this design wrought in velours produces a beautiful effect of color and richness.

—Among the pretty articles for Christmas gifts may be mentioned the fancy bags now so popular for carrying the opera glass; the bag may be cut in the form of the opera glass or in the style of the old-fashioned work bag; one made of canary-colored plush and lined with pale blue satin and strings of same color will please almost anyone.

—Brass placques for decoration are framed with finely-hammered rims.

—Dinner cards have some vegetable in miniature, such as a turnip, cabbage, or carrot, tied with a little bow of ribbon in one corner.

—A rather luxurious catch-all is a light wooden pail covered with Saxon silk and adorned with silver trimmings; the inside of the pail is covered with delicate blue silk, laid in folds and caught down with narrow bands of silver.

—Luxury and taste are evident at every turn, and it is hard to properly convey the degree of refined artistic feeling which pervades the rooms of Camerdon & Foster, of Broadway and Twenty-seventh street. In clocks there are lovely and unique designs; the square and round palette clocks with landscapes, are very beautiful; others are of brass, porcelain, coppe and plush, with brass figures and hands; most exquisite porcelain paintings of historic or ideal heads, exquisitely done, are mounted in plush or brass, resting upon small easels; notable among these porcelains is one taken from a celebrated picture of a beautiful girl shading a candle with her hand and smiling roguishly.

—Trophies of the chase may find a fitting place on the staircase, hall or landing.

—Velvet and plush still hold their own as a background for large pieces used in decoration, such as portieres, sofa and divan pillows, table covers in plush and velvet have large designs of Turkish embroidery in gold and silver threads which are very elegant; dark rich velvets are also used for window and mantel hangings.

—Ornamental placques and card trays are in repousse silver.

—An attractive wood-basket is of rattan bronzed and oblong in shape, a lambrequin of cardinal plush is fastened on either side and decorated with pine branches worked up in arrasene, while in one corner is traced in quaint lettering the following couplet "Pile on the logs, the night grows cold."

—Decorated table linen is one of the latest caprices of fashion, for this purpose of decoration one can buy plain linen two and one-half yards wide without woven designs of any kind; the Russian cross stitch is still used on linen; fancy towels of fine French damask have borders nearly half a yard wide in red and blue Russian embroidery, others have borders of large open wheels in shaded brown and ecru.

—Painting on glass is a fashion which seems to hold it own quite bravely in spite of what has been said against it, the square bevelled glass mirrors still retain many admirers, the following in quaint old English lettering is an appropriate motto for a mirror frame: "Smiles for smiles and frowns for frowns."

—A very delightful and inviting hall is in Moorish style of architecture, with polished oaken floor and with carved chimney, the upper part being of dark wood and the lower in Italian marble of a soft yellowish tint; the fire-place is roomy and has large iron wood baskets and other quaint antique furniture; about the hall are pieces of very ancient and rare wood carving, vases hung by chains or standing upon tripods, at the end of the hall over the dining-room door is a very artistic arrangement of arms.

—Duplex lamps are now seen in all the hard metals, and gain as many admirers as those made of breakable wares, however beautiful they may be.

—The growing popularity of open fire-places has created an immense demand for fire screens; various designs have appeared in the shape of tapestry, embroidery and combinations of many colored glass set in rich brass frames; some admirable brass fire gilt mantels, broad and lofty, are rapidly finding their place in city mansions; steel is well combined with brass, both in fenders and dog-irons; the fine brass, copper and forged iron wood-baskets are very ornamental; tall coal hods, looking not unlike umbrella-stands, are worthy ornaments to any room; in fine brass and copper the firm of Jackson & Co., of No. 31 East Seventeenth street, exhibit everything in novelties and standard goods, particularly fenders, fire-sets and screens, which rival gold in tint and richness.

The Taxes in New York City for the Year 1884.

to the Editor RECORD AND GUIDE:

The city taxes for the year 1884 are now due, and will be received up to December 1st without any interest or penalty. If any tax is not paid before the first day of December 1 per cent. will be added to it. If not paid before the first day of January interest is charged at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum from the day the books are delivered to the receiver of taxes; and if not paid by the fifteenth day of January he may issue his warrant for the collection of personal taxes by distress and sale. Real estate must be advertised and sold to collect taxes and assessments thereon. The rate of taxation is $2.25 on $100 upon the valuation of real and personal property, except upon the capital stock of such kinds of corporations and associations as are taxed upon their capital by the State. Upon these the rate is only $1.92½ upon the $100. The rate is less than in 1883. The total valuation of real estate is $1,119,761,597, being $40,630,928 more than for the year 1883. The total valuation of personal property, including the capital and personal property of corporations and associations, is $218,536,246, being $11,990,251 more than for the year 1883.

The total valuation of capital and personal property of corporations and associations, except a manufacturing corporation, is $37,032,213, being $9,879,307 more than for the year 1883. Of this portion the increase in bank stock over 1883 is $7,093,345, leaving the increase on the capital and personal property of the other kinds of corporations to be only $2,780,962. All these valuations are made as of January of each year.

The value of bank stock taxed, in the hands of the holders, is $66,250,765, while the capital and personal property of all corporations and associations, including banking institutions and excepting manufacturing corporations, is only $37,032,213, a very striking and wonderful exhibit for tax law makers to study. The Proposed New Parks.

Mr. John Mullaly, who from the beginning has been interested in the new parks in the annexed district, says that the objections to the improvements by Mayor Edson are unworthy of consideration. In the first place the law has passed authorizing the expenditure and no constitutional amendment can be ex post facto, that is it cannot prevent expenditure already provided for by law. Moreover, our present debt is below the constitutional requirement, for the bonds in the sinking fund are owned by the city and not its creditors. Our valuation increases $50,000,000 per annum, and under our present laws the sinking fund increases $8,000,000 per annum. We may rest assured, continued Mr. Mullaly, that the commissioners will be appointed according to law, and the new parks laid out despite the opposition of Mayor Edson.

The one or two delinquents in their subscriptions to the Real Estate Exchange and Auction Room (Limited) having paid up, the necessary legal document was filed with the Secretary of State during the past week announcing the fact that the whole capital stock of $500,000 had been paid up, and therefore no director or stockholder will ever be liable again for any of the possible debts of the Exchange. The buildings have been paid for with the exception of an $80,000 mortgage, and that could have been cancelled were it not considered prudent to keep some cash on hand to make improvements in the building or hall of the Exchange should any be necessary. It is already apprehended that the hall may not be large enough to do the business which the Exchange may want to transact after it is open. The directors of the Exchange are now holding meetings frequently, and are preparing the necessary regulations for the opening, which it is hoped will soon take place. It is now very certain that everything will be in operation before the 1st of February. The annual election will be held on the 8th of December, when a report of the year's doings will be presented by the retiring directors. There is a decided demand for seats.

Thomas C. Hollins has been fined $250 for running dummy vent pipes from traps of fixtures into a partition and placing on the roofs over the lines of the partition other dummy vent pipes, merely soldering them to the roof, there being no intermediate pipe between them. The sewer gas consequently had free access to the rooms from the ends of the dummy pipes terminating in the partition. Hollins was arrested on complaint of the Board of Health, and was found guilty at the Special Sessions. The plumbing of the houses affected, which are in a select location, has now been thoroughly put in order.

Geo. B. Lawton states that property in the neighborhood of the Gansevoort Market has greatly increased in value during the last year or two. Over a thousand farmers' wagons daily concentrate in that locality, and the West Washington Market, to be built on West, Bloomfield and Gansevoort streets and Thirteenth avenue, for which sketches are now being drawn by an architect, has given an upward impetus to property all round this section. Vacant lots have sold for $8,000 each recently, for which not more than $4,000 was obtainable a few years ago.

The Moniteur Industriel describes a method of replacing an old-style iron bridge by one of later construction on the line of railroad of the North of Bohemia, between Kuttenthal and Siranow—Krusko. The ravine crossed was 98 feet deep, and the span of bridge was 131 2 feet; weight of truss, eighty tons. The method adopted was to erect each bridge span upon rollers, and then, by means of a locomotive pull it above the place it was to occupy on the top of the old bridge. The span was then raised by hydraulic jacks and the rollers removed. This done, the members of the original bridge were suspended to the new truss in such a manner that the workmen were enabled to remove them, the men working upon a platform swung beneath. As soon as the old bridge was removed the new truss was lowered, a distance of 15 feet, to its final bearing upon the piers. Trains were stopped during the operation of substituting the new truss. The total time consumed was less than forty-eight hours.

Northwestern Grain Receipts in October.

The receipts of grain at the Northwestern markets in October were even larger than in September, and among the largest there have ever been in a single month. For the five weeks ending November 1 this year and the corresponding weeks of previous years they have been, for the last twelve years:

Year.	Bushels	Year.	Bushels.
1876	26,798,232	1882	27,606,446
1878	66,609,289	1884	38,349,639

Thus the receipts this year were larger than in any other except 1880, which is the more remarkable because receipts of corn have been very small this year, and because there has been a very large increase in flour receipts over 1880. Notwithstanding the light earnings of many of the grain roads in the Nortwest, it is evident that there has been an exceptionally heavy grain traffic. That it has not swelled their earnings as it did in 1879 and 1880 is due chiefly to the fact that there are so many more of them. That their earnings in many instances were smaller than last year, when the grain movement was nearly an eighth less than this year, is due to the bad condition of other business. The receipts of the Northwestern markets usually fall off from October to November, but not so much now that rail rates are kept low throughout the winter, as they used to when a 40-cent rate was anticipated after lake navigation closed. A great revival of it in December, caused by forwarding needed supplies of corn is quite possible: but if the new corn movement begins so early, it will be probably from Kansas and the more southern part of the corn district than from the country further north, where it will not be fit to ship quite so early. And if there is such a movement it will probably not be to Chicago as much as usual at first; though for the whole corn crop year that city is better placed than usual, even to catch the bulk of the corn marketed, there having been a larger production on the country which usually markets there than in any other year, the main increase in production being in northern Illinois, in Iowa and Nebraska, which ship little by routes south of Chicago, and in Kansas and Missouri, which market a large part of their grain there, especially when navigation is open.—Railroad Gazette.

The Important Treaty with Spain.

If the proposed treaty with Spain is consented to by the Cortes, where it will meet strong opposition, and ratified by the Senate, it will make very important changes in our trade relations, for it is the first step in the formation of a zollverein or customs union between the United States and Mexico and all the South American States, which will offer certain advantages and freedom of trade to the union from which the rest of the world is excluded. It will be for Spain an entirely new colonial policy, and for us a not less new departure. The conditions of this treaty have been agreed upon between the United States Minister Foster, in Madrid, and the Spanish commissioner, Senor Albacete, and it has been submitted to the king in council for consideration. It seems to be the idea of this customs-union with all the Spanish-speaking peoples around the Gulf of Mexico and in the West Indies to exclude European, Canadian and British West Indian competition, by means of reciprocal concessions and discriminating duties among the parties to the union. In case this is done it is easy to see that England will attempt some measure of retaliation; unless, indeed, we silence a part of the discontent by attempting to include in the union Canada and the British West Indies. The new convention with Spain stipulates that its advantages shall apply to trade between the United States and Cuba and Porto Rico, which is carried on under the Spanish and American flags. That clause might stimulate American shipping again. The treaty opens the Castilian colonies to American competition against Spanish imports. It will greatly increase our market, as it will place American flour and cereals imported into Spanish colonies upon the same footing as those imported from Spain, and will make a large reduction in the duties on cattle, salt, fresh fish and all but a very few manufactured American goods. Spain will also suppress the consular tonnage duties which are now levied at American ports and promise to reform the custom houses, harbor and sanitary regulations and fines in her colonies. Of course for these new markets and concessions and facilities of trade the United States must concede an equivalent, or what seems like an equivalent. With whom the balance of trade would rest and whether we should export more than we would import under the treaty only experiment could determine. By the treaty America will admit sugars, molasses and raw tobacco free of all duties, and the duties on other articles imported from the West Indies will be reduced. Of course this treaty of reciprocity will meet in this country much opposition from special interests—as, for instance, sugar and tobacco—and if it is carried into effect there will necessarily follow other changes in the revenue law. The tax on tobacco cannot be maintained as it is if unmanufactured tobacco comes in from the West Indies. The measure is the most important one that the government has proposed in many years.—Hartford Courant.

No Change in the Trade Outlook.

Politics took the place of business in all parts of the country last week, and trade has been unusually light for the season. In general merchandise jobbers have received some orders from the South and Southwest, but all other sections are reported as buying sparingly. Cotton has been higher. The new crop is small, but excellent in quality. Private letters from England report rather more activity in the manufacturing district about Manchester, and express the hope that the worst is over. In this country no such improvement is reported as yet, but the restrictive policy of the manufacturers during the last few months must surely have a good effect during the coming season. Petroleum continues so excited and unsettled as to check exports for the time. Iron is very dull and steel rails are lower. Grain is still largely sent forward to the primary markets, but good judges think the rush of wheat is about over. Corn will begin to move the latter part of this month. If there was anything like harmony on the part of the competing railroads there might be a chance of profit at the close of lake navigation, but the policy of slaughter is still in force, and grain is likely to be carried for some months at low if not unprofitable rates. There has been very little change in the price of either wheat or corn. East-bound freight shipments show an improvement for the week over last year and the previous week. There has been some improvement in the anthracite coal trade on account of the demand for domestic sizes and the suspension of work at the mines. The production, however, continues so large when the mines are at work, and the stocks on hand are so heavy, that there is no hope for a profitable business this year. The total production to date this year has been 25,000,000 tons, and there are yet nine working weeks. If production goes on at the rate of 800,000 tons per week, the output for the year will be heavier than in 1883. It is probable, however, that there will be two weeks' suspension in December, and that the total shipments will be between 30,000,000 and 31,000,000 tons. This being the case, there will be a surplus to be carried into next year of more than 1,000,000 tons, which will be sufficient to keep the trade in an unsettled condition until late in the spring. Meantime some new arrangement is likely to be proposed for keeping down production, the restrictive plan having proved a failure.—Philadelphia Press.

Over-Production.

In controverting the idea that over-production is the cause of dull times, the editor of the Iron Age gives utterance to a wholesome truth when he says: "There can be no sustained improvement in general business until labor is better employed at better wages." As to how this desirable result is to be brought about, the doctors differ; but it is well to keep in mind this cardinal doctrine that good wages and employment for everybody are necessary conditions to business prosperity. Reducing wages below a normal level reduces the cost of manufacturing; but, when it becomes general, it also reduces the pay purchasing power of the market for the manufactured goods. Fair wages and employment for every willing worker should be the aim not only of the workers themselves, but of their employers; and in this matter, at least, broad-minded capitalists are in hearty accord with workingmen in general.—Ledger.

Hold Your Securities.

The present is not a good time to sell shares. It is better to hold them than to sell, as buyers will not purchase unless below real value. There has been two years of shrinkage and depression, and the best dividend-paying stocks have declined. Dividends also have been either passed or reduced. Weak and timid investors are afraid of a greater decline and are disposed to sell. It is a mistake. Hold on to your shares, for bottom has been nearly reached. Do not part with a dividend-paying stock which you have held for a long period and considered as a permanent investment. The country is not going to pieces, nor are our industries to become bankrupt. If you have stock in cotton or woolen mills do not part with it in this period of depression. Those who sell their shares now, simply give to speculators the opportunity to obtain them at fifty to seventy-five cents on the dollar. The time to sell shares is when everybody wants to buy, and the time to buy is when everybody wants to sell. Mills and factories will again earn dividends. Railroads will do the same. It is true the outlook is not particularly bright, but the dark corner must be turned sometime; depression cannot always last. The uniform history of mills and factories that have a good plant and the capacity of making money in a good market, is that they will not long remain unremunerative. Those who hold on to their shares and do not sell out on a falling market are the most fortunate, for dividend paying is generally resumed within a short period.—Grocer.

The Channel Tunnel.

Captain Eads, just returned from England, says that the tunnel under the British channel is perfectly feasible from an engineering point of view. A mile and a half of the boring was completed on the English side and about a mile on the French before the former government stepped in and stopped the work, such important military authorities as Wolseley being of opinion that its completion might some time be dangerous to the country, opening a possible channel of invasion from which the silver streak of sea has hitherto protected it. Captain Eads does not think it would involve any such danger. Why should it? The whole tunnel could be flooded with water by touching an electric button at the War Office in London, drowning out the invaders like so many rats. The Dover terminus might be surrounded with fortifications as impregnable as those of Gibraltar, or those which Wellington drew around Torras Veras, and which would blow any possible invading force, supposing such a one by some incredible and unheard of stratagem to successfully pass through the tunnel and actually reach British soil, into instantaneous cat's meat. More courageous counsels will doubtless some time prevail, and then the mighty sub aqueous viaduct, greatest ever heard or dreamed of in the world, and which until recently would have been deemed as chimerical as Xerxes' boast to hew down Mount Athos and cast it into the sea, will become a fact. Captain Eads says that the chalk formation under the channel offers no difficulty to tunnelling, and that there are no engineering obstacles which cannot be readily surmounted.

India Cotton.

People who believe that India is always being sacrificed to Lancashire, will be interested to learn that our great dependency has begun to turn the tables on us. She is not only growing cotton, she is commencing to spin it, and that, too, with an amount of success which is evidently not relished by the north country mill-owners and mill-hands. Her low priced cotton goods are getting to be favorably known in the East and in Africa, and her workmen can easily compete against ours for two reasons. In the first place their wages are low as compared with English wages, and in the second the men work longer hours than they do in England. As this may prove serious for hundreds of thousands of British wage-earners, it may be instructive to point out that the cost of producing Indian cotton cloth is 65 per cent. under that of making the same stuff in England, and that the Indian mills have a great advantage over the English ones, because, while the year with us has 2,464 working-hours, with the Indian spinners it has 3,876 hours. What will be the effect of the pressure of this rivalry on the British wage earner it would be hazardous to conjecture. Of course, in high-priced cotton goods England holds the market; but as the bulk of the wages is made out of low-priced cotton, such formidable competition in making it as this of India is not to be lightly regarded.—Colonial Trade Journal.

Bad Statuary in America.

Public buildings and places in France are generously ornamented with statues. Of the hundreds and thousands we have seen, there is scarcely one by modern artists that is not good. Some are most excellent. The reason of this general excellence is found in a great school of art, in sculpture we think the best in Europe, and in intelligent official inspection. In this country we are too often cursed with bad statuary. In the collections of statues now being made at the capitol in Washington, criticism and selection is not possible. Each State selects its hero and the artist, and already wretched sculptures have been contributed. The State authorities usually select a man who comes from the neighborhood, without regard to his fitness. The government at Washington has a great fondness for appointing commissions. There should be appointed a body of experts to supervise the contributions of the States to that great national portrait gallery.—Cincinnati Courier.

Obituary.

Francis Depau Fowler, founder of the Exchange Salesroom in the Trinity Building, No. 111 Broadway, died on Saturday of apoplexy, at the home of his mother, in New Brighton, Staten Island. He was born in the town of Fowler, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., August, 1822, and was the son of Theodosius O. Fowler and Emelie Depau, the granddaughter of Admiral Count De Grasse. In his earlier days Mr. Fowler was employed at the firm of Fox & Livingston, steamship owners, to whom he was related. Later he entered the real estate business, and when the Merchants' Exchange was moved from Wall street to No. 111 Broadway in 1863 he and his brother secured control of the place and organized the Exchange Salesroom, of which Mr. Fowler remained the manager until his death. He was never married, and in the summer he lived with his mother on Staten Island, and spent his winters in this city. He was very quiet and retiring in his disposition, and had a large circle of friends. The funeral services took place at Christ's Church, Franklin avenue, New Brighton, at 10 o'clock on Tuesday morning.

Real Estate Department.

The market has certainly improved since the result of the Presidential election has been made known. There is more activity and a more hopeful feeling obtains. It is true that some lots sold at auction this week brought very low figures, and the foreclosure sales did not bring satisfactory prices; but the fact remains that a number of transactions took place which will appear upon the record in due time, while there was more inquiry for improved property than at any previous time this season. Vacant lots in the line of improvement are very strongly held. Very high-priced houses are not marketable, but there is an actual demand for residences ranging from $12,000 to $35,000, provided the location is at all desirable. Mr. H. H. Cammann reports a good deal of inquiry for property on either side of Fifth avenue, below the Central Park, but very high-priced houses there is no present call for.

At the Exchange Salesroom, on Thursday, eight lots on the northeast corner of Sixth avenue and One Hundred and Forty-first street were sold, by order of assignee and trustee, for a total of $12,100; the same parcel sold in 1872 for $30,000; of this amount $15,000 was paid in cash and a mortgage given for the balance. Four lots on One Hundred and Forty-second street, 75 feet west of Seventh avenue, sold for $1,850 each, and four lots in the rear on One Hundred and Forty-first street were withdrawn on a bid of $2,450 for each; the Seventh avenue front, between One Hundred and Forty-first and One Hundred and Forty-second streets, was also withdrawn. The school building Nos. 135 and 137 Mulberry street was sold for $29,600.

The transfers during the past week do not make as good a showing as in the corresponding week of last year. The election excitement doubtless had something to do with this, but apart from that, it is a fact worth noting that while the number of transactions increases, taken month by month, there is relatively less money paid out for property purchased. In other words it would seem as if fewer large properties were sold, the transactions being in lower priced houses and probably at a somewhat reduced range of values. The following is the table:

The Armory Commission has selected the plans of James E. Ware from among the five competitors for the Twelfth Regiment Armory. The structure will be three stories and basement in height, "L" shaped, and will have a frontage of 325 feet on Sixty-second street, 200.10 on Ninth avenue and 175 feet on Sixty-first street. The material will be of brick, with stone trimmings. The drill room will be 175x200, and the administration building 150x100. The first story will contain two squad drill rooms and officers' headquarters, general meeting and reception rooms. A grand staircase will lead to the second story, which will contain ten company rooms and camp officers' rooms. On the third story there will be a gymnasium, band, drum crops and janitor's rooms. The basement will contain rifle ranges, heating apparatus, &c. The architecture is in the early Norman style, with towers, battlements, &c. The building will be partly fire-proof, and will cost about $300,000.

The College of Physicians and Surgeons propose to push forward with all speed the erection of a new building on the site recently purchased by them on the east side of Tenth avenue, between Fifty-ninth and Sixtieth streets, comprising twenty-nine city lots. The sketches are now being drawn by architect W. Wheeler Smith, and we learn from Dr. J. W. McLean, Mr. Vanderbilt's doctor, that the building will be commenced directly the plans are completed. The cost has not yet been estimated.

The cottages will be on plots of ground 50x100, and will be finished in hardwood, and with all sanitary and modern improvements. They will cost in the neighborhood of $4,000 each. Two have already been purchased by New York gentlemen. Mr. Lyons is also having plans prepared for a private residence on Pocantico Hill, Tarrytown Heights, which he will build during the winter season. It will be of cut granite and brick, 32x44, two-and-a-half-story and sixteen rooms. The interior will be a combination of ancient and modern styles, finished in hard and fancy woods, tiles, art-glass, &c. J. R. Thomas, of New York, is the architect.

This will be the forty-seventh church built by the Catholic community in Brooklyn. The plans have not yet been drawn, but the work will be commenced in the spring. It is proposed to eventually erect a fine ecclesiastical residence on the property, as well as schools.

BUILDING MATERIAL MARKET.

BRICKS.—Everything continues slow on the market for Common Hards and it is quite as difficult a matter as ever to draw out from operators any item of general interest or importance. There appears to be plenty of stock afloat, indeed a little more than is required at times, yet the accumulation does not run full enough to become oppressive and the line of cost is not influenced by a direct effort to force sales. Buyers seem perfectly willing to open negotiations the moment they know where stock can be used, but the bounds of actual necessity is the limit of operations and beyond that no purchases are made. It is still claimed that little or nothing goes into yard and that about everything handled is wanted for consumption. Work, however, is said to be falling off somewhat with few new jobs laid out and the tendency of business to gradually draw into narrower compass. On the general range prices stand pretty much where they did last week and we make no important alteration in figures, though some of the best and favorite makes of Jerseys and Hudson Rivers command the usual premium over regular quotations Of the inferior lots of Hards referred to last week the bulk appear to have sold off and there is less complaint. Pales are just fairly active and about steady, with the most direct demand for choice and fancy stock.

LATH.—There has been a little more stock available since our last but it appeared to find someone ready to purchase as soon as the offering was made and pay advancing rates. Some of the earliest sales took place at $2.15 then up to $2.20, and finally a cargo was placed at $2.25 per M., with the latter now apparently about as low as sellers are willing to negotiate either for near-by or distant delivery. Indeed receivers are expressing much confidence in the general situation and calculate that between the reduced shipments and the natural wants of the trade values will be maintained without difficulty on all good stock at least. Some dealers claim to be fairly supplied but a great many will have to secure stock before they can be considered as fully prepared for winter trade.

LIME.—There has been little or no change in the general condition of the market. Arrivals fluctuate somewhat but the offerings great or small seem to find an outlet without much of an effort on the part of seller and full former rates are readily realized. Some surprise has been created since our last by the assignment of John R. Brown, one of the oldest dealers in the trade, and representing some of the best companies in the country. The suspension is understood to be due to a succession of losses in various business connections and we hear general expressions of sympathy for Mr. Brown in his embarrassment.

LUMBER.—So far as the distribution of supplies may be concerned there is little if any change in the situation. Some dealers are doing well, others moderately so, and still others are very dull, with probably the average amount of business not making any great variation from week to week. New orders for building purposes are not particularly liberal, but deliveries on contract continue and manufacturers buy fairly, the latter taking considerable in the way of hardwoods. On the wholesale market there is nothing in the way of what would ordinarily be considered a direct demand. A considerable amount of stock is placed from time to time, but dealers find so many agents from the interior soliciting their trade that for anything outside of special selections they have only to wait until it is brought to them and they can then close upon comparatively easy terms. Accumulation show quite full and well assorted, and it is not likely there will be much difficulty in making selections during the winter. Exporters do not make much display, but in a quiet way are taking out quite a fair amount of stock, the movement averaging something over one million feet weekly.

Eastern Spruce is fairly steady in tone, but, it is claimed, shows no profit, and the effort at primary points is to keep the shipment down just as low as possible. Some manufacturers have specials to fill, but not many are willing to go on and cut random, and general falling off in production is in order. Prices in the meantime show some stiffening, and as most dealers have their yards well stocked, they are rather pleased with the turn of affairs than otherwise. Valuations are made at $12@15 for randoms, and as high as $17 asked on specials.

White Pine selling moderately on local and shipping account, and the business not in form to act as a stimulant. That alone is sufficient to deter dealers from calling for much additional stock from first hands especially as yards are well filled, and there is also a further cause for indifferent demand in the quiet but persistent manner in which agents continue to offer "bargains." Shrewd buyers are in many cases picking up desirable parcels of "uppers," but are neglecting coarse stuff on the belief that while it may not go lower it can hardly improve to any extent, and just as well be left where it is until wanted. We quote at $16@17 for West India shipping boards; $18@27 for South American do.; $13@14 for box boards, and $16@18 for extra do.

Yellow Pine appears to be in very good stock especially as some additions have recently been made, and the general demand has much the old uncertain form. There is the occasional call on the f. o. b. orders still to be attended to, and now and then a local customer surprises agents by opening negotiation for moderate amounts, but there is no regular or steady outlet, and about the only competition is between sellers seeking to secure the passing trade. Former figures are retained, but are more or less nominal. We quote as follows: Randoms, $17@19.50 per M; Specials, $19.50@21 do.; Green Flooring Boards, $20@22; Dry, do., do., $22@23; Siding, $20@22 do.; Cargoes f. o. b. at Atlantic ports, $18@15 for rough. and $18@20 for dressed Cargoes f. o. b. at Gulf ports, $12@14 for rough, and $20@21 for dressed.

The general unsatisfactory condition of affairs in the Southern Pine lumber market continues a matter of serious importance, and we learn that those interested have perfected an organization on the Maritime Exchange, and a committee has been appointed, consisting of Messrs. George H. Southard, Alonzo T. Decker Eben Peek, Joseph Hilton and T. F. Booth to adopt such measures as will be of benefit to the entire trade.

Hardwoods still have a demand according to quality. Carefully selected and well assorted parcels of pretty much all kinds are pretty sure to meet attention, and the higher the grade the surer the sale, as cost is not so much an element with many buyers as the condition of the supply they handle. Medium and poorer sorts, however, drag somewhat nominal in value and generally without direct demand. We quote at wholesale rates by car load as follows: Walnut, $65@100 per M.; ash, $33@40 do.; oak, $30@55 do.; maple, $20@32.50 do.; chestnut, $25@30 do.; cherry, $50@80 do.; whitewood, $27@35 do., do.; elm, $22@25; hickory, $45@50 do.

GENERAL LUMBER NOTES.

STATE.

ALBANY MARKET.

The Argus reports for week ending November 11 as follows:

The sales, as is usual in election week, have been somewhat restricted, and there were not many buyers in market. Still a fair amount changed hands and a good trade is anticipated by the dealers for the remainder of the season of navigation. Prices are steady and there is a full and well assorted stock on the yards. The receipts are falling off steadily and will probably be light for the rest of the year. Spruce and hemlock come in slowly, as the water mills in northern New York are not running, the recent rains not reaching as far north. The stock in the district is, however, good, and all sizes can be readily obtained. Hardwoods are in fine assortment and sales of dry lumber continue from the yards. Shingles are in light stock but enough for the demand. The call for lath has been brisk and there is a fair supply on the yards.

THE WEST.

SAGINAW VALLEY.

LUMBERMAN'S GAZETTE,
BAY CITY, MICH.

Sales have been comparatively insignificant, and the weekly shipments have only been about half of the average for two or three months past. The prices of common grades of lumber are entirely suppressed, and the better grades run about $8 to $9 for shipping culls, $16 to $18 for common and $36 to $38 for uppers. Notwithstanding all the cry of depression which has been made during the entire season the shipments by water to November 1 have been heavy, aggregating 220,962,058 feet of lumber and 139,296,000 shingles. The lumber shipments have only been exceeded twice since the inception of the business. In 1881 750,288,126 feet passed out of the river, and in 1882 781,608,844 feet. It will be observed, therefore, that the demand has been heavy, although prices have been entirely unsatisfactory. The fact is that the mills have been compelled to take care of the logs forced on them by the boom companies, which necessitated the removal of the lumber at any price to make room for the cut of the mills as fast as the logs were converted into lumber. The Tittabawassee Boom Company has suspended operations, its entire output amounting to 584,000,000 feet. This is 168,000,000 in excess of the output of 1883.

Freights are still the same as reported last week, $2 to Tonawanda and Buffalo, and $1.50 to Ohio.

The Northwestern Lumberman says of the Chicago market:

There has been complaint that the dimension offered was generally of indifferent quality and gave a poor opportunity for judicious selection. Yet all has been purchased at prices a little in advance of our later quotations. Desirable green piece stuff is now selling for $8 50, an advance of 25c. a thousand on previous prices. Dry dimension brings $9 a thousand. These figures are realized with less haggling than during the early part of the fall. The fact that the season is nearing its close, while receipts are falling off and prices are advancing, makes the yard men anxious to secure further supplies while yet there is time. The conditions of the market season as it draws towards the end are somewhat disappointing to many of the yard dealers who anticipated a rush of lumber in November and a daily fleet at the market that would be unable to stand up under the pressure, but the tendency is now the other way. Yet the majority do not worry about the situation, for they hold that since there is so much lumber piled at the mills there will be plenty of dry stock in the spring that can be purchased at reasonable figures. So long as there is stock enough in the yards here to carry the trade through the winter, those who lack can sort up among their neighbors and thus get along until spring without further stocking up. Yet there are yards that have put in lumber heavily during the week, and doubtless at the late advance. Considerable stock has been bought over the lake, and a good deal here, to arrive.

The firmness and slight advance in the price of dimensions has affected inch lumber sympathetically, and while it is not necessary to advance quotations it can be safely said that desirable No. 2 stock is somewhat firmer and quicker of sale at full quotations.

The demand for furniture woods is still light, and most of what there is calls for cheap woods or low grades Every week adds to the list of failures among the furniture manufacturers. This trade has long been in a bad way, and the steady pressure of adverse business conditions is bringing about its natural effect. The lumber trade feels the loss of much of the requirement from this source, and many of the dealers have lost considerable sums of money through bad debts.

Finishing woods have sold slowly, but with the prospect that the demand will quicken very materially as the season for outside work draws to a close.

LUMBERMAN AND MANUFACTURER,
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

The news of the week, so far as trade is concerned, has been so slight that any attempt to indicate changes would be foolish. About all the indications in sight is the fact that the 5 cent rate out of Chicago has not stimulated trade with the Missouri Valley, and the want of cars remains the sole complaint of all the Mississippi river cities from St. Louis to Minneapolis. St. Louis is now shipping from 1,000,000 to 1,200,000 per day, which is as large a business as she ever done in November. and prices for all good lumber remains firm. Little more stock can be received by raft from the upper river. Some complaint is made at the Queen city of a scarcity of finishing lumber from the South, the supply of which is very low.

No change in prices is noted at any of the cities except where direct competition with Chicago forces concessions. The supply of logs is abundant at all the mills below La Crosse and many of them will run until December 1st. Stocks of lumber are not excessive. Our best judgment from all reports is that Minnesota, Wisconsin and Iowa have not more than 10 per cent. more lumber on the sticks than one year ago.

At St. Paul and Minneapolis although there is a great deal of complaint of lack of cars and dull trade, the shipments from both cities could not be increased until more cars are built. The wheat movement prevents any increase of trade. Local demand for special bill stuff continues, but such orders must now go to the country mills. Loggers are now making active preparations for the woods and every one will be there who was in last winter. Contracts for cutting logs are all made p. t.

ENGLAND.

The London Timber Trade's Journal says:

American Black Walnut—The arrivals during the past week have not been excessive, and we hear of a good trade having been done; in fact prices for some of the wood sold this week are clearly higher, and whilst the demand goes on well, and deliveries are at least on a level with imports this is not to be wondered at.

American Whitewood—The present stock of logs and cut stuff is considerable, but it goes off freely at auction, as well as privately, and it is evident that there is a growing trade in this wood.

We notice that the Prince Rupert, bringing the first cargo of California redwood imported into London, has arrived in the West India docks, and her cargo is being landed and stored in a shed in the South Dock basin, which, we understand, has been specially set apart for this cargo. We are glad that our London trade will now have an opportunity of buying this wood, which has hitherto been exclusively shipped to Liverpool and Scotland, as there is no doubt that it possesses some unusually good points, such as mellowness, absolute freedom from knots and defects, coupled with handsome sizes and capital length. We are told the cargo consists entirely of planks, and the appearance of the small portion yet out certainly confirms all the good things we have heard said about it.

METALS.—COPPER—Ingot on home account is selling slowly and moderately with indications that the distribution is confined almost exclusively to small lots as required on ordinary trade wants. In view of a great many lots going out for export the impression holds that quiet sales on export orders have been making for some time past. We quote at 13c. for Lake down to 12c. for more ordinary brands and some as low as 11½c. Manufactured Copper moderately active and ruling about steady. We quote as follows: Brazier's Copper, ordinary size, over 16 oz. per sq. foot, 22c. per lb.; do. do. do., 16 oz. and over 12 oz. per sq foot, 24c. per lb.; do. do., 10 and 12 oz. per sq. foot, 27c. per lb.; do., do., lighter than 10 oz. per sq. foot, 29c. per lb.; circles less than 84 inches in diameter, 25c. per lb.; 84 inches in diameter and over, 28c. per lb.; segment and pattern sheets, 25c. per lb.; locomotive fire-box sheets, 23c. per lb.; Sheathing Copper, over 12 oz. per sq. foot, 20c. per lb., and Bolt Copper, 23c. per lb. IRON—Scotch Pig sells only moderately, yet the demand coupled with deliveries making on contract, proves quite sufficient to exhaust the supply about as fast as offered and preserves a steady range of values all around. We quote at $19.00@22.75 per ton, according to brand, etc. American Pig has been quite dull and without important change. Stocks are well enough in hand to be fairly controlled but sellers gain no advantage and buyers indulge in no special effort to change matters. We quote $19@20.00 per ton for No. 1 X foundry, $18.00@19.00 for No. 2 X do. do., and $16.00@17.00 for gray forge. Old Rails are shaded somewhat on value but still not enough to greatly increase the business and buyers and sellers have a sort of standoff. A supply is wanted, however, and some business must eventually be reached. Scrap is quiet and about steady in tone. We quote at $16 50@17.50 for old tee rails, $18@19 for double heads, $18.00@18.50 for No. 1 wrought scrap ex ship, $19.00@19.50 for selected do., $10.50@12.00 for old car wheels, and $16.00@17.00 for crop ends. Steel Rails meet with slow, indifferent demand and the feeling is a little tame with quotations standing about as before. We quote at $28@30 per ton for heavy section. Manufactured iron has only a light uncertain outlet, with prices ruling nominally steady at old figures for most kinds. We quote Common Merchant Bar, ordinary sizes, at 1.90@2c. from store and Refined at 1.95@2.40c.; Rods, round and square 2.05@2.30c.; Bands, 2.35@2.50c.; Norway Nail Rods, 5¼@6c., and domestic sheet on the basis of 2.70@3.00c. for common Nos. 10@16. Other descriptions at corresponding prices, with 1-10c. less on large lots from cars. LEAD—Domestic Pig is not very active, and the sales seldom go beyond small jobbing parcels on which the cost stands as before, with a fairly steady tone. We quote at about 3½@3⅝c. per lb., according to brand and the size of invoice handled. The manufactures of lead are steady and quoted: Bar, 4¼@4¾c.; pipe, 5¾c.; and sheet, 6¾c., less the usual discount to the trade; and tin-lined pipe, 1bc.; block tin pipe, 40c., on same terms. TIN—Pig has shown some little irregularity and not much activity, but a steadier feeling is now claimed on better accounts from abroad. We quote at 16¾@17¼c. for Straits. 16¾@17c. for Australian, 18@18⅜c. for English, and 19@19¼c. for Banca. Tin Plates are without much animation and have shown considerable irregularity on value, but with a general tendency in buyer's favor. Supplies fair all around. We quote I. C. Charcoal, third-class assortment, $5.00@5.10 for Allaway grade, and $5.65@5 70 for Melyn grade; for each additional X add $1.25 and $1.50 respectively; I. C. Coke, $4 60@4.65 for B. V. grade; $4.80@4.82½ for J. B. grade; Charcoal terne, $4.50@4.65 for Allaway and Dean grades 14x20; $9.25@9 60 for do. 20x28; Coke terne, $4.35@4 40 for Glais grade 14x20, and $9.15@9.20 for do. 20x28—all in round lots. Spelter meets with a light and somewhat uncertain demand and the tone is a little easy. We quote at about 4½@4¾c for domestic and foreign, according to brand, quantity, etc. Sheet Zinc in light trade request and held about steady; quoted 5½@6¼c., according to quality, quantity, etc.

NAILS.—The movement has not been free and in some instances there is quite a little complaint over the condition of trade. The business, however, is at least no worse in proportion than in other lines of merchandize making proper allowance for the season and operators keep up as confident a feeling as possible. Production is said to be working into good form for closer management, and that with the assistance of holders who have pretty full stocks on which they are seeking a profit it is expected will form a basis for sustaining values fully. We quote at $2.10@2.25 per keg for 10d to 60d according to size of invoice.

PAINTS, OILS, ETC.—The general market remains slow and uninteresting. Demand simply embraces an ordinary assortment of stock such as might be required in the regular run of trade wants and buyers are rarely inclined to anticipate the future, except possibly in a small way when handling positively standard goods. Cost does not appear to undergo much variation but it would require a fuller business to fairly test values. Linseed Oil has been moderately active and closes at 53@54 for domestic and 54@56 for foreign, showing steady rates. Spirits Turpentine a shade higher and steady at 31@33 per gallon according to size of invoice.

PITCH AND TAR.—The demand shows about the usual form and volume and no new features of special interest are divulged on the general market. Values remain steady. We quote Pitch $2.25@2.30 per bbl., Tar $2.50@3.00 do., according to quantity, quality and delivery.

PLASTER.—The market for plaster feels the dull influence current, and we commence to hear more complaints than usual from manufacturers. A few export orders are occasionally filled and there is some scattering home shipping demand, but less than usual at this season, and local calls are also tame. Supplies in the meantime are ample, and under the influence of the conditions of trade prices have softened at least 5c. per bbl., with a probability that the allowance would be greater to customers making up liberal invoices. The arrivals of rock are slow and not likely to run very full during the balance of the season.

J. T. LINDSEY, Business Manager.

There has been some revival in general business during the past week. The advent of cooler weather has created a demand for coal, clothing and winter stores. Stocks look weak for the moment but the condition seemed to exist favoring a moderate rise. The coming year will see a better feeling in the stock market securities unless some unexpected catastrophe should intervene.

In the important treaty just negotiated with Spain it is provided that not only our food staples, raw cotton and wool shall be imported free into Cuba and Porto Rico, but also ship-building and house-building materials and all kinds of lumber, together with engines, machinery and tools made from metals, wagons, carriages, fine furniture, rubber goods, etc. Hence this treaty is of special interest to all dealers in building material, as, if it is confirmed by our Senate, they will get several new and lucrative markets. This treaty has followed so closely upon that made with Mexico, of a similar tenor, that other treaties will doubtless follow. Naturally the first to be negotiated will be with the South American States, and will be based on the report of the commission now in session to inquire into the practicability of some agreement between the United States and the States of South America. Next in order may come treaties with France and Germany, in both of which countries measures are on foot to tax American agricultural products unless we abate the severity of our customs duties.

It is in this way doubtless that our high duties will be relaxed to the advantage of our own manufacturers. It has been found impossible to pass any general act reducing our tariff imposts. Since the Civil War we have reduced the tariff in special particulars. We have taken the duty off quinine, tea and coffee, and have scaled the rates here and there, but every general act looking to a reduction has alarmed the protected interests which have united against a common danger and have succeeded in nullifying every enactment taking the shackles off of trade. But these treaties with different nations are all in the nature of a flank attack upon the tariff. Instead of antagonizing our protected industries they appeal to the interests of the manufacturers themselves by offering a chance at markets which they cannot find at home. But the final result will be the breaking down of many of the barriers of trade between the United States and other nations.

Berlin has come to the front as a great money-lending centre. New Yorkers in past times have been hoping that this city would become a rival of London as a great international money market, but the German capital has unexpectedly got the start of us. Bismarck has made Germany the greatest military power on earth. He deprived Russia of the fruits of her victory over the Turks. Great Britain has just been snubbed in the matter of the commerce of Congo Land, and has been forced to submit her pretensions to a Congress of the representatives of interested nations sitting at Berlin, with Germany taking the primacy. Population and wealth is always attracted to power. The Berlin of to-day, as the capital of Germany, is becoming one of the great cities of the world. A correspondent of THE RECORD AND GUIDE recently called attention to the amazing evidences of Berlin's superiority to every other capital of the world save alone London and Paris. Now comes the news of foreign loans being made in the German capital. A 5 per cent. Servian loan amounting to $2,500,000 in our money was recently called for, and the extraordinary sum of $825,000,000 was subscribed. Greece is about to establish specie payments on a gold basis and wants 170,000,000 francs to do so, but the application is made not to London or Paris, but to Berlin.

Why is there not public spirit enough among our bankers to offer to take a foreign loan? Money goes begging here at 2 per cent., when it is 4½ and 5 per cent. in London. There is no present employment for unused funds. Why should we not lend money, say to Russia, which is in the market for heavy loans to extend her railway system? That colossal power is perfectly sound and so careful of its credit that the English and French owners of her bonded debt were promptly paid all through the Crimean war. A foreign loan negotiated in our market would be a splendid advertisement for this country, and of course would pay better than investments in our own national securities. This matter ought to be discussed in the directors' rooms of the banks in Wall street.

To defray the extra expenses of the Soudan campaign the British government has added a penny in the pound to the income tax already in force. It is surprising that this tax does not exist in this country. It is by far the most equitable of any form of taxation. The income any person is in receipt of represents the benefit he derives from the economic forces of the community. Courts, jails, armies and navies exist to protect the rights of property and property should pay according to its means, which is best shown from the income derived from investments. Under our present system real estate bears all the burdens. Owners of vast fortunes based on personal property escape "scot free." The owner of $20,000 worth of realty pays more for the support of the government than does any of our great capitalists, such as Jay Gould or Wm. H. Vanderbilt. There are grave objections against taxing personal property but an income tax is equitable and should be levied to lighten the burdens of real estate owners.

Lower Wages.

The liquidation in wages in the return for all services and labor has fairly begun. In the dry-goods district there will be a general reducing of salaries and many clerks and bookkeepers will be thrown out of employment. For some time past factory operatives have been required not only to accept a smaller compensation but to submit to a reduction of the time in which they are employed. This movement is becoming general. The coming year will see the great army of the unemployed doubled, if not trebled, both in this country and in Europe, whilst those who are retained at work must submit to a serious reduction of their former incomes.

But these economies are not confined to the operative classes proper. The railroads are reducing their expenses, and the high officials are beginning to feel the pressure as well as the men working on the lines. President King, of the Erie road, not only accepts $25,000 a year in lieu of the $40,000 charged by his predecessor, but has announced his intention of cutting down the high salaries which that road has always paid to its unnecessarily large staff of officers. Other roads will be forced, by public opinion and the demands of their stockholders, to reduce the perquisites of their principal officers, as well as the wages of the working force on the lines.

The time has come when all engaged in the building trade should reduce the wages of their employes. There must be no sentiment about the matter. During the busy times through which we have passed the bricklayers, stone masons, painters and house finishers have by means of co-operative effort in their trade unions held employers at their mercy; the latter were single-handed and the trade unions used their power mercilessly. The employers will from this time forth have the upper hand, and they will not hesitate to be as regardful of their own interests as the laborers were of theirs. With a period of liquidation on hand and the general trade of the country in a desperately bad state, the trades unions insisted upon the highest wages and the shortest hours of work. They were warned that they were killing the building business and cutting their own throats, but while they had the power they used it regardless of consequences. They will now be made to suffer for their folly. Everything in the way of building material is now cheap. We have reached the lowest point for bricks, lumber, etc., known in many years. The one item in which there has been no rebate is labor; but that must yield as all others have yielded, and be content with a smaller return. The quicker the situation is accepted the better it will be all around.

We are not among those who look upon a general reduction of wages to the lowest point as a desirable thing in itself. On the contrary we regard it as an almost unmixed evil. The working class is the great consuming class; when its compensation is cut down to the lowest point every business interest suffers. Individual employers are naturally anxious to get their work done at the lowest possible rate, but a moment's consideration must show them that if the great consuming class is impoverished by inadequate wages or no employment at all, that every business interest receives a vital blow. Let us dwell on this matter for a moment. With our present population there ought to be at least 12,000,000 of wage receivers, men, women and children. Let us suppose that in prosperous times the average income would be $15 per week; but hard times come, production is checked, many are thrown out of employment, there are fewer days of labor, and the sum paid to the working classes then averages say $5 weekly less per capita. This makes $60,000,000 a week, and over $3,000,000,000 in the year. This vast sum is withdrawn from active retail trade in the course of one year, and with what results? Bankruptcies, reduced rents, cutting off of profits, the distress of every one engaged in all the multifarious employments of life; the rich and the poor alike suffer. Other things being equal high wages mean prosperous times and low wages the opposite, for it should always be remembered that the working classes proper comprise some 94 per cent. of the whole community.

But individual employers cannot afford to overlook their own interests, they must reduce wages, or they will be distanced by their competitors. Other employers will take advantage of the situation, but there should be no illusions on this subject. There is a period of distress right ahead of us. Nature has been bountiful, it has given us splendid crops, the warehouses of the world are filled with cheap goods, but the money supply has been cut off, temporarily at least, and all classes save alone those who are wealthy must pass through a period of acute suffering. This will be true not only of this country but of every civilized nation. These views will not be acceptable to sanguine people but it is well sometimes to look at the dark side of things as it has a sobering effect in a community disposed like ours to be over-hopeful.

St. James' Church.

The new edifice building for this parish, at the northeast corner of Madison avenue and Seventy-first street, occupies a plot of about 75 feet on the avenue by 125 feet on the street. The material is rough-faced brown stone, with wrought-work of the same material tooled. Mr. R. H. Robertson is the architect.

We have heretofore noted the peculiarity of arrangement by which the church first attracts attention. The chancel is at the avenue end of the building which is also the west end, and "orientation" is reversed into occidentation, not for ecclesiastical but for architectural reasons. This brings the main entrance to the church to a porch at the eastern end of the street front, with a subordinate entrance alongside of the chancel, at the base of the square tower which occupies the corner of the site. The main feature of the end is thus not the usual central doorway but a semicircular apse, with its roof abutting upon the gabled wall which is presumably pierced within by the chancel arch. At one side of this central feature is the main tower, not yet completed; at the other a turret of moderate dimensions, polygonal at the base and round above, the transition being effected by means of a heavily-moulded offset. To the left of this turret is a low building serving some subordinate purpose, the lower story of which consists of a loggia of three pointed openings springing from polygonal piers, with quasi-capitals of a band of carved foliage. The story above is low, lighted by one square-headed opening, and the little building is completed by a low gable bearing a sunken rosette. Behind and above this appears the clerestory of the church.

The main tower promises to be an impressive object. The lower stage on the avenue front is pierced by a large pointed doorway admirably detailed in early Gothic, the arch of two orders with corresponding shafts in the jambs and broad voussoirs with the extrados emphasized by a hood mould. On the side the space corresponding to the doorway has three shafted lancets. A strong offset separates this basement from the shaft of the tower. Only the first stage of this is as yet completed. It is a tall story pierced on each visible side with two long lancets, which serve to emphasize the massiveness of the wall, while the angles are reinforced by heavy roll mouldings, each of which disappears at the base behind the displayed symbol of an Evangelist or grotesque to that effect. The treatment of this part of the tower recalls the Lombard Romanesque in its massiveness and also in the front employed, though it avoids the uncouth and unarchitectural employment of "porch pillars on the lion resting" and converts the symbolical beasts, which are extremely well designed and carved, into really architectural ornaments.

The inner angle of the tower above the aisle is rather superfluously masked by an attached turret, which was scarcely needful to conceal a juncture which it would do no harm to show, and to which it is difficult from an outside view to assign any more practical function. The side itself is of four bays, each, in the aisle wall, of three simple pointed arches, the simplicity of which is not improved by the introduction of wooden tracery into the heads. The division between the bays is marked by shallow pilaster-like buttresses. Over each bay in the aisle wall is a corresponding bay in the clerestory, a single opening under a long lintel which is continued as part of the cornice, a simple arrangement which is architecturally effective and promises abundant light for the interior. Beyond these bays comes a gabled building, which would be a transept but that it terminates the church, which is in front a continuation of the aisle wall, and along the side of which the clerestory is continued. The porch at the base of this is formed by a gable supported on two pairs of columns and filled, above the transom, with Perpendicular tracery. Above this porch is an arcade of five plain pointed windows and above this a plain rose window in the field of the gable.

The detail throughout is carefully and successfully studied, and is homogeneous and artistically pure without any effort after scholastic purity of style. We have noted the Perpendicular tracery in the lateral porch, and the Romanesque treatment of the tower-shaft. These are incongruous only from a technical point of view with the general treatment of the building, which is rather derived from early French Gothic examples than from any other source, and, among modern designers, recalls the work of Mr. Burges, which one is never unwilling to be reminded of, so vigorous it is and so picturesque without transcending the conditions of architectural work. This latter is not a common success, but in this work Mr. Robertson, we think, has unquestionably attained it. None of the detail is bad, and much is exceptionally good. Of this is the treatment of the porch on the south side, and of the doorway in the tower, the latter being especially effective in modelling. But the highest success of the work is not in detail but in mass. The flank of the church, with the terminal masses of the tower and the transept balancing each other is a sober, scholarly and effective composition, while the arrangement of masses at the east end is full of piquancy and picturesqueness and fully justifies the unusual disposition. From any point of view, the relation of the projecting apse with the gabled wall to which it is attached, and to the higher gable which rises behind the first, and to the flanking members, the tower and the turret, forms a harmonious composition, the life and spirit of which in no way derogates from its sobriety and repose. We do not know a more successful and attractive parish church among the hundreds in New York.

Our Prophetic Department.

OPERATOR—I understand that you are disposed to look hopefully upon the stock market. While rather blue about the general trade of the world you judge, I hear, that Wall street will be happy in the near future, and that it may look for the usual January rise.

SIR ORACLE—Yes, the outlook so far as stocks are concerned has seemed to me hopeful, due to three causes. First, the low figures brought about by the liquidation of three years. Second, the stimulating effects of gold importations, and, third, the fact that the railroads are about to move the greatest corn crop ever grown in this country. Now that we have had frost corn will soon become marketable, and as the farmers are in want of money they will send it to market as speedily as possible. Then it must be remembered that the green corn has been fed to hogs and cattle for over six weeks past, and that the supplies of provisions and lard will necessarily increase from this time forth. The wheat movement has been an immense one since harvest, the greatest ever known; but it has been sold at unremunerative prices, corn, provisions and lard, however, at anything like present prices give the farmers a splendid profit, and as they are necessitated to sell, the railroads will have all they can do in marketing these profitable products.

OPERATOR—So the good old days are coming back again, are they, and we shall have a boom in railroad securities?

SIR O.—I said nothing of the kind. Corn, provisions and lard will be important factors in giving business to the railroads, but other conditions which were operative from 1879 to 1881 are absent. That was a season of hope, when new enterprises were started and old businesses enlarged. New tides of emigration set in, and everything conspired to add to the receipts of the railways; but now business is depressed—there are no new enterprises, and old establishments are doing less work. The great corn crop of this year only partially makes up for the loss in general business. We have had an immense wheat movement, yet the wheat-carrying roads show a heavy falling off in receipts compared with last year, this being due to the depression in all other business. Corn is a bulkier and more profitable crop to handle, as it is carried for short distances and subject to local rates; hence it will make a better showing than the wheat movement, but in all the other items of railway patronage there will be a falling off. The autumn has been so late that the movement of corn will be delayed, but Wall street discounts every good as well as every bad influence of the market, and hence I expect to see a better feeling in stocks, unless—

OPERATOR—Unless what?

SIR O.—Well, there are ominous rumors respecting a certain great operator, one of the greatest in the street. If he should be forced to liquidate there is no crop movement that would prevent a partial panic in the market.

OPERATOR—I think I know to whom you allude, but is not his securities in the hands of banks, trust companies and money lenders whose interest it will be to maintain prices so as to get at least the face value of their collaterals?

SIR O.—Such were the influences which saved this operator last May, but I understand that since then the banks and trust companies have put themselves into a position of perfect independence of any of the street magnates. The presumed embarrassment of this great operator is what now stands in the way of a fair advance in prices.

OPERATOR—To change the subject, I see that the canvass of the electoral vote has just been completed, and that your prediction of the vote of New York and Kings County, to be found in THE RECORD AND GUIDE of November 1st, proves surprisingly accurate. You said that Blaine would poll over 90,000 votes in this city, and that Cleveland would have between 15,000 and 16,000 the advantage in Kings County. According to the official return Blaine had 90,095 votes, while Cleveland's plurality in Kings County was 15,749.

SIR O.—It was not much more than a good guess, for the Independent Republican vote for Cleveland was larger than I thought it would be in this neighborhood, while the Irish and laborers' vote, which I thought would be cast for Butler, was at the last moment turned over to Blaine. It is a risky business to try and forecast figures about elections in this country. I said on that same occasion that I thought Blaine had a slight advantage over Cleveland, but there were four factors, each of little account in itself, that turned the scale. The printers who were boycotting the Tribune must have influenced over 1,000 voters against its candidate for the presidency. Dr. Burchard's unfortunate alliterative phrase lost Blaine several thousand votes. The Field-Gould-Sage dinner at Delmonico's also hurt Blaine, and then the Stalwarts in the centre of the State must have influenced over 5,000 votes against him. Were it not for these four minor matters Blaine would have carried New York by a good working majority and would now be President-elect of the United States.

OPERATOR—Do you regard the result as unfortunate for business?

SIR O.—Well, you know I have always said that Blaine's tariff scare was a false issue. There is no danger, not the slightest, that any protective duties will be removed while Mr. Cleveland is President. There will never be any serious change in our tariff until our leading manufacturers demand lower duties on raw material, so that they can manufacture cheaper and compete in foreign markets for the trade of the world. But, apart from that issue, I am inclined to believe that business will not revive because of anything the Democratic party can do while in partial power. I use the word partial because the Senate will be Republican during the four years of Mr. Cleveland's term. We are living in a period of liquidation and business depression. The traditionsand instincts of the Democratic party will be in the direction of economy. They will cut down expenses in every direction, and thus add to the general distress. The Republican Senate will stand in the way of a wholesale distribution of patronage among Democrats. President Cleveland himself is pledged to stand by the civil service rules, which will keep the bulk of the present office-holders in their places. The Democratic House, which holds the purse strings, will strike at the Republican office-holders by reducing all government appropriations. River and harbor improvements will suffer, our navy and seaboard defences will be neglected and nothing will be done by government aid to stimulate our foreign commerce. In other words, the government will be a do-nothing one, worse even than that. It will depress every industry its action affects. It would have been different were Mr. Blaine chosen.

OPERATOR—Suppose we have four years of hard times, what will be the effect on the politics of the country?

SIR O.—A reorganization of parties, I think, both North and South and the rise of an organization favorable to great public works and to the issue of unlimited paper money by the general government. The Supreme Court has decided that Congress has the power to emit paper money and make it legal tender irrespective of its redeemability in gold or silver. The commercial world is suffering to-day from an insufficient supply of metallic money, due to the demonetization of silver and the large falling off in the production of gold. The distress now experienced will be cumulative and the natural reaction from gold mono-metallism will be unlimited paper issues which the astounding decision of the Supreme Court permits. The Greenback party polled a small vote at this election, but it promises to be a mighty power in the next.

The Field family are, it seems, largely interested in a project for running the "L" trains by electricity instead of steam. So far all uses of electricity either as a motor or an illuminant have been more costly than the agents previously employed; but it is claimed that while the present locomotives on the Manhattan road consume fifteen pounds of coal for every horse power they furnish, the stationary engine which will supply the electrical force will consume only two pounds of coal per hour, a saving of thirteen pounds of coal for every horse power. It seems, however, that this motive power is to be controlled by a company with a stock of a million dollars. The Manhattan Company now has its own motive power, but if electricity is used they must purchase it of the Field family and their associates. In England they have reduced the waste of coal to a minimum. In the steamer "Bergos," the engines of which are on what is termed the triple compound system, from the fact that the steam is expanded in three cylinders in succession, the consumption of coal is only half an ounce for one ton of cargo per mile. To make this understandable this represents the waste of power in burning an ordinary sheet of note paper. Just think of transporting a ton of freight for a mile with the energy disengaged by burning an ordinary letter! The suspicion is natural that the electric motor, if employed, will be more successful in transferring the receipts of the Manhattan Company into the pockets of the Field family than in making the stock of Manhattan valuable.

Home Decorative Notes.

—Sash curtains of Tussah silk are very elegant; they should be trimmed with lace or embroidery.

—Bedsteads are now ornamented by a large bow of ribbon, of any shade corresponding to the furnishings of the room, placed on the upper left hand post.

—A very ornamental brush broom case is in the shape of a guitar, the covering is of royal blue plush, the strings are formed by tinsel cord and fastened by means of gilt-headed nails, a diagonal band of plush decorated with the nasturtium vine and flower extends across the lower part of the guitar, through which the broom is slipped; the highly decorative arrangement is suspended to the wall by satin ribbon.

—Very attractive bath rugs are made of crimson and white felt painted in oils; lustra painting is admirable for these squares.

—Ornamental arches of wire trellis and many beautiful supports for vines cultivated indoors are now offered.

—Fire screens in brass, plush, silk and peacock feathers are shown in square and round shapes.

—Salad forks and spoons have handles of cut glass with silver bowls.

—Mirrors for the centre of the dinner table are now surrounded by a circular trough for flowers.

—Turkish silk handkerchiefs with tasselled ends are used as table covers on the small mahogany tables now in vogue.

—Stamped Chinese and Japanese crapes are much in favor for sash curtains.

—One of the prettiest of olive and pickle sets in cut-glass makes a butterfly when properly arranged; the olives fill the dish, which forms the body, and has perfect jewel of glass for the head, and the pickles are laid in the outspread wings.

—Bedroom curtains for winter are made very full and heavy without being looped back, in order to give a light effect to the room; Swiss curtains are placed outside of heavy woolen ones.

—Designs in growing plants have taken the place of hanging baskets, which have gradually declined in favor; large pottery shells shaped like the conch shell are filled with ferns and swung by chains these are very handsome and much more graceful than the clumsy rustic baskets, which are very awkward to handle in watering.

—Opalescent glass shades are used on handsome metal lamps.

—Quartette or nested tables in papier mache are handsome and convenient as they can be folded up when not in use to the size of a small vase stand.

—French sash curtains of guipure or muslins, with lace ruffled edge, are much used; they are placed next the window, thereby hiding the ever-attractive Holland shades and adding brightness and attractiveness to the outside of the house.

—At a recent dinner the menu was engraved in solid and artistically-carved silver card cases; the ladies received gold corsage pins, and the table decorations were of flowers and autumn leaves; the plate cards were hand-painted natural leaves tied with cherries.

—Golden spiders decorate a charming set of after-dinner coffee spoons.

—Many evidences of the taste which calls for the high artistic efforts in decoration on faience, tiles and miscellaneous objects in paste, is shown in dealers' collections of this season; a very fine display of art goods is now offered by Gilman & Collamore, of Union square and Sixteenth street. The famous Thomas Webb & Son's pottery sends out some new tints, pilgrim bottles in dragons' blood and canary are lovely, with rose bowls and odd vases in other colors; a new feature of the Royal Worcester is that having a yellow satiny ground, with decorations in relief in pencilled gold; nothing more beautiful can be imagined.

—Ornamental iron and brass andirons of very old designs are used in dining rooms.

—For fruit and cake dishes some specially pretty designs are shown, shallow amber glass bowls set in a base of silver leaves with twisted silver handles are used for fruit or sauces, cake baskets are all made low and oddly shaped; the "baking dishes" are of silver with a stone china plate fitting closely inside, into which chicken or any hot meats can be put and remain hot; many novelties in silverware, glass and gold are constantly being received by Reed & Barton, of Union square and Sixteenth street.

—Each country has its specialty in the fabrication of playthings. We must admit that England excels in the manufacturing of rocking horses, toy engines, steamboats and mechanical toys; the French surpass in the making of dolls and dolls' dresses; the variety of these dolls is something marvellous; there is the lady doll that walks, plays upon the piano, dances, rides and drives, and has a Worth wardrobe; the baby doll that is always to remain a pet baby, calls "papa" and "mamma," and will cry if pinched; the large singing doll is the latest triumph of mechanism. Among the novelties introduced this Christmas season, and which will especially delight the hearts of little girls, is a tile stove, eighteen by twenty inches wide, with ornamental brass rods and fitted with all the apparatus for cooking; a small oil lamp furnishes heat, and water can be heated or small pies baked as well as on the kitchen range; it is an all-important question as the holiday season approaches; it is certainly well worth while to visit the mammoth toy shop of F. A. O. Schwarz and see what genius is doing in the way of helping to make children happy.

Concerning Men and Things.

Said a prominent officer of the Suburban Rapit Transit Road recenty: "The piers of the bridge over the Harlem at Second avenue, over which our road will pass, are now finished, and the structure will be proceeded with as rapidly as possible. It will probably be ready by next fall. I cannot tell when the road will be built. Our progress is slow, and we have numerous difficulties to contend with, many of the owners whose land we require proving a great stumblingblock to the progress of the undertaking. The commission to condemn lands along the route has just elected the following gentlemen to the positions vacant: Messrs. Ed. B. Fellowes, Chas. C. Leary, Thos. Cowman, John Whalen and Hugh N. Camp. The work will be continued with as much speed as the circumstances will permit of. I don't think the passing of the constitutional amendment limiting the indebtedness of cities to 10 per cent. of the assessed valuation will interfere with the appropriations for the parks in the annexed district though it may, and probably will, cause a movement for a reduction of the appropriations. This is what Mayor Edson evidently meant when he made that statement about the matter. It is not that he is opposed to the parks in the annexed district, but he feels that under the constitutional amendment the appropriations proposed will have to be cut down."

Judges Donohue and Barrett showed great good sense in not interfering with the sparring matches given at Madison Garden. We live in a pretty rough world, and it is idle to expect that the working and sporting population of a great city shall not have amusements after their own kind. Prize-fighting is brutal, no doubt, nor can we see how any cultivated lady or gentleman could take any pleasure in the "slugging" matches between Sullivan and his competitors, but refined people have no moral or legal right to impose their notions of propriety upon those whose tastes differ so widely from their own. A bloody nose, a black eye or a barked shin is a trifling matter to the rough people who form the bulk of our population. Indeed, the worst slugging match which ever took place in this city is not half so dangerous to life or limb as a baseball champion match or a contest at football. On Thanksgiving Day Yale and Princeton will have a match in this city, in which more bodily harm will be done than would be possible in a Madison Square Garden glove-fight under the supervision of the police. Yet the young collegians who are contestants in the football games are drawn from the ranks of our most refined and cultivated citizens. But it will not do to say that young gentlemen may engage in dangerous physical sports while the roughs are debarred from a pastime which gives them pleasure and does no one any harm. We should rid ourselves of cant.

Then take the case of betting on race courses. We have stringent laws against this practice which are wholly inoperative. Men will lay wagers upon the result of any contest, whether it be a yachting-match, a boat-race or a strive for mastery between horses or men. It simply discredits the law generally when we keep enactments on our statute books which no one respects.

Mr. G. R. Bishop, the official stenographer of the Stock Exchange, has published a brochure proposing certain important reforms in phonography as now in use by reporters. His main idea is to abolish the dots and dashes which indicate the vowel sounds and replace them by lines and curves which are now used exclusively for the consonants. He thinks that phonography could be taught in schools under his system, that is if his reform could be carried out, of having a sign for every sound. Some of the best reporters in the country think highly of Mr. Bishop's suggestions. What a world of labor it would save if our present cumbrous system of writing could be discarded and the phonographic system substituted instead. It would save five-sixth of the time now consumed in writing and would relieve children and foreigners of the drudgery involved in spelling properly ordinary English words. We have only twenty-four letters to represent forty-two sounds, and several of these letters are silent, while others, such as A, for instauce, represents six different sounds. A perfect system of orthography would have a sign for every sound and there would be no difficulty in spelling when the word had been properly pronounced.

A Point at Law.

Editor RECORD AND GUIDE:

I sued a tenant in the Third District Court and on the return day I paid to the clerk of the court $3.50 for trial fee. When the case was called a lawyer put in a technical defence, and the same was adjourned for two days. On the day of adjournment the lawyer for the defendant did not again appear to defend, and the judge after the second call of the calendar, told me to take an inquest, which I did, and got judgment. I afterwards applied to the clerk of the court and requested him to return me $3 of the $3.50 I had paid for trial fee, as no trial was had, only an inquest. He refuses to refund, saying a trial was had. Am I entitled to have the $3 returned, and if so, in the event of his again refusing, to whom must I apply for redress? Yours, respectfully, GOLGOTHA.

P. S.—The suit was a civil suit for rent, and the amount was $83.34. The lawyer's verbal defence was a "general denial," and demand for bill of particulars.

ANSWER.—We understand that our correspondent, when he took out a summons, did not also have ready a written complaint sworn to by him; if he did file such a complaint at that time and had a copy of it served on the defendant with the summons, then, as the answer put in by the defendant's lawyer was only oral, our correspondent ought to have claimed, and would have obtained, a judgment "by default" that very first day before he left the court room. No adjournment would have been granted, but assuming, as we have said, that the complaint was oral only, then the answer could be oral, and consequently our correspondent had to prove his case when it came up on the adjourned day. This was a trial and not a default, and the clerk had a right to keep the $3; and our correspondent has now got that $3 included in his judgment besides the rent he sued for; and in addition to that our correspondent has got $12 more "costs" given him by law after a trial, where the amount was over $50. If he has not got it it is because he did not claim his rights.

The World of Business.

The Business Situation.

The large percentage of the business public who long after the depression set in refused to admit that there was anything more than a temporary lull in the prosperity of the country, and who have from time to time resented predictions of further shrinkage in trade and decline in prices, have within a few months yielded to the stern logic of facts, and are in a temper now to look the situation squarely in the face. They have not only confessed that affairs are seriously out of gear, but have adapted their own business to the state of things they find around them. This is a wise surrender and will enable them to better cope with any difficulties that may be coming. Well, what is the situation? If ordinary evidences can be depended on, it is bad. In the stock market Jay Gould, who four months ago was unquestionably very near bankruptcy, has, with the assistance of some of the ablest men there, raised the prices of certain securities much above their natural level, and himself holds large quantities of these securities on margins. Those influences on which he has counted to help him have failed to come to his support. He is loaded with stocks, and there is no market for any considerable quantity of them at present prices. Operators whose interests lie in the other direction see his predicament and are determined to force liquidation. Meanwhile the outside public have lost their confidence in the securities of Wall street and are all the time giving up their investments. And it is difficult to see anything in the near future that will counteract these influences. It is true that Gould has been in similar plights before and has come out of them a solvent man, but his fortune has been greatly impaired, those who had cast their lot with him have been heavy losers, and the markets have been terribly demoralized. It is easy to see that if liquidation is forced, as it now threatens to be, there will be sad havoc in Wall street. It by no means follows that the trouble would extend to the merchandise markets. They are on a pretty good basis, and they would suffer only from the temporary impairment of confidence. And the money market has been put in such shape that there ought not to be anything like a panic there; yet with all the depression that now exists the recovery of trade would be retarded.—Chicago Tribune.

What the Democrats Won't Do.

The Democratic party will go into power in March after twenty-three years of dry husks. It will have the presidency and one House of Congress; a Republican Senate can veto President and Representatives. This is well. If the Democrats, flushed and insolent with victory, should attempt hasty, sweeping, partisan or revengeful legislation, a power is there to watch and checkmate. It is a guarantee to business against hasty and crude changes. The commercial and financial problems that will confront the new party in power, too, will prove a sobering and steadying influence by their seriousness and importance to the country. The administration at the very outset will have to meet the perplexing currency and revenue problem which the Republicans for years have worried over and refused to act upon. If the tariff be reduced there is danger of commercial disturbances; the situation is delicate, and the addition of risks of foreign competition, if really fanciful, may precipitate a crisis. This sensitiveness will be likely to make itself felt in the White House and Capitol. If the revenues be not reduced, the treasury surplus must continue to accumulate and the bonds melt away from under the national banks. This will force on the party the national bank vs. greenback question. The horns of this dilemma are (1) to enlarge and make more profitable national bank circulation—a very unpopular and undemocratic resort; (2) To issue more greenbacks in place of bank notes; (3) To contract the circulating medium and probably precipitate a smash. The first will be fought by the people; the second by the capitalists; the third by all. The probability is that after a long jangle nothing will be done, and affairs will be allowed to drift and adjust themselves. The party wants more than four years of power; a taste of that intoxicant to men twenty years abstaining will but create a greater thirst for more, and the politician's way to perpetuate power is to do nothing. In the matters of control of corporations, civil service reform, postal telegraph, forfeiting fraudulent land grants, etc., the same Fabian policy may be expected and for the same reasons. The Democratic House may, indeed, make some valiant records on these abuses if it is certain that the Republican Senate will step in and prevent the reform—as it has done before. It is not likely the House and Executive will really be very unwilling to be defeated on any measure that shall invite the hostility of the financial and corporate powers that be. We expect four years of wrangling and nothing more.—Merchants' Review.

Our Export Flour Trade.

The almost unprecedented activity of the larger wheat-flour mills throughout the country during the past two or three months, during a period of great depression among almost all manufacturing industries, is sufficient to attract attention. An examination into the development of our export trade in wheat-flour reveals details respecting America's first place as a flour maker which point to the following conclusions:

First—That the consumption of bread, in this country at least, has not declined, notwithstanding the relatively high price (as compared with the cost of flour), demanded by bakers.

Second—That more American-made flour is going abroad than ever, and at a time, too, when shipments of cotton have been popularly regarded as the only increasing export of a domestic staple.

Third—That British millers are unable yet to compete successfully with flour from the United States, notwithstanding their wide range of wheats from which to select a combination for grinding, of which we on this side have heard so much of late; and Fourth—That the increasing annual shipments from the United States of wheat as flour bids fair, at the present rate of increase, to reverse the proportions (in value) now held by our wheat and flour shipments abroad.—Bradstreet's.

Southern Loans.

New York and foreign capitalists are beginning to turn their attention to the farm lands of the South as a valuable class of investments. The cloud which has settled as dense as lead upon railroad securities has created an inquiry for any and all available substitutes, and Southern lands are to some extent attracting attention. The increasing wealth of the South, the reliability of the staple Southern crops for regular annual returns, the high rates of interest obtainable, and the full margins of security, with the whole business directly under control of the leaders, and free from Stock Exchange rascality, are naturally considered strong points in favor of such investments. It is said that one New York firm has placed $7,000,000 of such loans in the West and South in the last few years with English and Scotch capitalists, and that many more millions have been handled by others in the same way. The plan of these large lenders is a long investment at 7 to 8 per cent. on 40 per cent. of the value of the property, but excluding the value of the buildings, unless the latter include industrial plants. The income is of course the prize in view, always providing, of course, that the principal of the loan is made secure, and as it is provided that this interest shall be made payable annually at the New York office, the collection is said to be about as regular and inexpensive as the collection of coupons on the bonds of railroad corporations, especially in the last two years. When it is remembered that the interest paid on the best class of corporate securities is 2 or 3 per cent. less than the proposed rates on farm loans, the scheme appears to have evident merits for capitalists seeking long investments.—Courier-Journal.

The Cotton Outlook.

Ellison, the eminent English statistician, estimates that American manufacturers will require in the current trade year, for purposes of current consumption and for bringing up their depleted stock to a moderately normal stage, 2,030,000 bales of American cotton. This estimate includes 80,000 bales for Canada and Mexico and 1,950,000 bales for the United States. England and the Continent will require 4,220,000 bales. This makes a total of 6,250,000 bales required by America and Europe from the crop of the United States. Statisticians of the best repute, including the National Cotton Exchange, estimate the crop at 5,725,000 to 5,800,000 bales. The Department of Agriculture estimated the crop in October on then existing conditions at 6,250,000 bales; but its November estimates, according to the press summary, avoids definite expressions and discards the use of numerals in stating its conclusions, saying instead that the "indications point to a somewhat larger crop than in 1883." Whether "somewhat larger" means 10,000 bales or 100,000 bales that deponent sayeth not. The crop of 1883 amounted to 5,714,000 bales in round numbers. Ellison says that an independent rise in prices may be looked for if the crop of the United States should amount to 6,250,000 bales, "while a moderate advance would not be prevented, although the crop should reach 6,400,000 to 6,500,000 bales, as even that supply would leave stocks smaller than twelve months ago" Since this was written cotton has advanced in Liverpool 5-16d. per pound. The lowest point touched there this season was ⅛d. per pound higher than the maximum of 1878, reached soon after the failure of the Bank of Glasgow. The present rise, though still leaving cotton at rather a low figure, might probably be accepted as discounting a supply equal to Ellison's estimate of consumption, but as the foregoing citations show, the supply will probably fall short of the computed requirements by at least 450,000 bales. The significance of the deficiency in the crop of 1884 is of course materially re-enforced by the succession of two small crops in two years. The rise in European and American markets recently is not due alone to the influence of small crop estimates. This fact was steadily hardening the tone of the market, as spinners were acting on the theory that at or about current prices it was eminently safe to stock up freely; but negotiations looking to peace between China and France, and an improving tendency in the English goods trade, gave the signal for such a brisk competition as to produce a handsome and rather rapid rise.—Courier-Journal.

The Biggest Thing Yet.

An extraordinary invention, the proprietory rights of which have already been acquired by a powerful Scottish syndicate, was described here at the last meeting of the Balloon Society of Great Britain. It aims at the extraction of every atom of gold contained in those enormous masses of refuse quartz thrown away at every point where the miner operates, because hitherto science has afforded him no means of profitably extracting it. The inventor, Mr. Henry R. Cassel, of New York, performs, by the aid of electricity and such simple elements as common salt water and lime, the very same operations which are employed by nature to first impregnate the waves of the sea with the auriferous chlrome, and subsequently to deposit it in crevices and rocks for the miner of a later epoch to find it in veins and lodes. In the course of the beautiful process the most rebellious ore, when triturated in conjunction with the salt, the lime and the water, decomposed and recomposed in a different relation by the injection of currents of electricity, is made to give up 95 per cent. of its charge of gold, which is found in a very fine powder clinging to the positive pole of the battery. The cost even on a comparatively small scale of working has been demonstrated to be so small in comparison with the value of the gold obtained that the formation of a limited company with large capital and directed by a number of commercial magnates has been definitively resolved upon.—English paper.

Lloyd's.

From the English papers we learn that the society "Lloyd's" celebrated its fiftieth anniversary on the 21st ult., the occasion being marked by a dinner, at which were assembled all the principal members. Perhaps no other society or institution in the world is better known, and yet more imperfectly understood outside of certain circles, than Lloyd's. Its origin, constitution and business are to a great majority of people as a sealed book. Its name has been carried to every quarter of the globe, but people have heard it without knowing with what manner of affairs it should be coupled. Lloyd's is a society whose aims and purposes cannot be described in a line, but concerning which a possible understanding may be had from the following explanation: Under its auspices information is collected for underwriters, that is to say, those who insure ships, and this is published at stated intervals in what is known as "Lloyd's Register." In addition the society undertakes the survey of ships being built, and prescribes certain rules for building them, which entitles the ships to classification in its "Register." The history of Lloyd's is a chequered one. In 1692 the "Register of Shipping" was supplied at a coffee house kept by a man by the name of Lloyd, in London, and this was really the germ of the present "Register." In 1770 the underwriters and others connected with shipping formed themselves into a society and a few years after began to issue a "Register." In 1778, by adopting a style of classification which favored Thames-built ships to an outrageous extent, and by absolutely refusing to classify foreign-built ships taken as prizes, the society assisted a competitor to its feet, which in 1799 began to issue the "New Register Book of Shipping." The result was that both societies came to grief. The present register book came into existence in 1834. The production of a register such as Lloyd's now issue involves a vast amount of labor, as may be inferred from the fact that the shipping built under the society's inspection last year amounted to no less than 848 vessels with an aggregate tonnage exceeding 1,100,000. Out of the total number of merchant vessels built in the United Kingdom between 1879 and 1883, about 90 per cent. on an average have been surveyed and classed by Lloyds. In 1834 the society had but sixty-three surveyors; it has now 175.

The Depression in British Shipping.

The depression in freights has had its natural effect of checking building, and on the Wear, Tyne, Clyde and Mersey much distress exists among the operatives. And as to how the depression has come about there is no mystery. The simple fact is, that the supply of ships has outstripped the demand. From 1879 to 1883 our steam tonnage increased from 2,508,102 tons to 3,725,229 tons, or nearly 50 per cent.; and though sailing ships decreased, there was a net growth in the efficiency of our mercantile marine of 41 per cent. Commerce has not grown at the same rate, and for the time the supply of ships is in excess of requirements. The result is painful to all concerned. But we must not overlook the obvious fact that the depression is essentially temporary in its nature. This is the most agreeable feature in the case, and fundamentally the most important. If our supremacy in shipbuilding were being wrested from us, and we were standing idle because others could do the work better, we should not be able thus to console ourselves. Some years ago the Thames was one of our principal shipbuilding rivers. Dull times came, orders were hard to get, strikes occurred. These things were but symptoms that London was being beaten by other places more favorably circumstanced for building iron ships. The decline in the industry was not temporary, but permanent. The superficial facts are now the same n the North—few orders, little or no profit, the workpeople uffering—but the explanation is happily radically different. We are not being ousted from our position of being the best ship builders in the world; we have simply overbuilt ourselves. Suffering there will be while the dark days last, but we shall pass through them, and shall again be busy building ships which will yield their owners fair returns. So much for the causes of the stagnation. And now a word as to the conditions of its removal. Shipbuilding will not revive until freights generally rise; and they will rise from an increase of trade or a decrease of available tonnage, or both. If we were to rely on the increase in trade only, the recovery would probably be slow, but the inroads of wear and tear and sea peril work to the same end. It becomes, therefore, interesting to see what our annual losses are. The number and tonnage of vessels registered in the United Kingdom returned as lost, broken up, etc., were:

			Tons.

That is to say, our losses, on an average, at sea and from wear and tear, are equal to one vessel of a thousand tons register every day, or about 5 per cent. of our total tonnage in the course of the year. Any out-turn of our building yards (added to our importations of foreign-built ships) in excess of this quantity increases the tonnage afloat; on the other hand by so much as the out-turn falls short of this quantity is our fleet diminished. We still import some new ships, chiefly wooden vessels built in British North America. Those built in the United Kingdom alone (exclusive of ships built for foreigners) in the last few years have been as follows:

	Ships.	Tons.

And it is to a decrease in these larger figures during the next year or two that we must look to bring about the desired equilibrium between ships and cargoes. Even if investors were willing to find the money for new ships, continued extensive building would have the effect of postponing the return of a healthy state of things.—London Economist.

The Erie Canal's Free System.

It has not been long since the belief was current that the gain of the transportation question was all upon the side of the railways, and that the quicker transportation of the trunk lines at rates that are nearly competitive would practically render the great work of Clinton useless. But since the Erie system has been made free, this idea has lost weight The decline in the tonnage of the Erie Canal, which led New York to make the canal free of tolls, and so assume upon its general revenue the burden of superintendence and repair, was caused not so much by the competition of the railroads as the competing Canadian water route through the Welland and St. Lawrence Canals and the St. Lawrence River to the sea. Doing away with tolls has put the canal upon an equal footing with its rivals, and has done much more than was anticipated in bringing back to water transportation some of its old-time popularity. Some of the arguments that were advanced as the strongest to show why water carriage must give way, have been proven so fallacious as to cause wonder at former credulity. Among other points, it was argued that the saving of interest in the quicker transportation by rail would go far to balance the higher cost, and that the opportunity of the market would be another item of value. But it is found that during the season of moving crops, the market price for forward delivery is more than enough higher for each month to pay interest and insurance, so that there is an actual gain to the seller by the water transportation, which both saves storage and gains an advanced price. The fact that the canal boats deliver at the destination the number of bushels which they receipt for in loading, the vessel paying for the deficit, if any, while the railroads deliver whatever weighs out of the car or at the destination, the owner being obliged to stand the loss if it falls short, is another item in favor of water transportation. The present status of the question, so far as the Erie Canal is concerned, is shown in the demand for larger vessels, and a perceptible agitation upon the matter of enlarging the canal. This latter point, however, is not likely to go further than talk. The canal is wide enough and deep enough to meet all legitimate demands for some time to come.—Merchants' Review.

There seems to be no doubt that the approaching season is to be one of dullness in building operations, or, at least, that the building done will be of a modest class, as distinguished from the great and costly works which were in progress a few years ago. Some one has said that extensive strikes always indicate an approaching decline in business, and it is very probable that they do so, for two reasons, the first being that an incipient reduction in the volume of business throws a few men out of employment, and these, before packing their trunks to seek work elsewhere, naturally try first what effect loud talking will have in bettering their condition, and their companions, made apprehensive for the same reasons, are easily led into the violent measures which they are told will cure their troubles. The second and obvious reason why strikes go before a dull season is that they produce dullness. Every strike is immediately followed by the abandonment of a certain number of building projects, and the capital which would have found investment in that way is diverted elsewhere. The great strikes of 1883 undoubtedly destroyed the prospects of hundreds of builders, architects, and workingmen in New York for many years, and the nine-hour movement of the bricklayers this summer, with the foolish plumbers' quarrel, postponed or killed many new enterprises. The bricklayers' strike, as was to be expected, failed completely, but it is interesting to know that the claim of the men, that they could do as much work in nine hours as in ten, was to a certain extent verified. We were told by the superintendent of an important building, who was discreet enough to be one of the first to yield to the bricklayers' demand, that his men actually laid more bricks in nine hours than they had previously laid in ten. Whether they would have done so if there had been no competition is an unsettled question, but in his case there were, of course, scores of unemployed bricklayers always near at hand, and anxious for a job, and the knowledge that their places would be filled at ten minutes' notice acted as a very lively stimulus to the powers of the men on the building. —American Architect.

St. Paul and Minneapolis are about to witness a greater building activity than in any previous year. C. H. Pratt, a wealthy capitalist, recently purchased 400 acres in St. Anthony's Park, for $170,000, on which he proposes to erect a large number of dwellings, to create in fact a suburban town. The Manitoba Railroad runs through the land. St. Paul is going ahead in the way of real estate improvements. Among the buildings shortly to be commenced is a new Roman Catholic Church and parochial school. A prominent local lumber dealer and capitalist intends, in the spring, to erect eighty-six dwelling houses, to supply a demand for comfortable accommodations at a moderate rental. The number of transfers during the preceding week were 78, the transactions a mounting to $122,050. The total building permits during the same period were 29, of a value of $21,186.

The last census of Paris shows that the city has had an increase of over two hundred and fifty thousand since 1876, and that only two hundred thousand out of its two and a quarter millions are foreign born. There are eleven thousand English and six thousand American residents.

Real Estate Department.

There has undoubtedly been more activity in real estate during the past two weeks than there was previous to the election; but this is not saying much. The conveyances show that about the usual business is being done, but speculation is absolutely dead in the market. High-priced houses and great flats are unsalable. There are some who are willing to buy well-located property in good neighborhoods where the figures are not high, but owners are unwilling to sell because of the inability to reinvest in securities which will pay as well as houses or stores at the present rentals. But the question is, will the present rents be maintained? Our own impression is that they will not, except in some favored locations. The depression in business and the reduced incomes of every one from laborer to millionaire, will make itself felt in the renting market for business property next February and for house property next spring. This is not a pleasant thing to tell to landlords and those who have large interests in real estate, but it is our business to tell the truth as far as we know it, and in this matter we but express the judgment of all clear-headed dealers and brokers in the real estate market.

Speculation always manifests itself more particularly in the price of vacant lots. Judged by this test the market is anything but buoyant, for an unimproved property at auction last week brought low figures. The bidders at these sales were not as numerous as is usually the case, but those who purchased got bargains. For investors who do not look for immediate return there is no cheaper property anywhere than vacant lots on this island. Whether times are good or bad this city is bound to grow. Its population and wealth will steadily increase. There is virtually a corner in the unimproved lots on the real estate bounded by the East, North and Harlem Rivers and New York Bay. But then prices may be lowered before they are higher.

On Thursday a lot on the southwest corner of Eighth avenue and One Hundred and Forty-eighth street, 24.11x100, was sold for $4,250, and lots adjoining for about $3,000 each. It is said that a lot on the southwest corner of Eighth avenue and One Hundred and Fifty-fifth street was sold some time ago for $9,000. Lots on Broadway, between Emerson and Isham streets, were sold for $1,050 each; lots on the same block have brought as high as $2,800 each.

The Conveyances recorded during the past week compared with the corresponding week last year show an increased number of transactions, but a much smaller expenditure. In other words our figures, week by week, show that while there is more buying and selling than there was last year, it is either for lower prices or a less costly character of buildings are being traded in. The Mortgages both in numbers and in amounts average about the same as last year. The following are the figures:

Contractors' Notes.

The Aldermen on Thursday authorized the Health Department to procure two steam engines in open market, costing not more than $2,000 each, for the Hospital Building at North Brother Island; and gave the Commissioner of Public Works power to spend not more than $4,000 in fitting up the Governor's room in the City Hall without advertising for bids. Room No. 1 in the New Court House was assigned to the Surrogate, and the Commissioner of Public Works was authorized to fit it up for him.

Bids will be received by the Commissioner of Public Works until Wednesday, November 26, and Saturday, November 29, at 12 o'clock, for building sewers and regulating, grading, etc.

Sealed proposals will be received at the Hall of the Board of Education, corner of Grand and Elm streets, by the School Trustees of the Twenty-third Ward, until 4 o'clock P. BUILDING MATERIAL MARKET.

BRICKS.—Scarcely a feature has changed on the market for Common Hards since our last. There is the same moderate and uneventful condition of trade, neither buyer nor seller gaining a positive advantage or making any direct effort to do so, and no new influences arising. The appearance of snow and generally colder weather suggests the rapid approach of the time when the chances for a closing of navigation become stronger, but this seems to be scarcely talked of, and the "don't care" sort of feeling among all classes of operators is quite prominent. Cost, too, keeps just within the former average range, making a showing of steadiness on the finer parcels of Haverstraws, for which the average top rate is $6.25 per M, while on other kinds there is occasional moderate fluctuations, according to momentary influences. Available supplies fluctuate somewhat, a close sale occasionally taking place, and again more or less surplus remaining to carry over, but everything seems to be well in hand, and a few cargoes one way or the other are without much influence. Dealers now and then buy for stock, but it is claimed only when they have ample time to handle purchases, and may happen to have cut into previous accumulations. Consumption is showing slight irregularity, and appears to be falling away, as there is really very little new work, and as current jobs are completed customers for brick become less.

HARDWARE.—A great deal of the business is a sort of order trade, and dull tone naturally continues to predominate. Indeed, pretty much all idea of any increase in the volume of operations is now abandoned, and dealers look for only a jobbing sort of distribution for some time to come. Stocks on hand seem to be full and well assorted, a little more so indeed than is really desirable with the end of the season approaching. Most lists are kept at old figures, but "cutting" continues to be indulged in whenever business can be hastened thereby.

LATH.—The general tone of the market has remained quite firm, with a tendency to gain if anything, as the influences favor sellers. Some additional arrivals took place, but a portion had been previously sold, and whatever there was to offer secured such prompt attention that receivers were in many cases enabled to secure customers by telephone without leaving their offices. We learn of nothing in excess of $3.25 per M, but this rate is promptly bid, and more is expected on the next sales. The principal demand comes from local dealers, but there is a little call from the Southward, and it is known that several cargoes thought to be coming here have secured customers at the Eastward at a price relatively higher than can be made on this market.

LIME.—The demand does not appear to either quicken or diminish, but has not failed to prove exhaustive against the arrivals of stock, both from the Eastward or State, and receivers generally report a steady market. Indeed the situation is considered such as to prevent and change in buyers' favor during the balance of the season.

LUMBER.—The general tendency of the market has been in sellers' favor. This is not so much due to any actual or unexpected increase of the demand or positive change in the convictions of the various classes of customers to whom the distribution is made, as to the natural influences of the season. Some points of supply are already entirely shut off, many others must soon be in the same condition, and rail shipments remain as the only means for getting stock forward. Those who have anything to offer, therefore feel that they have a certain advantage, and act and move accordingly. The gain is slow, however, and confined mainly to the upper line of quality in all cases where any noticeable advance is shown. Indeed the supply handled seems to be principally in rounding up parcels, as a large percentage of the yards are well stocked in both quantity and assortment, and there is no necessity for any unusual display of anxiety. Exporters are making some showing of interest, but do not have many very full orders at the moment.

Superintendent of Public Works Stranahan on Monday last issued an order officially announcing that the canals of the State will be closed on December 1, unless closed sooner by ice. This will give 209 days of navigation this year, one more day than last year.

Eastern Spruce is found to be steady enough when any direct call is made for it, and in view of prospective small supplies, receivers apprehend very little loss of advantage this season. Yet all are congratulating themselves that shipments have about ceased except in the way of sending forward specials or an occasional random, as the exhaust for stock is not a large or promising one by any means, and as full offering would really cause some trouble to those who had it to dispose of. Random cargoes continue to be quoted at $12.50@15.00, with very few sellers willing to commence negotiations for less than $13 50@14.00, but if compelled to hunt up customers the asking rate must be shaded. On specials as high as $16.50@17.00 is asked, and manufacturers talk firm.

White Pine has an unsettled market. There is little or nothing upon which to hope for a further shading on cost, but most buyers seem to feel in an independent sort of condition and assume that the orders they give are largely a matter of favor and good nature. Especially is this shown when purchasing for stock, as the quantity on hand, expected and "left in the country until spring" is considered more than enough for all prospective wants, and in the way of coarse stuff in particular. A few agents are still "hanging around," but do not secure many customers. We quote at $16@17 for West India shipping boards; $18@27 for South American do.; $13@14 for box boards, and $16@18 for extra do.

Yellow Pine does not undergo much change. Now and then something like demand can be discovered "in spots," but by the time the general trade hear of it and commence to build up hopes, all calls have been met and buyers are not to be found. Values naturally fail to secure a stimulus, and former figures are plenty full enough to name at present. We quote as follows: Randoms, $17@19.50 per M; Specials, $19.50@21 do.; Green Flooring Boards, $2'@22; Dry, do., do., $22@23; Siding, $20@22 do.; Cargoes f. o. b. at Atlantic ports, $18@15 for rough, and $18@20 for dressed. Cargoes f. o. b. at Gulf ports, $12@14 for rough, and $20@21 for dressed.

Hardwoods are doing better on local distribution, both for house trimming and manufacturing purposes, and even some of the medium qualities receive attention. Buyers are not willing to pay full rates, however, on anything faulty, and steadiness can be claimed for the faulty qualities only. We quote at wholesale rates by car load as follows: Walnut, $65@100 per M.; ash, $33@40 do.; oak, $30@55 do.; maple, $20@32.50 do.; chestnut, $25@30 do.; cherry, $50@80 do.; whitewood, $27@35 do., do.; elm, $22@25; hickory, $45@50 do.

Shingles sell to some extent on export orders, but the home trade is pretty well suspended at the moment. Stocks small. We quote Cypress at $8.0 @ 8.50 per M. for 5x20 and $11.00@12.00 do. for 6x20 regularly assorted shipping. Pine shipping stock $2.00@2.50 for 18 inch, and Eastern saw grades at $2.00@2.50 for 16 inch, as to quality and to quantity. Eastern shaved cedar $4.00@4.50 per M. Machine dressed cedar shingles quoted as follows: for 30 inch, $15.00@20.00 for A, and $23@28.50 for No. 1; for 24 inch, $13.00@15 for A and $18.50@20.50 for No. 1; for 20 inch, $8@9.50 for A and $11.00@12.50 for No. 1.

GENERAL LUMBER NOTES.

STATE.

ALBANY MARKET.

The Argus reports for week ending November 18 as follows:

There was a better attendance of buyers in the district and a fair amount of sales were made. Shipments were lively, and a larger proportion than usual has loaded on the canal to save cartage. Receipts from this time to the closing of navigation will be light, as a sudden change in the unusually pleasant fall weather may at any time "freeze in" the canal boats, which are usually laid up for the winter near the homes of their owners. There is, however, a large and well assorted stock on the yards, and a large proportion is dry, fit for immediate use. The low water in northern New York continues, only steam mills are in operation, and they have difficulty in running spruce and hemlock logs to their booms. There is a fair assortment of hardwoods on the yards, though the stock is not as large as usual at this time of the year. Shingles are not lively. Lath are in good stock and demand.

THE WEST.

SAGINAW VALLEY.

LUMBERMAN'S GAZETTE,
BAY CITY, MICH.

The lumber business on the Saginaw River at present consists principally in adding to the almost endless line of lumber piles which are already reared on the docks. Sales are few and far between, and so far as the lumber business proper is concerned, the conclusion is forced on us that it is nearing the end. Quite a number of the mills have alredy closed down for the season for the lack of piling room, and others will doubtless be compelled to do so in the near future from the same cause. This reminds us that there is nearly double the amount of lumber in pile on the river that has ever been previously carried over. There is also a large quantity of logs in the mill store booms accessible for operations in the spring, although the number back in the Tittabawassee, Au Gres, Rifle and other booms tributary to the mills here is inconsiderable. It must not be inferred from this, however, that there will be any lack of logs for operations until the new cut shall become available next season.

Judging from our best source of information at present attainable, in connection with the fact that the mills have generally been forced to their utmost capacity, it is reasonably certain that the output of lumber when the figures are compiled and footed will crowd, if not equal, any former year in the history of the business of the valley.

Sales reported are insignificant both in number and quantity; and the conviction has become settled that there will be no more business really until buyers make their appearance for the purpose of securing stock for next year's supply.

It is confidently anticipated that there will be a very material reduction of the log crop the coming winter, in comparison with former years, and it is predicted that this will have a tendency to again stiffen the backbone of the market.

The Northwestern Lumberman as follows:

The week has been a dull one at the market, as might well be concluded under the circumstances. The election uncertainty has absorbed the thoughts of the handlers of lumber, and rendered them averse to doing more than attend to such business as was absolutely necessary. The market season is drawing to a close, the tendency being to terminate it earlier this season than usual. A large amount of lumber is still arriving, but the larger portion goes directly to the yards.

All the lumber offered the past week has been disposed with little trouble. While there has not been what can be called an active market the demand for stock, especially that which was fairly dry, has been good, on account of the heavy southwestern demand at the yards. Shippers of large amounts of lumber have been obliged to sort up in order to fill their bills, and when they could find what they wanted on the market they have not hesitated to take it. This has tended to advanced prices in some instances. Piece stuff is now selling readily at $8.50, while $8.62½ is often realized, and there have been instances when $8.75 a thousand has been paid for cargoes.

Inch lumber is sympathizing with dimension, dry No. 2 boards and strips having advanced within a few days from 50 cents to $1, dependent on the quality of the lumber. Stock that a short time since sold for $10 a thousand has been sold within a few days for $11. The range on dry No. 2 inch is now from $10 to $11. There are instances reported in which No. 2 stock has been sold for $11.25 a thousand. Green lumber is selling for about 50 cents a thousand more than it brought a few days ago.

The commission men do not consider this better condition of prices as resting on a solid foundation. It is merely the result of a sharp present demand at the yards, and meager receipts. Prices at the figures quoted would scarcely stand up under a heavy fleet at the docks on successive days. Neither would dealers stock up their yards at such prices. No more would they purchase large quantities to arrive, or buy in blocks at the mills at such figures. Nobody would take any risk on the future at such prices. There is simply a present extraordinary demand from the Southwest, on account of the 5-cent rate, and dealers are willing to pay a slight advance in order to pick up what they want out of a meager fleet. This is the situation, and it can be plainly seen that it invites no one to rush stock on this market.

Whitewood is being received in quantities proportionate to other woods, but the total receipts for a month are very large. This wood is growing in popularity, and is coming to be used not only by the furniture, coffin and wagon manufacturers, etc., but also to some extent for finishing purposes in place of white pine. It is strange that the planing mill men are not more ready to recognize its merits, particularly when the price of uppers is so low as compared with the same grades of white pine. But it is surely, though slowly, gaining ground, as proven by the fact that receipts this year have been greater than in any preceding one, in spite of the general depression. Prices, however, are not very satisfactory. There has been a great increase in the productive capacity of the mills in the great whitewood regions, and the mill men feel the effects of too lively competition. But that condition may eventually be the best thing for the trade, as it puts prices so low that it is introduced into new fields which will never again be closed against it.

Redwood is in moderate demand, shingles being what is chiefly wanted, but the prospects are considered good for next season's trade.

The Minneapolis Lumberman and Manufacturer says:

The shipments at all leading points fell off about 40 per cent on the week before, but we cannot learn that there has been the least falling off in prices anywhere.

Navigation has closed on the Mississippi although there is a splendid stage of water and no ice. This is owing to the fact that all interested desire to move slow rather than fast. The surplus of logs is large at La Crosse, on the Chippewa and on the St. Croix, while the quantity to be wintered on the upper Mississippi and the Duluth district is the largest ever known.

The preparations for logging on the various streams have been renewed, and we are now more firmly satisfied than ever that the new crop, added to the old logs, will give us as many logs as we had this year. We hear many predicting that there will be a great shortage, but we do not learn of a single mill owner who proposes to have his machinery lay idle next summer. Some will cut less but it is because they have lots of old logs. Selah.

ENGLAND.

The London Timber Trade's Journal says:

American Black Walnutwood.—There is no scarcity of stock; late arrivals show very little improvement in general character, but low-priced wood has been more inquired for lately, and seems to go off better; but we should doubt very much whether the prices made for this class of stock can pay the shippers. However, of this they must of course be better able to judge than we can. We notice that several parcels are to be sold without reserve on Wednesday next.

American Whitewood.—This trade seems rather quieter, but still consumption goes on steadily; and as imports have rather declined, existing stocks will, no doubt, be benefited by this. We notice some unusually fine logs and planks in the docks.

American Oak.—Logs and Wainscot.—Stocks seem to remain almost stationary, and it is matter for surprise that logs of such fine growth, and wainscot so well made as this now here seems to be, do not find more favor with buyers.

NAILS.—The demand appears to be of an erratic sort of character and not running into very large or promising volume. Buyers when they know just how much stock can be used to immediate and positive advantage move quickly enough, but beyond that will not negotiate, and as the end of the year approaches the preference is to allow as much of the accumulation to remain in first hands as possible. Holders, however, carry without much complaint and are generally found to be quite steady in asking former rates. We quote at $2.10@2.25 per keg for 10d. to 60d., according to size of invoice.

PAINTS, OILS, ETC.—Business is light and unimportant and the general market without much change. The seasonable goods are moving to about the extent to be expected, but holders who have been "feeling" the chances for more business find that it is useless to attempt hurrying matters unless prepared to shade cost. Of both domestic and foreign goods, the supply is fair in quantity and shows average good assortment. Linseed Oil meeting with about former demand and is quoted at 53@54c. for domestic, and 54@56c. for foreign. Spirits Turpentine in fair demand and quite steadily held at 31½@33½c. per gallon, according to size of invoice.

PLASTER.—There is evidently a screw loose somewhere on the market for calcined plaster, and a great deal of grumbling takes place all around. On shipping as well as home orders the call fails to afford any relief, and the further shadings on cost are evidently without appreciation among any class of buyers. Another revision on quotations has been made, but all rates have a more or less nominal position at the moment. In the meantime rock continues to arrive with some freedom, and there is nothing to do but pile it away for winter accumulation.

PITCH AND TAR.—A moderately active business doing with prices somewhat irregular at times, though not much variation on the general range. We quote Pitch $2.25@2.30 per bbl., Tar $2.50@3.00 do., according to quantity, quality and delivery.

We have been expecting a better feeling in the stock market just as soon as the corn crop would commence to move, and in spite of railway wars and the cutting of passenger fares stocks have advanced during the past week, and, with occasional reactions, will, we think, continue to advance. We expect also to see better prices for wheat and cotton and a more active demand and better prices for staple goods. But the liquidation that commenced in 1881 has not yet run its course, 1885 will see a great deal of distress among manufacturers and the working classes. Failures in general business will be very common, but we believe that our railway system has seen the worst, and western farmers who have not become involved in land speculation will be far better off at the end of this crop year than they were at the beginning.

Last week we ventured to predict that the football contest between Yale and Princeton, on Thanksgiving Day, would turn out to be a more dangerous and debasing exhibition than any "slugging" match ever held in New York city; and so it proved. More bodily harm was done than it would be possible to accomplish in a score of boxing exhibitions at Madison Square Garden. Aside from the cruel and unnecessary wounds inflicted, the bad blood and squabbling on the ground was disgraceful in the extreme. If the Grand Jury had reason to indict the backers of the slugging exhibitions, in which no one was seriously injured, why do they not bring in true bills against Presidents Porter and McCosh, of Yale and Princeton Colleges? It does not help the matter that the patrons of Sullivan and his competitors are generally a disreputable lot, and that the enormous crowd on the Polo grounds was composed of the very elite of our fashionable and educated classes. Indeed it makes the matter all the worse. Brutality is a far more serious offense in the latter class than in the former. If these football matches are to continue the police have no business to interfere with the far more harmless contests of the professional pugilists.

Mayor Edson it not ending his official career with credit to himself. His straining of a legal point to deprive the incoming Mayor of important appointments cannot be justified on any plea of the public good, while his discourtesy to Mayor-elect Grace is manifest. The persons he has appointed for Police Commissioners are not fit for their positions and seem to have been chosen in the interest of Johnny" O'Brien. We have tried to do justice to Mayor Edson during his official career, but we can find no justification for his recent action in appointing French and McClave as Police Commissioners. He has the undisputed right to appoint a Commissioner of Public Works and a Corporation Attorney, and no one could blame him if he chose for those positions two of his own political and personal friends, provided they were honest and competent, but he should not have meddled with the Police Commissioners. But how strangely things come about: Governor Cleveland vetoed the tenure of office bill, the only reform measure he failed to approve, to save his most influential backer at Chicago, Hubert O. Thompson, but the latter will after all lose his position, when, had the tenure of office bill been approved, he might possibly have been re-appointed by the incoming Mayor. The President-elect will be forced to provide for Mr. Thompson, a thing which will not look very well among the first acts of a reform President.

Pending the local election we wondered why it was that "Johnny" O'Brien deliberately handed over the city government to the political opponents of the Republican party. As the Democratic vote of 133,000 was almost evenly divided between Tammany and the County Democracy, it was clear that the Republicans, who had polled 90,000 for Blaine, could have elected their entire county and judiciary ticket. That party could have had the Mayor, Comptroller, president of the Board of Aldermen, and all the judges chosen. They would also have had control for the coming two years of the Commission of Estimates and Apportionment, but O'Brien for private reasons of his own deliberately threw the city election into the hands of the Democrats, although a strong local ticket would have helped the Blaine vote. It seems that the Republican party of this city exist for the benefit of the machine of which Mr. O'Brien is the head. There must be tens of thousands of Republicans who are incensed at this treachery of their leader, but in all the multiplicity of daily papers, there is not one that has voiced their indignation. Is not this Theodore Roosevelt's chance? Why should he not do in New York what Mayor Low has done in Brooklyn, that is, head the young men and honest men of all parties for an attack upon the corrupt political machines now under the control of our local politicians, the most utterly conscienceless and despicable of which is the one engineered by "Johnny" O'Brien.

The Philadelphia Water Department, under the advice of Prof Albert R. Leeds, the chemist of the Stevens Institute, is trying an experiment which we commend to the attention of our Aqueduct Commission. The Schuylkill and Delaware Rivers, upon which the Quaker City depends for its drinking water, have become fouled by the sewerage and waste of the cities and factories on their banks. To bring purer water from a distance would be a work of time and great expense, so a process known as aeriation is being tested. This is simply the forcing of air into the water. The oxygen thus supplied converts the pollutions into harmless oxidized products and the wholesomeness of water is thus restored. It is by this process that water is naturally purified. A running stream rids itself of impurities by contact with changing air. The Thames, for instance, which is foul because of the sewerage of London, purifies itself by aeriation so thoroughly that in ten miles below that city it is sufficiently oxygenized for drinking purposes.

Why should not this hint be taken by our Aqueduct Commission Why go to enormous expense to exclude the health-giving oxygen and confine the water in its passage all the way from Croton Lake to the city of New York? True, the water is exposed to the air in the reservoirs, but standing water stagnates; it should be kept in motion to become pure. Of course, the plans for the aqueducts already made involve the exclusion of light and air from the water but in view of recent knowledge on this subject it is a stupid and a costly blunder to enclose the water the entire distance.

The Cattle Ranch Speculation.

We are rarely without an active speculation in some specialty in this country. Now the fever breaks out in stocks, then in grain or cotton, and further along in mining or petroleum; but the speculative fever of the immediate future promises to be in the shares of ranch companies owning pasture and stock in the Far West. As this new development of speculative enterprise affects land, hitherto almost unsalable, it is a matter which should be seriously considered by the real estate interests of this city, and especially by the promoters of the Real Estate Exchange, which is to be opened early in 1885.

It has been well known that cattle raising in the extreme West has been a lucrative business for many years past. As the pasture on government land has cost little or nothing, a four-year old steer could be raised in Texas for less than $4. At the railway station it would sell for from $18 to $20. If driven north from Texas through the Indian Territory, and fed for a season in the pastures of the middle and upper zones of the West, the cattle would almost double in value, and would get rid of the fever which is almost universal in the Texas herds. This profitable business has created a class of cattle kings who are now consolidating their power by organizing into great corporations, owning multitudes of herds and controlling vast quantities of pasture land from the Gulf of Mexico to the Canada borders. But the cattle interests just now find themselves embarrassed. The country has been settled to a certain extent. Farmers and railroads have encroached upon their free pastures. The settlers in Kansas object to having droves of cattle sent through their private property. The demand is made that the cattle be transported by rail, but this is objected to because the Texas fever clings to the animal unless it is driven gradually north, and its condition naturally improved by the change of climate, food and water.

So the cattle kings have been holding great conventions in Chicago and St. Louis. They are not at all modest. They ask the government to befriend them—to assign them lands free of cost—to give them lakes and rivers for watering their stock; but the boldest demand of all is for a great free cattle trail ten miles wide and extending from Central Texas to the Canada frontier. There is to be a powerful lobby in Washington this winter to urge upon Congress legislative patronage for this great cattle interest; but these great ranch corporations have a grievance against the railways and a just one. The latter have discriminated against the eastern-bound dressed beef sent in refrigerator cars. The transportation of live cattle is most profitable to railroad companies, and one of the perquisites of their managers is their personal interests in stock yards and abattoirs on the Atlantic coast. The cattlemen declare that they must have justice in rates on dressed beef. If they should win it would be a great advantage to the Eastern people, who will be thus enabled to use the comparatively cheap meat prepared in Chicago and other western cattle-killing centres.

A few years ago cotton was said to be king, subsequently grain it was claimed was the great wealth-producer of the nation, but now it seems that cattle heads the list. Their money value, according to Dr. Loring of the Department of Agriculture, is $1,106,715,703. West of the Mississippi there are 21,943,000 cattle, valued at $533,650,871. In addition to the value of the cattle there is to be considered that of the land, buildings and equipments necessary to take care of these numerous herds as well as the packing-houses, abattoirs and refrigerator cars.

It is a fact to be kept in mind that while grain and cotton and other products of the earth are occasionally very cheap the price of meat rarely shows any reduction. The human race increases faster than the animals on which they live, and the settlement of new countries diminishes the area of pasture land. Hence there is no fear of over-production in the number of cattle. It is this consideration which has made ranch and cattle corporations so profitable in the past. There is another factor in their favor in the growing value of lands all through the western countries. Hence the speculative fever which is under way. J. V. Farwell, the well-known dry-goods dealer in Chicago, has just organized a cattle ranch company in that city with a capital of two millions, and the shares are already at a premium. Foreign companies are also in the field, organized in Germany and Great Britain. New York, however, ought to be the headquarters for these new speculative enterprises. Money is very cheap at this centre and is seeking employment. Our new Real Estate Exchange should be the medium for bringing the cattle kings and the money kings together.

All great speculative eras end with a land fever; generally this is confined to city property. In 1837 the speculation was in wild lands, but the new excitement promises to be in the grazing lands of the Far West.

Two Business Buildings.

Two new business buildings attract attention by their magnitude and the extreme plainness of their design.

The Continental Bank Note Company has put up a building of red brick on New Church street, behind Trinity churchyard, adjoining the picturesque building of Trinity schools, which is thus a conspicuous object from Broadway. The total frontage is 125 feet, divided into five bays, of which the southernmost is one story higher than the rest, the height elsewhere being of six stories. The bays are divided by piers of slight projection. In each bay the lower three stories are enclosed under a large round arch, the stories being divided by metal transoms, and each story subdivided into three openings by light iron mullions. The arches spring from piers belted with blue stone and their impost is marked by a moulded cornice of that material. The entresol is thus the third story instead of the second as is the more usual disposition. The change seems to have been dictated by a wish so to stilt the arches as to bring them into view from Broadway, above the structure of the elevated railroad which conceals the lower two stories. Above the large arch each bay has three stories of three openings each, the openings of the fourth and fifth having flat arches and the sixth round. The front is completed by a heavy cornice, in brick-work, as is the whole wall, with the exceptions already noted, and with the further exception of the sills, which are of blue stone throughout. The rear on Greenwich street is similar to the front in treatment, except that the large arches are dropped one story, and this front being of seven stories, including the entresol, the four stories above the arches are uniformly treated with square-headed openings, the upper story being round arched, as before, and the cornice of the east front repeated.

The effect of the building is upon the whole good. Its plainness, and the straightforward treatment of material are in refreshing contrast to the pretentiousness of most commercial buildings. It is not necessary, however, that the plainness appropriate to a commercial building should degenerate into baldness, as it must be said is the case here. This baldness might have been obviated, without the addition of any ornament, by a more emphatic treatment of structural parts, a greater projection of the projecting members and by paying more attention to displaying the thickness of the wall. As it is the cornice is much the most vigorous and effective piece of design in the work, the wall having too little the appearance of a structure and too much that of a screen. The device of stilting the large arches is successful in relieving the monotony of the front as seen from Broadway, but some modelling of the arches themselves was necessary to give them the value due to their size and importance. The ornament at the extrados does not supply this defect, being too minute to be apprehensible at all at a distance from which the whole front can be seen. A more forcible treatment of its parts would have made, with the general design adopted here, a very effective building as well as one perfectly appropriate to its purpose. As it is, the building is entirely void of offence, and this is praise, as commercial buildings go.

The new building of the Standard Oil Company in lower Broadway is now ready for its mansard, and up to what appears to be the main cornice consists of eight stories, including the basement, all of white granite. The composition is very simple. Laterally the front is divided into three compartments, of which the central one is much the narrowest, containing, in the basement, the main entrance. This is a round arch with the voussoirs continued to the top and sides of the enclosing portico, two heavy pilasters with an entablature. On each side are two segmental arches. Above, the triple division is effected by four piers, interrupted by the cornices which mark the vertical division. These are four altogether, the first containing the basement, the second the second and third stories, the third the fourth and fifth, and the fourth and uppermost the sixth, seventh and eighth. The upper story in each division has segment-headed openings, the others being plainly lintelled. The vertical division is emphasized, besides the cornices which run through, by balconies across the central bay above the third and fifth stories. In each of the upper stories there are two pairs of openings over each single arch of the basement, and in the central bay over the doorway there are three. The piers are channelled in the uppermost stage but elsewhere are plain, and the openings are unmoulded and unmodelled, except that the mullions project at top and bottom.

Nothing can be simpler than the composition nor plainer than the treatment. The front cannot be called successful, however. The division is unfortunate. The three upper divisions are too nearly of equal value, and such difference as there is makes the top the most important of them. If the four intermediate stories, which are now bisected by a cornice had been united, and the upper division had been enriched, an approach would have been made to the organic unity, the possibility of which is destroyed by the division actually adopted. Moreover, the plainness which is appropriate enough to the material and the purpose of the structure is not severity, but merely baldness, and it is not accompanied by the sense of massiveness which makes plainness respectable and may make it majestic. The supports are not only as attenuated as possible, a fact of which it is idle to complain in a commercial building, but no technical device is employed to dissemble their plainness. The triple lateral division, with piers running through, emphasizes the relative height of the building which needed no emphasis, and instead of slurring the necessary vertical lines, introduces vertical lines which are unnecessary. Nor is there any attempt to retrieve in the treatment of detail this radical error in composition. The color and the surface of the material both counteract any possible impression of massiveness. The granite is very pale and it is smoothly dressed. What the building would have gained by chosing a darker granite and using it rock-faced, may be seen by comparing the new structure with its next neighbor, the Welles building, which looks more respectable by contrast than it did when it stood alone.

It would be a real advantage to our working classes if some concerted measures were taken to furnish them with food and clothing at somewheres near the cost prices. The great shrinkage in values has not yet been to the advantage of the poor people who buy groceries, meat and bread. Wheat was never so cheap, but the bakers furnish no larger loaf because of it. The swarm of butcher shops along the avenues is a needless tax upon the poorer population of our city. The rents of these unnecessary shops and the attendants represent an immense total which the customers are forced to make good. We want more city markets for the distribution of food, and a pressure should be brought to bear upon the baker shops to cut down their unnecessarily large profits.

The city journals, particularly the Herald, is being influenced by would-be bankruptcy officials to demand the passage of a national bankruptcy act at the coming session of Congress. All our previous bankruptcy acts have been failures. Thomas H. Benton, in his time, said in the Senate that such enactments had robbed creditor and debtor alike, and that the estates seized on an average paid only 1 per cent. to the creditors. Hence H. B. Claflin and all the great houses interested in the collection of debts are opposed to bankruptcy acts, either State or national, as the effect of all of them is to transfer the assets of the insolvent firms into the pockets of the lawyers and the bankruptcy court officials. It is an open question whether the general trade of the country would not be benefited by abolishing all laws for the collection of debts. Then character would give credit, and honesty and prudence would be at a premium in all departments of trade.

In the "Business World" will be found an article respecting a bill now before the British Parliament, intending to promote more general introduction of arbitration into commercial disputes wherever the sway of the English government extends. Merchants, as a class, have found that the law's delay has become intolerable in this age of steamships, railways and telegraphs communication. While all the operations of commerce and modern industry tend towards the economizing of time and money the administration of justice in our courts is as tedious and wasteful as at any time in the past. The merchants notice that the various exchanges, notably the stock boards, have managed to get along without courts or lawyers. Very naturally they wish to be saved the expense in settling disputes necessitated by the lumbering and wasteful machinery of the law courts of the modern world. Hence the proposed commercial legislation in Great Britain.

The Prejudice Against Gould.

Editor RECORD AND GUIDE:

The reason for the "curiously bitter and apparently unreasonable feeling" against Jay Gould, which you allude to, is that he is an unprincipled man, absolutely and entirely unprincipled. A man of principle is a man who in thought and in action recognizes certain rules and limitations which experience has shown to be necessary to protect individuals from each other when living in a community. The man who refuses to admit these regulations, who acts with his own immediate profit only in view, strikes a blow at the life of the community, ranks himself with the assassin, the highwayman or any other criminal who lives by depredations upon others. Such a depredator Jay Gould is felt to be, and this is the cause of the hatred, the just hatred, of the community toward him. The system of stock-watering, invented or at least most extensively practiced by him, is robbery pure and simple, not to speak of the methods by which legislation to permit and protect such nefarious practices has been obtained.

RIENZI.

REMARKS.—This publication has never been a defender of Jay Gould. We have repeatedly denounced him and his methods in the stock market and have always opposed his acquisition of the telegraph, which we thought should have been in the hands of the government, as it is in all other nations. It seemed to us monstrous that this indispensable agent for transacting the business of the country should be in the control of the most conscienceless speculator of the age, and that to him or his servants should be handed over the secrets of our family life, the quotations of products on all the markets of the world, as well as the first knowledge of all the multifarious business interests which are forced to use the telegraphic wires. But neither the press nor the public could be made to see any advantage in the telegraph being worked by the servants of the country rather than the employes of Jay Gould. True there was a spasm of alarm at a possible abuse of this speculator's power when the returns of the recent election were being published. For a day or two, at least, the members of the Democratic party thought that there might be some danger in a partisan of Blaine counting and announcing the votes given for Cleveland.

"Rienzi" seems to have accepted the cant of the day about watering stocks as gospel. Now, as a matter of fact, it makes no difference to the public whether a railroad is stocked for $100,000,000 or $200,000,000. In the one case the dividends may be 5 per cent., in the other 10. The vital point in the matter is the railway charges—the tax they levy upon the business of the community. Harlem stock paying 10 and 12 per cent., has sold as high as 200 for it has never been watered. The company is none the less a curse to the country through which it passes, for it overcharges and retards the development of the region it professes to serve. The same complaints are made, with more or less justice, against the New York & New Haven, the Baltimore & Ohio, and other properties whose capitalization is low compared to the mileage and with that of other corporations. It would not make the slightest difference to anyone if the securities of these companies were doubled up, for it would only result in the stockholders getting precisely the same return for their investment. It is the charges of the railways for fare and freight which is, as we have said, the vital matter after all.

In one respect Jay Gould has been a public benefactor. His consolidation and systematizing of rival and connecting companies has been in a line with the railway development of the country and in every way advantageous to the traveling and business public. What was objectionable is the very common practice of railway managers themselves purchasing cheap or worthless roads and reselling them to the sound corporations they are managing. A case in point was Jay Gould's acquisition of the Kansas Pacific for a comparative trifle, and his incorporation of that road into the Union Pacific. This for him was a very profitable operation, but the victims were the Union Pacific stockholders, not the public, for the consolidation was in every way advantageous to all who traveled or sent goods on the lines of the consolidated corporation.

Jay Gould has been severely blamed for the disastrous outcome of the Wabash consolidation, yet there was every reason to believe, when first established, that the consolidated company would be successful. He could not foresee that the region served by the Wabash would have had three bad corn years, nor is it probable that he had any conception of the years of liquidation which were to follow the wild speculation which culminated in 1881. Undoubtedly the greatest sufferer by the Wabash collapse was Jay Gould himself, yet this would not have occurred had the corn crops of 1881, 1882 and 1883 been even two-thirds as great as the magnificent crop of this year.

So much in justice to Jay Gould. His shortcomings are those of all who live by their wits in Wall street. He is deceitful and desperately wicked, but in this he does not differ from his rivals. He is a man of great genius and resources, and this accounts for the very hostile feeling felt towards him by those he has outwitted; but the public dislike for him must be explained on some other grounds, for he has done no harm to the community beyond the bad example of his life.

Our Prophetic Department.

OPERATOR—I see that ex-Governor English of Connecticut does not agree with you in regarding the trade outlook as gloomy. He considers the prospects for all kinds of business excellent. He points out the fact that the market for money in New York is lower than in London, and he argues that as building materials are at a less price than they have been for five years past that building will be good next year.

SIR ORACLE—The two facts to which he calls attention are the very ones I would bring forward to show that times were bad and would probably be worse. Unemployed money is an evidence that there is no confidence in business. In prosperous times people are hopeful and money is in eager demand. Building materials are cheap because there is a check in that industry. There will be fewer houses constructed in 1885 than there were in 1884.

OPERATOR—Then, again, Governor English alleges that the election being out of the way we will necessarily have better times, as business is depressed while a political contest is going on, but always revives the year following the close of such contest.

SIR O.—The ex-Governor read that in numberless papers, no doubt, but he and the newspapers are all wrong. Our best times are in presidential years, and the years following election are generally poor years; 1880 was the most prosperous year for trade in our history. In the summer of 1881 began the liquidation which is not finished yet; 1876, the year of the Centennial, was far better for business because of that commemoration. Then 1877 was the year when real estate touched its lowest point and the great railway riots occurred. Business did not revive until silver was partially demonetized by the Bland bill in the spring of 1878. After that the premium on gold disappeared, which enabled us to resume specie payments January 1, 1879. In 1872 times were good, but the panic came the close of the following year. In 1868 we were in the full flush of the paper money inflation. I might go back to the years of all our presidential contests to show how ridiculously mistaken ex-Governor English was in the generalizations he made. Unless the unexpected should happen, 1885 will be a poor business year.

OPERATOR—The cause, Sir Oracle, the cause.

SIR O.—In a conversation published in THE RECORD AND GUIDE on January 27, 1883, nearly two years ago, you will find on page 34 the following advice given by me:

"Put money in your purse; convert your possessions into ready cash. Don't go into any investment, however tempting, for while this international scramble for gold is going on the price of all commodities will steadily diminish. * * * The outlook to me is gloomy. * * * The endeavor to substitute one money metal for two by the great commercial nations is steadily decreasing values and if continued the wise man will convert his possessions into cash, for it is money which will continue to grow valuable, not commodities."

I gave this same advice in 1882. That it was sound will be seen by comparing the quotations in the stock market then and to-day, as well as the values recorded in the price current for grain, cotton, wool and almost every article dealt in by the business world. There has been a fearful shrinkage of prices and the end is not yet. It is money that continues to grow valuable, which fact is established by its continually greater purchasing power; that is, the cheapness of everything whose price it measures.

OPERATOR—But surely everything is not going to be cheaper next year?

SIR O.—Oh, no; I look for some advance in the price of wheat and cotton—they have been abnormally low. Some stocks, I think, are very cheap and may advance. Then it looks as if there may be a speculation in wild lands, due to the formation of great cattle companies and the absorption of pastures, which promises to be very active during the next few years.

OPERATOR—Would not this help to improve trade?

SIR O.—Not much. The care of cattle involves the employment of very little labor. In this respect it is unlike manufacturing enterprise; a few cow-boys will attend immense herds. We may get cheaper meat in time, but the increase in the value of western lands will be an injury to the emigrating class, who will have less temptation to leave our crowded cities.

OPERATOR—What stocks do you think will advance during the coming winter? Will it be the Grangers?

SIR O.—The trouble with the Grangers is that the construction account never ends. You buy into 2,000 miles of road, but at the end of a few years you own shares in a property owning 5,000 miles, most of it unprofitable. The St. Paul for years has been building into the Northwests territory, and now comes the Rock Island, not only running its lines north to compete with the St. Paul and Northwset, but getting possession of the Wisconsin Central, which will give it a line from Milwaukee west. The Northwest Company will be forced—indeed it is now surveying—a road to Ogden, and so the work of construction goes on, to the great benefit of the country, but to the ruin of stockholders.

OPERATOR—How do you account for this insane building of lines in competition with existing corporations into regions that do not pay?

SIR O.—The stockholders of a company are scattered all over the country, while the interests which thrive on new lines and extensions are concentrated around the office of the managers and can bring the most potent influences to bear. The iron owners, the providers of equipments, the contractors and the land owners are few in number perhaps, but they are incessantly at work, and, as managers are but human, they keep on extending their roads until bankruptcy overtakes them. Protected mortgages of these Granger roads are no doubt good securities, but the prudent investor will have nothing to do with their stocks, common or preferred.

OPERATOR—Which roads seem to you to have the best promise of an advance in the immediate future?

SIR O.—Those which will have most to do in transporting corn, hogs and cattle during the coming year. The corn roads east of the Mississippi have been unduly depressed as there was a corn failure for three years, but the crop of this year is magnificent and the receipts ought to show a great improvement up to the close of this crop year.

Concerning Men and Things.

"I believe," said Mr. William Bond, "that we have seen the worst so far as the prices of stocks and agricultural products are concerned. We have grown out of the earth and produced from our mines crops and articles which are worth fully four thousand millions of dollars in the markets of the world. These have just begun to move to market and the money returns will revivify all departments of trade. I look for more active money and higher rates, better prices for wheat, corn and cotton while the railroads will have all they can do in transferring these agricultural products from where they are grown to points of distribution and consumption. The railroads in the corn districts of the country will not have rolling stock to move the corn, with the hogs and lard into which it is converted. I believe that it only takes 15 bushels of corn to make a 200 pound hog. There has been a large movement of wheat at unremunerative prices. The farmer's necessities forced him to market his wheat, and to raise the usual quantity of money needed at this time of the year he was necessitated to sell a bushel and a half where a bushel sufficed in former years. But the great wheat movement is over and its price must advance. We in this country consume 700,000 bushels a day and Europe with America uses up 4,000,000 bushels a day. I think wheat will be over a dollar a bushel in Chicago before May 1st, 1885. General trade may be bad temporarily, but from this time forth I look for a better feeling in the stock, grain and cotton markets. We have probably built too many railroads, but in two years' time our population will increase so as to make profitable nearly all our new constructions."

The sad story of Matilda Heron is well known to all who are interested in stage celebrities, and who, by the way, is not? She was a woman of remarkable genius whose end was unhappy, due to her irregular life and subsequent mental alienation. Her daughter, Bijou Heron, had a most painful experience as a little child. Her debut at Daly's Theatre when but ten years old was considered quite a theatrical event, such promise did she show of future excellence. She has developed into a very charming artist but is now the very opposite of what her mother was at her best. The latter was a genius of a somewhat stormful kind. Still there is a remarkable grace and charm about all that Bijou Heron does. Her proper place would be in a first-class company in a leading theatre yet she is now playing in an east side place of amusement to very inferior audiences.

There is very general complaint among the brokers in the Stock and Produce Exchanges that the restaurant prices are too high. This is true not only of Delmonico's, the Hoffman House branch and the other so-called first-class restaurants, but also of the second and third-class places. The time was when trade was brisk that active business men did not object to paying one and even two dollars for a lunch, but the flush times are over, and those who eat dinners at home think that fifty and seventy-five cents is quite enough to spend on a mid-day meal. The shrinkage in prices from which everyone suffers has not affected hotel or restaurant charges. It is a noticeable fact that a number of cheap lunching counters have been started in lower Broadway and other parts of down town, and have been extensively patronized not only by clerks and minor employes, but by business men who a few years back patronized high-priced establishments exclusively. Of course one difficulty with eating and drinking places below the City Hall is that they have little or no business except about lunch time, and then there is a rush. In some places a system is established of employing waiters who serve from 11 to 4 down town, and are then transferred to the up-town establishments, but this is true of only a few of the leading concerns.

Home Decorative Notes.

—Chair and sofa scarfs are of soft China silks, hand embroidered in floral designs in floss silks; they are fashioned into a careless looking bow-knot, and fastened to the chair or sofa by the oxidized silver butterfly or beetle pins.

—White plush can be used with charming effect as an Afghan for a baby carriage.

—Soup tureens of oxidized silver are more used than those of china; no cleaning is allowable with this finish, merely careful wiping with a chamois skin.

—The swallow is the favorite bird in embroidery designs.

—Antique brass clocks, richly decorated, are much admired, they are mounted on plush and suspended to the wall by heavy brass chains.

—Lamp shades in delicate blues and pinks are of India silk painted in water colors, a lovely one is of Mandarin yellow with brown tinted leaves exquisitely painted and forming a rich contrast.

—The most elegant dining room chairs are of antique oak richly carved, upholstered in alligator skin studded with large square nails of antique finish.

—Tempting jewel caskets are made of heavy glass bevelled and set in some strong metal top, the sides are formed of glass while on the bottom is a luxurious cushioned tray for the treasures to rest upon.

—Scissors with hand-wrought handles and sheaths of brass now form part of the furniture of a lady's work-basket.

—Lunch or tea napkins have appropriate sentiments embroidered across one end.

—A tea "cozy" of dark crimson satin, with a spray of tea blossoms on one side and white honeysuckles on the other, in Kensington stitch, is very effective.

—The prettiest new work-basket is in the shape of a gypsy kettle, both kettle and sticks being made of wicker; a bow of cherry red velvet is bound around the centre of the sticks and another is on the outside of the kettle, which has a lining of cherry silk.

—The larger the Chinese and Japanese vases now-a-days, the more suitable for parlor ornaments are they declared to be.

—A favorite way of serving raw oysters is to place them on a plate amid chopped ice.

—Fancy stationery is no longer good form, and the correct thing is said to be plain white with single initial; envelopes have square flaps with the monogram on a seal, some open diagonally and have the seal set in one corner; in all ceremonious notes wax is invariably used.

—Bouvardia in pale and deep pink has an especially dainty effect if placed on the table in delicate china bowls.

—Individual butter plates are of silver, and have the monogram in large letters in the centre.

—Elephants' tusks of small size are used as handles for carving knives and forks; these are of the best English manufacture.

—Looking back some ten or fifteen years we cannot fail to note how successful manufacturers have been in producing artistic work, and the unending cry for novelty which has so quickened the brains and educated fingers of workers in the sphere of highly artistic house furnishing, that it would seem as if human ingenuity was exhausted. Particular attention to specialties in parlor furniture and interior decoration is given by Roux & Co., of No. 133 Fifth avenue.

—Satin is again used for hangings and furniture coverings in Paris; one of the beautiful residences of a foreign ambassador has the drawing-room draperies of white satin trimmed with bullion brocade.

—Moorish designs in vases are now popular.

—The season for fancy work and decorative work is opened and shows much which is artistic if little which is novel; the bamboo plant is a much used design this season, the bamboo cloth is very pretty and serviceable, it is embroidered with Algerian silk in Kensington and finished with lace; the Bolton sheeting is something new for bed spreads, chair backs, portieres, etc., and is embroidered as fancy dictates, it comes only in cream white and will wash; foot rests, ladies' shopping bags and other articles are made of fine French kid and embroidered in gold, bronze and silver; many attractive and novel designs in Renaissance embroidery, kid and plush applique work is offered by J. B. Shepherd, 927 Broadway.

—Dainty little bonbon dishes are made of cut glass in the shape of spades, hearts and diamonds.

—A sofa pillow of dark sapphire blue plush, decorated with a branch of white asters wrought in chenille, produces a wonderfully happy result.

—Venetian glass candlesticks are much sought after for wedding gifts.

—French mirrors with heavy frames of cast brass are among the recent importations, they are suspended from the wall by heavy brass chains and balls.

—Lamps are now partly superseded by colored candles, which shed a soft, dim, religious light, tiny satin or silk shades accompany these pretty things; as the fancy for candlesticks has grown to such strong proportions, designers have been taxed to the utmost to meet the demand and the result comprises strange and odd shapes; a very elegant pair of oxidized silver and gold candlesticks with elaborate bas reliefs of gold are mounted on a copper and silver base, figures of silver oxidized support the stand, and etched ivory plate below the socket; the rose candlestick, which is simply a full blown rose in china for holding the candle, is very delicate and has many admirers; most exquisite and very unique designs in lamps, hall lanterns, gasoliers, etc., are now displayed by Jules Dardonville, of 37 East Eighteenth street.

Obituary.

Edward H. Ludlow, of the famous real estate firm bearing his name, died on Thanksgiving Day. Mr. Ludlow was the oldest real estate broker in New York city. He was born August 6, 1810, in Greenwich street, one door from Liberty. He was educated to be a physician and took his diploma in 1831. He practiced for a time successfully in New Rochelle, but the profession became distasteful to him, and in 1834 he opened a real estate office at the corner of Wall and New streets, and 1836 found him in No. 11 Broad street. He subsequently transacted business corner of Broad and Exchange place, but shortly returned to his old quarters, corner of Wall and New streets. In 1845 Mr. Ludlow retired from business with a modest competency and bought a homestead on the Hudson River. But he was too active a man to be content to live in idleness, and in 1849 he caught the California fever and came to New York to take passage in a clipper ship around Cape Horn. Some of his old associates, however, persuaded him to re-enter the real estate business. He opened an office in Pine street in 1856, and in 1859 he took the office No. 3 Pine street, of which he kept possession until last May, when he moved into the Duncan building, near Nassau street. Though often importuned to mix in public affairs, Mr. Ludlow would take no part in politics, nor did he ever hold a political office. He was, however, active in the formation of the Real Estate Exchange and was its first president. He took a very great interest in its success, and, though not in his usual health for some time past, he always attended the meetings of its Directors. Mr. Ludlow was peculiar in some things. He would not take a summer vacation, as he felt more comfortable in his New York home than anywhere else. For a quarter of a century he never left his house in the evening to attend any place of amusement. He had a strong local attachment to the city of his birth and never wearied of recounting the recollections of his boyhood. He remembered the last visitation of yellow fever, when the infected district was barricaded, and he was a man grown when the cholera first appeared in New York in 1832. He also recalled the time when Spring street was regarded as being out of town. Mr. Ludlow had been sick ten days, but did not take to his bed until Tuesday last. He suffered from general debility, which brought on a complication of diseases that resulted in his death. Mr. Ludlow married Miss Elizabeth Livingston, of Livingston Manor, who survives him. He also leaves a married son and daughter, the latter the widow of the late Valentine G. Hall, Jr. The funeral services will take place at Zion Church, corner of Madison avenue and Thirty-eighth street, on Monday morning at 9:30 o'clock.

Mr. Ludlow's great success in life was undoubtedly due to his singular kindness of heart and suavity of manner. He was the most amiable of men and had a pleasant word and smile for all whom he met in a business or social way. He was very popular in the trade. None of his business rivals had a word to say against the head of the house of E. H. Ludlow & Co.

In Mrs. Martha J. Lamb's History of the City of New York will be found an interesting genealogy of the Ludlow family. It seems that they can trace their lineage to Edward I. of England and his second wife, Margaret, daughter of Philip III. of France. Among the descendants of this couple was the Earl of Norfolk, Lord Segrave, Lord Mowbrey, Lord Delawarr and Lord Windsor, whose daughter Edith married George Ludlow. The latter's son was the grandfather of Edward Ludlow, the regicide; and he by his second wife was the great grandfather of Gabriel Ludlow, who settled in New York in 1694. The Ludlows were a prolific family and their connections are to be found in all the historic families of New York. They intermarried with the Goelets, Bogarts, Livingstons, Morris's, Duncans, Gouverneurs, Harrisons and others equally well known. The Ludlows were quite noted in the annals of the city before the revolution, as well as immediately after. One of the best known mansions in the early history of the city was built at No. 9 State street by Carey Ludlow, which was occupied by John Morton, his rich son-in-law, for over a quarter of a century. It was in this fine mansion that Lafayette was entertained in 1824.

"I was greatly shocked to hear of Mr. Ludlow's death," said Mr. Richard V. Harnett. "He was only ailing but slightly, and I did not expect he would be taken away from us yet. I have been in the street with him for the last sixteen or seventeen years, and I have always held him in high esteem. He evidently had a presentiment that his life was drawing to a close. He called at my office to see me ten or eleven days ago, and during our conversation he said, 'I don't think I shall live long, and I want to ask a special favor of you in connection with the Exchange.' I replied, smilingly, and told him there was no danger of his going off yet, and that I expected to see him around the street for many years to come. Every member of the Real Estate Exchange will regret his loss. I had hoped that he would have lived to see the Exchange opened. He had for years expressed his opinion as to the necessity for such an Exchange, and no one felt greater interest in its progress than he."

Mr. Geo. H. Scott, secretary of the Real Estate Exchange, said: "We all regret that Mr. Ludlow has passed from our midst. For a full generation he has been the principal figure on the street, and his name has been synonymous with honesty of character and straightforward dealing. Mr. Ludlow was one of the greatest pillars of our Exchange. Despite his age he faithfully attended to his duties as its president, and came to all the meetings at which he was able to be present. He took an active personal interest in the building operations, and was very anxious about the delay that occurred. In fact the Exchange was almost a hobby with him, and I wish to bear witness to the earnestness and zeal with which he fulfilled his position as president both of the Exchange and the Building Committee. A small incident recurs to me, showing his interest in the minor details of the Exchange. When the Produce Exchange was opened elegant cards of admission were sent out containing a handsome engraving of the building. "When our Exchange is opened," said he, "we must have invitation cards something like this, with a fine picture of the building on it."

Park Commissioner John D. Crimmins said: "I am much shocked to hear of the death of Mr. Ludlow. The real estate community will miss its most central figure. He was respected by all who came in contact with him. It is perhaps not generally known, but Mr. Ludlow's charities were very numerous, and they were dispensed without regard to race or creed. Some time ago I had a talk with him at his house, on the walls of which hung a fine painting of St. Francis. 'Do you know,' said he, 'I have often thought I should like to give that picture to some institution where the people who looked at it would be more benefited by its beauty than if it remained here.' I suggested that he should donate it to the St. Francis Hospital, with which he at once complied. It s a coincidence that only yesterday I saw two of the sisters belonging to that excellent institution, who spoke in appreciative terms of the donor. I little knew at the time that he had ended his long and useful career."

"It is thirty-four years since I first entered Mr. Ludlow's office," said Mr. Morris Wilkins. "We were then at No. 1 New street. A year after we removed to No. 11 Wall street, where we stayed till 1856. We then shifted our quarters to the Commonwealth Bank Building, No. 14 Pine street, and on May 1, 1859, we removed to No. 3 Pine street, where we had our offices for a quarter of a century, all but two days, and on April 29th of this year we entered our present quarters. We had hoped that Mr. Ludlow would have been spared to us for some years yet. We knew he was ailing, but we did now think the end was so near. We tried to shift the onus of much of the work from his shoulders and although we largely succeeded in doing so, his devotion to his clients and his interest in the business was such that he worked to the very last. His death leaves a great void in our office and we feel it deeply."

A gentleman who was present at the meeting when the new Real Estate Exchange was organized in the editorial rooms of THE RECORD AND GUIDE said: "I remember the occasion well. The most prominent real estate brokers in the city were there, and conspicuous amongst them was Mr. Ludlow. As he entered the room all the brokers respectfully made way for him, and he was soon unanimously voted to the chair. Mr. Ludlow was esteemed by all who came in contact with him. He was always ready to be of service to young men, and more than one real estate agent owes a good deal of his success to his valuable and disinterested advice."

As an instance of Mr. Ludlow's kindly disposition, the following incidents are related: Some time ago Mr. Ludlow, in conjunction with a lady friend, conceived the idea of putting up sparrows' nests on Madison square and defrayed the expenses of their construction. It was his daily practice to walk out with his dog in the mornings, taking out a large supply of bread crumbs with which to feed the birds. Sometimes he would throw the crumbs on the stoop of his house, or strew them on the window-sill. The birds came to know him and used to approach quite near. This was a source of great pleasure to him.

The flag on the Boreel Building was raised at half-mast yesterday out of respect for the deceased.

A special meeting of the Board of Directors of the Real Estate Exchange and Auction Room (Limited) has been convened for to-day at 1 o'clock to pass appropriate resolutions on the decease of the president.

It may be of interest to mention that among the large real estate sales transacted by E. H. Ludlow & Co. are the Stevens' property, corner Fifth avenue and Fifty-seventh street, and the sites for the Metropolitan Opera House, the Cotton Exchange and Mills Buildings.

"Mr. Ludlow's death," said a broker, "removes the third figure from among the well-known members of the real estate fraternity during the past month." In this connection it may be remarked that at no meeting, save perhaps the first, have the thirteen directors of the Real Estate Exchange been present. Two have died within the past month, while Mr. Francis Depau Fowler, for many years manager of the Exchange Salesroom, has been removed by death within the past three weeks.

Mr. Homer Morgan is still in the same condition. Though he has not improved, there has been no change for the worse. He is seventy-eight years old and has been in the real estate business, it is said, some forty years. He has occupied his present offices at No. 2 Pine street since 1855. It may be added that Mr. Adrian H. Muller, who is about eighty years of age and who was ailing for some time, is now sufficiently convalescent as to be able to attend the meetings of the Roosevelt Hospital, of which he is president, and to visit his offices once a week. He has been engaged in the real estate business for forty years.

The Real Estate Exchange and Auction Room, Limited.

The following is the regular ticket for directors which is to be voted upon at the annual meeting to be held on December 8th next: Hermann H. Cammann, Richard V. Harnett, Albert Bellamy, Leopold Friedman, George H. Scott, Edwin A. Cruikshank, Samuel F. Jayne, James Stokes, David G. Croly, Nathaniel Niles, Charles Buek, James L. Wells. For inspectors of the next annual election: Charles A. Schermerhorn, Robert Ray Hamilton, Frederick A. Marquand.

It will be noticed that there are three new names in the above list. These are in the place of Isaac Honig, deceased, and Messrs. Cruger and Sherwood, who have declined a re-election. Mr. Niles is president of the Tradesmen's Bank, and is a man of high standing and wide financial experience. Mr. Buek will represent the building interest of the Board, and it would be difficult to find a more competent candidate. Mr. Wells is a real estate auctioneer, who in past times has held public trusts, in all of which he maintained a high character for honesty and ability. Next year will be the most important one in the history of the Exchange, for as soon as the hall is in readiness for business the machinery of the institution will for the first time be put into operation. The death of Mr. Ludlow will necessitate the addition of another name to the above list.

About Lumber.

"Things don't show a disposition to look up in the lumber trade," said one of the well-known dealers. "There has been a dropping off since June last, and there has been no material change during the past few weeks. The building strikes affected us during the summer, about one-third to half of our business being in the building line. The strikes delayed a great number of building enterprises, which will now be postponed until next spring, and many of which will never be undertaken. The price of lumber has fallen off this year compared with last, but it cannot go lower. It has reached hard pan, and will stay where it is during the winter with but slight fluctuations. There would be no sense in selling lumber cheaper, for dealers might then as well shut up, as the present margin of profit is as low as it can fairly stand. We anticipate that with the settlement of the election, and with the liquidations naturally to take place at the end of the year, new enterprises will be developed next spring which we hope will materially improve the business of the coming year."

"Our trade has been fair," said a member of a well-known lumber firm, "and our business has been larger than last year. We deal specially in hardwoods. The furniture business, which is a large factor with lumbermen, has been greatly depressed. This has been quite an off-year. The Wall street troubles, the building strikes, the elections and the general uncertainty prevailing, have all contributed to dull times in our trade as well as others. Things are very quiet at present, and I don't look for any material improvement during the balance of this year. Next spring will probably bring us better times, but that is a long way ahead. We have found collections very poor this summer. The price of hardwoods is lower than last year, but not materially. Choice hardwoods hold steady, with little deviation from prices at the beginning of the spring. I may add that I think mahogany is growing into favor."

"I cannot report any improvement," said A. W. Budlong. "On the contrary, there has been a change for the worse during the past two or three months. Manufacturers of furniture, pianos and organs seem to be stocked up with wood, and the supply of almost everything manufactured of wood is far in excess of the demand. They are selling off goods at less than cost price, and do not wish to buy material. Railroad building is also very insignificant compared with former years. Of course the building strikes contributed their quota to the general depression. It is possible that in the course of a month or two, when the political horizon becomes cleared, things may improve, but I look for a hard winter in our trade, with a probable improvement in the spring. I am purchasing little or no stock. Some of my neighbors are buying heavily. Perhaps, considering the present low cost of material, they may be right. Prices are low and sales light. The margin of profit is not worth speaking of, and is only one-quarter of what it used to be. Prices have reached bottom. It would not pay to sell at lower figures. Mahogany has been coming into favor during the past year or two, but the margin is small. Choice hardwoods hold up stiff, but inferior qualities have been coming here for some years, and the market is being flooded with culls. This has not affected the better qualities, but has rather kept up their price. Business promised to be fair from January to May this year, but after that trade suddenly dropped off, and has been growing smaller and smaller. I anticipate but little, if any, improvement in the immediate future."

"Our prices have advanced a little recently," said Eben Peek, the well-known dealer in yellow pine flooring. "We have had an unusual depression during the past few months. This we account for by the falling off in building and manufacturing. The masons', bricklayers' and plasters' strikes put work back for a few months, and they terminated too late for many building enterprises to be undertaken before the winter. We find no preceptible improvement in sales. Prices can't go lower; if anything they must advance, for it scarcely pays expenses to sell at present figures. We shall probably have a better market next spring, as many of the building enterprises abandoned this year, owing to the strikes, will be resumed then. Our prices are firm at present quotations."

One of the devices for avoiding the payment of mortgages is for the debtor to convey his property to some person who cannot be found. The holder of the mortgage must serve a notice on the legal owner of the property, and if he cannot be found there is necessarily a delay. What appears to be a case of this kind occurred last week, and the story is thus told in the Mail and Express:

$20 REWARD FOR INFORMATION ENABLING SUBSCRIBERS TO interview William Berliner, to whom Lewis A. Mitchell conveyed real estate in September last. Address

FOSTER & THOMSON, 52 Wall Street.

Mr. Thomson, of the law firm of Foster & Thomson, said to a reporter that for one month they had been trying hard to find Mr. William Berliner, but had failed.

"What do you want to find him for?"

"For this reason: Real estate to the amount of $150,000 has been conveyed to him, and my firm want to find him so that a mortgage of a client of ours on the property can be closed. The mortgage can't be closed until Mr. Berliner is served. The property is situated at Eighty-sixth street and Fifth avenue, opposite Central Park. Who Berliner is or where he lives is a mystery. His name is not in the directory and he is not related to any of the family of Berliners in this city. I cannot say he is a dummy used to stave off the foreclosure of this mortgage, because I don't know. I know he owns property to the amount of $150,000, regularly conveyed to him and on record in legal shape, the same as an Astor would have it done. Why can't we find him? I have known foreclosures to be warded off for some time by the property being conveyed to a coachman or valet de chambre, who had no name in the directory, and whose surname the very people he is with every day hardly know. Imagine the difficulty of serving papers on this kind of people. The officers can't find them. Mr. William Berliner may own a palatial residence on the banks of the Hudson, and smoke fifty cent Havanas, and go yachting in the summer on his own craft; but for one month he has been to us a mystery, and so we inserted the advertisement this morning offering a reward of $20 to any one who will tell us where to find him."

The old charts of New York harbor are, it seems, no longer trustworthy. The Maritime Association recently sent a memorial to the Secretary of the Treasury asking for an accurate survey, owing to the discovery of reefs and rocks whose existence was not known until recently.

The World of Business.

The Merchants vs. The Lawyers.

"The plague of lawyers" from time immemorial has been a severe experience in social and commercial life, but being in no inconsiderable degree the outgrowth of that other self-imposed plague or fetich known as excessive legislation, to which modern civilization with singular fatuity stands committed. Having multitudinous laws, we must, as a matter of course, have multitudinous lawyers to interpret them, inasmuch as it would seem to be the rule that the phraseology of common life is inapplicable to the uses and forms of legislation, in the shaping of which the lawyers usually always have had, as they still have, a commanding voice. Why this should be so, upon any assumption that the race is still amenable to the canons of common sense, passes comprehension; but of the fact itself no one will dispute. Hence, it is idle to expect that we should get rid of one plague until we get rid of that which is its antecedent, excessive, or superfluous, law-making. What earthly reason is there why laws should not be enacted in such manner as every man or woman capable of reading should not comprehend them as he or she comprehends the meaning of a book or newspaper? Why necessitate the employment of an interpreter, or clothe the decretals of the State in "dark sayings," which not only "puzzle the will" but perplex the mind and confuse the understanding? Without stopping to enquire why this is so, it is an encouraging sign of a coming change for the better to note the restiveness of the commercial body under the burthen thus imposed upon it. There is no class of the community upon whom that burthen has pressed with more severity than the merchants, whether as regards the vexations which are entailed by "the law's delay," or the losses which are its invariable concomitants, and it is to the credit of the mercantile classes, therefore, that as a mere matter of saving time and money they are everywhere favoring the idea of settling their disputes among themselves, instead of transferring them to the judiciary. Some one has asserted that it is the business of a lawyer to reconcile conflicting analogies; but the practical good sense of the age is gradually approaching the conviction that it is better to have nothing to reconcile, and that the law should be promulgated in terms which would regard intelligibility rather than mystification. Until this conviction makes itself practically felt, however, the commercial body especially do well to take the law into their own hands, as it were, and administer it with the invocation of as few lawyers as possible. Our own country has successfully led the way in the principle or system of commercial arbitration, and other countries are, under like stress of litigation, agitating in favor of its adoption. At a recent meeting of the London Chamber of Commerce, remarkable not less for its unanimity than for its eminent representative character, the expression of sentiment in favor of it was very emphatic, notwithstanding the inbred English attachment to prescription and precedent; and the result of it all was the hearty endorsement of a bill now before the Lords to promote the more general adoption of arbitration in commercial cases. Sir George Chambers, who presided, did not hesitate to declare that while he had many friends in the legal profession, he would venture to tell them that "he thought their education and training scarcely fitted them for dealing with commercial questions;" besides, "lawyers themselves were often so puzzled by the Acts as they stood that they really scarcely knew how to decide on a case put to them." Mr. Hubbard, M. P., also went as far as to say "lawyers often lost sight of the chief point in a commercial dispute upon which commercial men would go." Lord Bramwell, author of the bill referred to, said he had been a lawyer all his life, fifty years at least, and when cases came before him and his professional associates, what had they to do? They had to look into a variety of text-books, and in those text-books they had the opinions of the many ingenious gentlemen who had written them, and who had told them what their opinions were in comparison with what Justice A. had said. Then they had to bear in mind what Justices B. and C. had said. He would like to know how any one could possibly prefer that condition of things to having a plain, orderly, logical statement put down as to what the law was, and not what one would conclude that it was from such considerations as he had mentioned. To his mind it was infinitely better that they should know what the law positively was, and that it should be plainly stated. The Chamber could not get rid of law, but they could abate legislation. Another speaker said there were two classes of arbitration. He had been engaged in an arbitration conducted by lawyers, and where the arbitrator was a lawyer. The arbitration lasted eleven years, cost £60,000, ruined one of the parties, and was never decided. That was a specimen of legal arbitration; but the arbitration which they at that meeting had in contemplation was of a very different character. They proposed to get on without the lawyers, and that merchants should frame their own cases and settle their own disputes. We do not know in what light gentlemen of the bar will contemplate these significant manifestations of commercial sentiment; but it can hardly be with feelings of complacency, and it does not mend their case to add that the London Chamber has likewise formally pledged itself to the procurement of the adoption of arbitration, not only in Britain but in all other countries with which England has commercial connections; that is to say, it is to become a question of international interest. The following resolution, accordingly, was unanimously adopted: "That this meeting request the Council of the Chamber to urge the Foreign Office to communicate with the governments of all the States in which tribunals of commerce are in operation, requesting them to bring in a law or to take such steps as may be necessary to make arbitration clauses."—Commercial Bulletin.

Transcontinental Traffic.

The despatch from New York published in the Alta on Thursday last, in relation to the fast freight overland project to be put in operation by an arrangement between the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe and the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy roads, is the best news to many of our California producers that has come for many a day in the line of traffic and profit. It is proposed to run freight trains through in nine days. This will enable the fruits and other products of California of perishable nature, to be delivered in New York in that brief time, and in the intermediate great cities in less time—in from six to eight days. By a newly invented process in the packing of fruit, the most delicate varieties can be sent forward in nearly ripe condition, and this will be of incalculable benefit to the fruit-growers and dealers of the State. It is the judgment of the most accurate in taste and the most experienced in fruits, that many of the varieties of California fruit are not equaled, in either appearance or quality, by any other in the world. The celebrated peaches of New Jersey and Delaware are surpassed by varieties in California, and the aggregate crop here is better than that of either of those States. Similarly is it with the cherries, the plums, the prunes, the apricots, the nectarines raised in this State, and in every variety of berries, the strawberry, the blackberry and the raspberry, particularly, we lead the world, as we do also in grapes and melons. The citric fruits of California are rapidly and surely making their way to preference over any other in markets, at home and distant. The favor which the fruits of California have found in the great cities eastward, in Chicago and Cincinnati, in New York and Boston, in Philadelphia and Baltimore, and in St. Louis and the cities of the Southwest, justifies the belief that when the transportation shall be better adjusted to the requirements and capacity of the product and traffic, there will be tons forwarded for every hundred pounds now sent on.—Alta California.

The Panama Canal.

The latest information regarding the Panama Canal gives a discouraging view of its financial condition and material progress, and there seems every reason for the visit which M. de Lesseps is about to make to it. It is said that the company has already spent one hundred millions with very little to show for it in the way of accomplished work or even of preparation for it, while its interest charges already reach the enormous sum of six millions a year. It is likely enough that there is some exaggeration in this, and that the official accounts would show a better balance sheet. At any rate the reports are not more discouraging, considering the magnitude of the work, than were those from the Suez Canal in its early stages, and there is certainly no reason to believe that the work will be abandoned. We have always supposed that the history of the Panama Canal would be that of many other great enterprises, the bankruptcy of the original companies, the squandering and even the gross waste of money; doubt, discouragement and, perhaps, despair in various stages, the renewal of efforts, and finally the triumph. The simple question of its ultimate success is whether enough work has been done to prevent abandonment, and this is probably already the case. At any rate, it is well for the United States to understand or to take for granted that the Panama Canal will be finished in one form or another, and to have a clear and distinct idea of the policy in regard to it. There may be little or nothing in the late rumors that the French government was already making preparations to assume the work of finishing the canal and establishing a protectorate over it, but it is certainly not unreasonable to expect some such action either now or in the future. The time will inevitably come when the work will come to a standstill from the exhaustion of the funds of the present company, and when it will have to be taken up either by a nation or by a fresh corporation. The former is the most likely, and such a prize for ambition and material wealth as the levying of tolls upon the commerce of the Atlantic and Pacific, and the command of the gateway of the continents will not go begging for want of nations eager to take it. But to the United States it is not only a prize, but a necessity, for the security of its national development as for the benefit of its future commerce. It is impossible to allow any foreign nation or congress of nations to hold possession of the waterway between its possessions, and, as a matter of fact, it is as essential that it should hold the Panama Canal as that it should have unobstructed way for the Pacific railroads. All this should be understood and accepted as a definite principle of national policy, to be acted upon at the first necessity or occasion. And it should be understood, also, that whatever discouragements may prevail in the building of the Panama Canal, and however slowly the work may be done, that it has now reached a stage when its eventual completion is assured, and that if the United States is not ready to secure it some other nation will be. We might have built the Nicaragua Canal if we had chosen to, and probably with less cost and more satisfactory results. But the Panama Canal is now being built, and there is nothing now to be done but to accept it and to secure it.—Providence Journal.

Phenomenal Cities.

At the beginning of the nineteenth century there was not a city in America north of Mexico that contained as many as 75,000 inhabitants. Philadelphia led with 70,262, New York coming in for the second place, with a little over 60,000; Baltimore third, with 26,000, and Boston fourth, with 24,000. When the century was ten years old, Philadelphia was still the leading city, having 96,664, or 271 more than New York, Baltimore running close toward 50,000, and Boston having 15,000 less than Baltimore. Oakland, in this State, in 1880 outranked Boston in 1810 by over 2,000. In 1820 there were but two cities in the United States with a population of 100,000 and over, and New York was the first, with 123,000, Philadelphia having dropped back to the second place, with 108,000. West of the Alleghany Mountains there was no place dignified by the name of city. Cincinnati had less than 10,000, St. Louis less than 5,000, Pittsburg less than 8,000. There was no such place as Chicago till after 1830, and its population as late as 1840 was less than the one-half of Stockton's in 1880. New Orleans had more than trebled her inhabitants from the opening of the century to the end of the second decade, and ranked as the fifth city, and next after Boston. In 1830 New York showed above 203,000, and Philadelphia but 167,000, Baltimore still ahead of Boston, but not half equal to Philadelphia, and New Orleans still holding the fifth place. There were still but two cities with 100,000 and over. In 1840 New York had 312,000, Philadelphia 258,000, Baltimore 134,000, New Orleans 102,000, and Boston but 93,000, having exchanged rank with New Orleans, Cincinnati coming next to Boston, with only half as many inhabitants. In 1840 the population of St. Louis was but 16,469, and there were eighteen cities ahead of her, Washington, with 23,000, being one of them. The mid-century decade census returned six cities with 100,000 and over; two with more than 300,000, and one, New York, with 515,547. Boston, with 136,000, had slipped past New Orleans, which has not yet regained her rank of 1840. In the middle of the century there were six cities west of the Alleghanies, including New Orleans and San Francisco, rated above 30,000, and Chicago was not one of them. St. Louis had risen to 77,000, Louisville to 43,000, and San Francisco from 500 in 1840 to 34,776 in 1850. The population of Chicago in that year was but 29,963. She has added over 600,000 to it in the last thirty-four years according to her latest local census. The whole urban population of the Mississippi valley, including Pittsburg, New Orleans, and counting in San Francisco, was in 1850 but 434,242 of cities above 30,000. New York alone had 81,000 more than all the cities west of the Alleghanies over 30,000 each. So far there had been nothing of that phenomenal growth which has since made some of the western cities the wonder of the world. In 1860 the cities of the Union ranked in this order: New York first, Philadelphia second, Brooklyn third with 266,000, Baltimore fourth, Boston fifth, New Orleans sixth, Cincinnati seventh, St. Louis eighth and but 200 behind Cincinnati, and Chicago ninth with 109,000—an increase of 80,000 or nearly 280 per cent. in ten years. The increase of New York in the same years was but 290,000 or about 56 per cent. The seventh decade of the century was ushered in with the accompaniment of the most appalling civil war of the historic era of the human race. For four years it was a check upon urban growth as well as the general increase of population throughout the country. Hitherto the ratio of increase had exceeded 33 per cent. per decade. But in the decade from 1860 to 1870 it fell to but a little over 22½ per cent. for the whole country. In this decade New York increased but 136,000 or less than 18 per cent., but Chicago's addition to her population from 1860 to 1870 was 189,000 or 144 per cent. and she took rank as the fifth city of the nation, having passed Cincinnati, Baltimore, Boston and New Orleans. San Francisco had advanced from 56,000 to 149,000—an increase of 93,000 or nearly 168 per cent. in the decade. We had caught up with and passed Washington, Albany and Louisville, all of which outranked us in 1860 and we had beaten every city but Chicago in the per cent. of our growth. The four cities ahead of Chicago in 1870 were New York, Philadelphia, Brooklyn and St. Louis, though the right of the latter to the fourth place was questioned by Chicago and doubted by the public. In 1870 there were 14 cities having over 100,000 each, 8 over 200,000, 4 over 300,000, and 2 over 600,000. New York had but 58,000 less than 1,000,000. From the beginning of the century her increase to 1870 was nearly 900,000. The census of 1880 returned 20 cities having over 100,000, 10 over 200,000, 7 over 300,000, 4 over 500,000, 2 over 800,000 and 1 (New York) with 1,206,299. The rank of the cities having over 500,000 each was New York first, Philadelphia second, Brooklyn third, Chicago fourth, with 503,000, her increase being 205,000, or nearly 80 per cent. The rank of San Francisco was tenth and next to Cincinnati and our increase from 1870 was 84,000 or a little over 56 per cent. We had passed New Orleans and were rapidly closing on Cincinnati, having distanced Washington, Louisville and Buffalo. Here we might rest the case upon the phenomenal growth of American cities in the short space of 80 years, one of them, conspicuous above all the rest, having advanced in the last half of this era from 4,479 to 503,000; but this appears to be hardly more than a fair beginning of our western urban growth. Wonderful as the growth of Chicago and San Francisco has been, it is being surpassed by several other places in the valley of the Mississippi which twenty years ago had no rank above that of small villages. In 1850 the place on the Missouri River about one mile below the mouth of the Kaw, known as Kansas City, contained only 400 inhabitants. It had risen to 4,000 in 1860, but for four years remained nearly stationary, because of the civil war. In 1870 it was returned by the federal census as having 32,000, and in 1880 at 56,000 population. It now claims upon the most plausible showing 90,000, and a volume of business greater than that of St. Louis or Cincinnati, Louisville or Pittsburg. In the shipment of live stock and curing of pork and beef it ranks as the third city in the Union, and its present growth in population and wealth is believed to be at a higher rate per cent. than that of Chicago from 1860 to 1870—her golden decade. In the year 1849 the territory of Minnesota was organized out of a part of the then Indian territory of the Northwest. In 1850 President Fillmore appointed the first territorial governor, who set up the capital at St. Paul, at the falls of St. Anthony, on the headwaters of the Mississippi. The whole population in the middle of the century was but 840 souls, many of them Indians and half-breeds. In 1860 the population of St. Paul had risen to 10,600. In 1870 the census returned it at 20,300. In 1880 at 41,498, an increase of 104 per cent. in the decade. There is nothing phenomenal in this, for we have seen that Chicago and San Francisco both beat it from 1860 to 1870. But since 1880 local censuses—composed from business directories and school censuses—show the following increases: Population in 1880, 41,498; in 1881, 50,900; in 1882, 75,835, and in 1883, 106,003. A more recent publication of estimate by the St. Paul Chamber of Commerce places the population in April, 1884, at 123,000, presenting credible vouchers that it is not exaggerated. Here, then, is an increase of 81,502 in three years and four months, or 196 per cent., or within a very small fraction of 5 per cent. per month, which is equal to 600 per cent. in a decade. This more than doubles the highest rate of Chicago at her best. The neighboring city of Minneapolis, in sight of St. Paul, and destined soon to be a part of her, as Westminster is of London, or Allegheny City of Pittsburg, has increased almost, if not quite, as fast. In fact, the census show a more rapid increase in Minneapolis than in St. Paul. The figures are: Minneapolis in 1870, 13,066; in 1880, 46,887; increase, 33,821, or nearly 260 per cent. St. Paul in 1870, 20,030; 1880, 41,473; an increase of 21,343, or 106 per cent. If Minneapolis has kept up this rate of increase—and there is good authority that she has surpassed it—since 1880, she must now have over 80,000, and probably has, in fact, 90,000 population; the two together over 210,000. Here, then, at the head of the father of rivers, right in the geological centre of the continent, has sprung up in less than one average lifetime, from nothing, a city already great in population, wealth and business. If we treat these Minnesota cities as one—and they soon will be—and if we reckon up a growth for the next ten years equal to that claimed for the last three, it is inevitable that they must overtake and pass St. Louis before 1893.—San Francisco Chronicle.

About Wide Streets.

The Builder makes a strong and sensible protest against the unreasoning fashion, so prevalent in this country, of laying out streets, in places where land is cheap, of an absurd width, increasing in this way the cost of construction and maintenance, without securing any advantage whatever. On the contrary, it is reported on medical authority that the excessive width of the streets in certain towns in Illinois has become a source of nuisance and of positive danger to the health of persons living near them. These streets, on account of the expense of a proper pavement over so large a surface, are usually left with a simple gravel or mud surface, and are soon trodden in wet weather into a filthy paste, which diffuses in warm weather exhalations proportionate to its area, and in a dry time disintegrates into a semi-organic dust, which is blown in clouds over the neighborhood. Even in our large cities the approach to one of those expanses of filthy pavement, which we complacently call "breathing places," is generally marked by so strong a smell of garbage and street mud as to suggest the idea that their vicinity is not always an advantage, and in less settled places the trouble is increased by the dust. No one is likely to deny that wide streets with fresh air are desirable, but wide streets exhaling the odors of acres of filth are the reverse; and it is strange that no one should have thought before of the propriety of keeping such thoroughfares, so far as the traffic will permit, in grass, restricting the roadway to the smallest practicable limit. If a street 100 feet wide, in a city whose prosperity is a matter rather of the future, could be laid out with a 14-foot roadway on each side next the footpath, and 50 feet of well-kept grass and shrubs between it, would be far more beautiful and dignified, as well as much cheaper, than the ordinary "avenue" of suburban towns. A good example of a street of this kind has been set in the Commonwealth avenue in Boston, where four rows of elm trees, with grass and gravel-walks between, and a narrow roadway on each side, make up a street 200 feet wide, and, as now planned, more than five miles long; and in the upper part of New York the abuttors on a certain wide street have united in carrying out a somewhat similar plan.—American Architect.

The Nicaragua Canal.

A despatch from Washington, October 14, says: A statement has been made that the President of Nicaragua has written a letter to this city in which it is declared that the American Canal concessions expired the 30th of September, and that there is a probability of the French Panama Company obtaining possession of the rights for the securing of which Secretary Frelinghuysen last session endeavored to obtain an appropriation of $250,000. From diplomatic sources it is learned that this statement is probably true. The money which the Democratic House refused to appropriate was to have been expended in satisfying certain property interests belonging to citizens of Nicaragua, and not for the payment of any amount to American concessionaries. It was charged in the House that the amount asked for would largely go into the pockets of General Grant, General Beale and others interested in the Nicaraguan route. A Central American minister is authority for the statement that not a single dollar would have been so expended. Senor Butres, Minister for Nicaragua, Guatemala and San Salvador, who conducted the negotiations for that side, was in favor of telling the House the exact facts, in so far as Secretary Frelinghuysen overruled this, the appropriation was lost through his action; but full explanations were made to the Committees on Foreign Relations and Appropriations in both houses; and all four committees agreed in the wisdom of the policy. Behind the ostensible hostility to making secret appropriations was the active lobbying of ex-Senator Gwinn, of California, a well-known friend of De Lesseps, who, under the pretense of sustaining certain claims in what is known as the Chiriqui grant, successfully resisted among the Democrats the passage of the appropriation. It was believed that Mr. Gwinn's interest was far more controlled by De Lesseps's wishes than by any other motive. There still remains a possibility of the United States securing the route, provided the Nicaraguan authorities remain as friendly as in the past. President Barrios, of Guatemala, the leading spirit in Central America, is very strongly opposed to permitting the Nicaraguan route to pass under the control of any European company or government.—New Orleans Picayune.

Real Estate Department.

The past has been a broken week in the real estate market due to the Thanksgiving holiday, which, of course, interfered with the transaction of business. Everything is dull, but there ought to be an increased volume of business between now and the Christmas holidays. As the Exchange will be open soon after the New Year we will probably see an early revival of business next spring. During the coming week there will be several desirable sales.

A large number of foreclosure sales are announced for next week, and the property involved includes costly private residences, stores, tenements, factories and vacant lots. A complete list will be found elsewhere.

The conveyances printed to-day show that a great many trades have been consummated recently. Among the most important is the exchange by Siegmund T. Meyer of five tenements on East Fifty-second street for the four-story frame dwelling and stable, with grounds, at One Hundred and Fifty-fifth street, Fort Washington, belonging to Wellington Clapp, and C. P. Huntington's residence and stable No. 4 West Fifty-fourth street to John D. Rockefeller for vacant lots on the northeast corner of Fifth avenue and Seventy-second street.

On Wednesday, December 3d, Mr. Richard V. Harnett will sell five choice houses on the east side. He will dispose of Nos. 33, 35, 41, 43 and 45 East Sixty-third street. These are fine four-story residences between Madison and Park avenues, on the north side of the street. They vary from 16 to 21 feet front, but all are 60 feet deep, with a brick extension of 12 feet additional. This is a trustee's sale and furnishes a rare chance for securing a very desirable residence. The same auctioneer, on the 5th inst., will dispose of a corner lot at the southeast corner of the Grand Boulevard and One Hundred and Fifty-first street; also a lot adjoining on One Hundred and Fifty-first street.

John F. B. Smyth will sell, on December 3d, quite a number of parcels of desirable property on Fourteenth street, Fifteenth street, Ninth avenue and Eleventh avenue. Persons desirous of purchasing would do well to secure maps so as to see the precise location of these various parcels, all of which are desirable investments.

Gossip of the Week.

John Gorman has sold, for F. R. Walker, two four-story stone front dwellings, Nos. 100 and 102 East Sixty-first street, northeast corner of Park avenue, to Mrs. E. Strong, and for the latter to Mr. Walker in exchange the four four-story stone front flats Nos. 339 and 341 East Seventy-seventh street and Nos. 229 and 231 East Eightieth street. Mr. Walker has resold the four flats to Karl Wallach.

Frederick Reed has sold for J. V. Tunnell the brown stone dwelling No. 132 East One Hundred and Twenty-fourth street to Mrs. Filer for $10,150, and the brown stone dwelling No. 66 East One Hundred and Twenty-fourth street to Clarence Betts for $12,000.

J. J. Smith has sold a lot on the east side of Riverside Drive, 54 feet south of Ninety-fourth street, 15x67, for $2,100.

E. Kilpatrick reports that the dwelling No. 59 East Eightieth street, the sale of which was reported last week, brought $39,250 instead of about $34,000.

Adrian G. Hegeman has sold the lots Nos. 234, 236 and 238 Mulberry street, 75x100, for $22,000, and Nos. 114 and 116 Norfolk street, 50x100, for $19,000.

It is reported that W. H. De Forest has sold several of the eight three-story and basement brick and stone dwellings owned by him on Sixth avenue, between One Hundred and Thirtieth and One Hundred and Thirty-first streets.

M. Littman has purchased four lots on the north side of Fifty-fourth street, 175 feet west of Tenth avenue. Broker, T. B. Robertson.

Ottinger Bros. have sold the property No. 18 West Third street, 20x75, for $12,500, to Louis Chardon.

Brooklyn.

Leonard Moody has sold a plot, 150x123, with the three-story frame dwelling, being part of the Haselhurst estate and located on the corner of New York and St. Marks avenue, for $30,000, to a Colorado miner; a two-story brown stone dwelling, 20x42x131, No. 103 Lincoln place, to Albert Korber for $9,000, and the two-story frame dwelling No. 391 Dean street, 20x100, to Mr. McArdle for $4,500.

There is a tempest in a teapot in Brooklyn over the contract awarded for building the new Hall of Records. It is charged that corrupt means were used to induce the Supervisors to adopt this particular contract; but then it will be remembered that the same allegations were made and disproved respecting the purchase of a site for a Federal Postoffice. It is beginning to be impossible to do any public work in this country without being suspected of rank dishonesty. The competitors whose contracts are not accepted are apt to unite in defaming their successful rival. The tendency of this state of things is to make public office-holders dishonest. They naturally conclude that if they get the "name" they may as well have the "gain." In any event Brooklyn is to be congratulated upon having a new Hall of Records; we need one very badly in this city.

Out Among the Builders.

John Mulholland will break ground in a day or two preparatory to the erection of four five-story improved brick tenements on the easterly side of First avenue, 50.5 north of Forty-eighth street. They will each have a frontage of 25 feet and a depth of 70 or 80 feet. The architect is J. C. Burne.

Thomas E. Tripler intends to erect three five-story brick and brown stone tenements and stores on the southeast corner of Avenue B and Seventeenth street, at a cost of about $42,000. The architect will be F. W. Klemt. The latter also has plans for a five-story brick and brown stone improved flat, 25x84, to be built at 372 East Tenth street, for P. Lyding, to cost $17,000.

Julius Kastner has the designs for alterations and additions to the North German Lloyd Hall, Hoboken, 40x55; owners, Mayer & Stenneck.

J. M. Pinkney intends to erect ten three-story flats and stores on Ninth avenue. Two will be 22x60, and eight 19.8x55 each. The plans are being drawn by J. H. Valentine. This improvement has been previously reported.

John Brandt has the sketches on the boards for a five-story brown stone flat, 28x85, to be erected on the north side of Seventieth street, 72 feet west of Second avenue, for Isaac Harvey, at an estimated cost of $18,500.

Henry Davidson has the plans for a two-and-a-half-story frame cottage, 20x40, to be erected on Tenth avenue and One Hundred and Seventieth street, for William Dick.

Brooklyn.

Th. Engelhardt has plans in hand for a two-story brick factory, 214x85, and a two-story brick shed, 385x100, to be erected at the foot of North Sixth street for Paul Weidman at a cost of $50,000; a five-story brick brewery, 72x62, to be erected on the corner of Evergreen avenue and Forrest street for S. Liebmann's Sons—the cost will be about $40,000; a one-story brick boiler house, 21x78, with alterations to ice house and brewery, on Myrtle avenue, near Wyckoff avenue, for Messrs. Welz and Zerweck, to cost about $43,000, and a two-story frame dwelling, 22x48, on Evergreen avenue, near Bleecker street, for Ernst Loerch, to cost about $2,200.

H. Vollweiler is preparing plans for a three-story frame hotel, 68x86, to be erected at Middle Village, L. I., for Mr. Times, to cost about $8,000; four-story frame double tenement with stores, 30x50, to be erected on the east side of Bushwick avenue, 50 feet south of Prospect street, for Jacob Klein; cost, $5,000; three two-story frame dwellings, 20x40 each, on the south side of Prospect street, east of Bushwick avenue, at a cost of $2,900 each, for Jacob Klein.

Contractors' Notes.

Proposals for furnishing the materials and labor, and doing the work required for constructing a house for the Fire Department, to be erected on Old Slip, between Front and Water streets, for Hook and Ladder Company No. 15, will be received by the Board of Commissioners at the head of the Fire Department, at No. 155 Mercer street, until 11 o'clock A. M., Thursday, December 11.

Bids or estimates will be received at the Department of Public Works until Friday, December 5, 1884, at 12 o'clock M., for regulating, grading, paving, &c.

Proposals will be received by the School Trustees of the Twelfth Ward, at the Hall of the Board of Education, corner of Grand and Elm streets, until Thursday the 11th day of December, at 4 o'clock P. M., for erecting an addition to Grammar School-house No. 43, on the north side of West 129th street.

Proposals will also be received at the same place by the School Trustees of the Twenty-third Ward, until 9.30 o'clock A. M., on the 11th day of December, for iron stairways at Primary Department Grammar School-house No. 60, on Courtland avenue, near 148th street.

A meeting of residents on Fifth and Madison avenues took place a few evenings ago, to take steps to restrict the former thoroughfare above Fifty-ninth street to a park road. It will be recollected that this was first advocated by Mr. John D. Crimmins in our columns some time ago, and the suggestion has met with widespread approval. If drays and carts were removed from the upper part of Fifth avenue the value of property on that line would be appreciably enhanced thereby.

The Municipal Council of Paris has adopted a plan of the Metropolitan Railway for the construction of an underground road through the principal thoroughfares of that city. The authorities concede to the projectors the subsoil of some of the widest streets, thus reducing the cost per kilometer to the expense of constructing the long tunnel and two tracks. The underground road will be at a depth of eight metres below the surface of the earth.

There are about 90,000 dwelling houses in Paris. A recent municipal law ordains that henceforward no flats shall be less than 8 feet high, that in streets 25 feet wide the height of the houses must not exceed 50 feet; in streets between 25 and 32 feet wide, the height must not exceed 50 feet; in streets between 32 and 65 feet, the height must not exceed 60 feet; in streets above 65 feet wide, the height must not exceed 65 feet, and no buildings are to have more than seven stories, all included.

BUILDING MATERIAL MARKET.

BRICKS.—The week's business has been more or less broken by the holiday and unfavorable weather, and altogether it was a pretty dull market for Common Hards, but especially so on the undesirable offerings. Buyers for either early consumption or winter stock are now more than ever inclined to select closely on quality, and as a natural sequence the best cargoes are disposed of with the greatest ease. That advantage, however, confers no benefit upon sellers in the way of price, and when former top figures can be obtained, say $6 25 or exceptionally $6.50 per M, it is generally deemed judicious to accept them. Other descriptions grade down in valuation on a somewhat irregular line of figures, according to condition or the opportunity that may be afforded either buyer or seller for forcing some fractional favor. The supply has been pretty full and rarely made more than temporary shrinkage, as the moment vessels were unloaded they were sent back for additional cargoes. the idea being apparently to get forward as much stock as possible before the close of navigation. There seems to be an impression that the winter consumption will not be very liberal.

CEMENT.—Everything remains in pretty much the same general conditions before noted, with the exception of the natural seasonable shrinkage of demand. Foreign grades do not receive many new orders, but current arrivals have been smaller, and with most of the standard brands sold ahead there is not much of an accumulation of desirable stock, and values are well maintained. Domestic Portland manufacturers are also catching up on their orders, but making no important accumulation of stock. Rosendale sells occasionally in a small way to local dealers, who want a little more to fill up assortments, but new demand generally is light and the market dull. The shipments from the "Creek" of late have been full, as manufacturers and buyers both felt the necessity of some hurry to fill out the remaining amounts due on contract, especially for Eastern shipment. This movement appears to have produced a wonderful effect upon some one up the river, and the trade have been laughing all the week over a dispatch sent to a local daily telling of stupendous business doing along Rondout Creek, the great pressure upon the capacity of the mills, and the terrible strain upon the poor longshoremen in the efforts to promptly load vessels. There was also said to be a demand far in excess of the supply, and this was certainly a great piece of news—to those who are trying to sell.

LATH.—Receivers as a rule are looking upon the market in a cheerful, confident manner and seem fully convinced of their ability to hold the advantage for some time to come. Local demand alone, it is thought, would exhaust about all the stock expected to come forward and beside that there is a display of interest among out-of-town customers calculated to take anything there may be to spare in the way of attractive and desirable cargoes. Arrivals since our last have been fairish but a great many were again found to be under contract and it is claimed that many customers could not get the stock they wanted. We are advised to quote $2.25 for M. as an inside figure and have reports of a refusal to sell to arrive at a higher rate.

LIME.—It is pretty much the same old market all through. Every arrival of stock from any point it is claimed finds a place without much difficulty and while dealers are filling up a little less than last season it is expected that everything likely to become available in first hands will be wanted.

LUMBER.—The condition of affairs on the general market remains about the same as last noted. The natural tendency of values is to stiffen somewhat, and here and there we find expressions of positive strength where the quality is fully attractive, but there is no decided upward tendency, nor do holders of the supply expect much of an improvement at present. All classes of buyers are slow and cautious in their movements, and the line of consumption is confined to ordinary channels with some few manufacturers already commencing to talk about having enough stock to carry them to the end of the year. From first hands the offerings continue to a fair extent, but sellers are refraining from any attempt to hurry matters, and, as a rule, find that a little patient holding brings them desirable customers. The closing of interior navigation, of course, still further shuts off many points of supply, though if necessary it is a comparatively easy matter to obtain railway transportation.

Eastern Spruce does not have an open or direct demand calculated to increase shipments in this direction even were manufacturers in a position to send forward many supplies. The market, however, is in shape to exhaust about all coming forward, and as the cost is considered fair enough, many dealers are willing to add a little to stock even where accumulations already on hand are comparatively full. Specials are not plenty, and as usual at this season all have to go either to Portland or St. Johns to be filled, and that strengtheus the position of such manufacturers as may remain at work. Randoms are anywhere from $12.50 to $15, according to cut, etc, and from thence figures will run up to $17 for random.

White Pine secures a little demand for building purposes, is called for by manufacturers of some specialties, and occasionally receives attention from exporters, but the general market is neither active nor promising and it is more common to hear complaints than expressions of confidence. As before noted, no class of buyers appears in any way alarmed as to probable ability to get stock when they want it, and now and then they seem to intimate that they have rather more on hand than can be considered comfortable in the present condition of trade. Values are nominally unchanged. We quote at $16@17 for West India shipping boards; $18@27 for South American do.; $18@14 for box boards, and $16@18 for extra do.

Yellow Pine has only a moderate, uncertain demand and a brief statement of the case would be to simply repeat the "dull and nominally unchanged" report. Supplies appear to be holding out well and dealers show little desire to add to stocks, while shipping orders f. o. b. at South are irregular and not altogether satisfactory. We quote as follows: Randoms, $17@19.50 per M; Specials, $19.50 @21 do.; Green Flooring Boards, $20@22; Dry, do., do., $22@23; Siding, $20@22 do.; Cargoes f. o. b. at Atlantic ports, $18@15 for rough, and $18@20 for dressed Cargoes f. o. b. at Gulf ports, $12@14 for rough, and $20@21 for dressed.

Hardwoods continue in very fair demand from regular sources, and while by no means brilliant or unusually promising, the market has pretty good form considering the general situation of the lumber trade. Prices vary somewhat without, however, showing anything to the detriment of holders of attractive and carefully selected stock. The export movement is slow at the moment. We quote at wholesale rates by car load as follows: Walnut, $65@100 per M.; ash, $33@40 do.; oak, $30@55 do.; maple, $20@32.50 do.; chestnut, $25@30 do.; cherry, $50@80 do.; whitewood, $27@35 do., do.; elm, $22@25; hickory, $45@50 do.

GENERAL LUMBER NOTES.

STATE.

ALBANY MARKET.

The Argus reports for week ending November 25 as follows:

There were large sales and shipments during the week, probably more than in any previous week of the season, embracing all kinds of lumber. Receipts by the northern canal have about stopped, but there is a large quanity of Michigan Pine on the way from Tonawanda, all of which will probably arrive before Sunday next, on which day the canals will be closed for the season. The stock of pine is large, probably more than was ever before on the yards of the District. It is also very well assorted and much of it well seasoned. Prices are without change. Spruce and Hemlock have gone off lively and the stock on hand is light. The receipts have been small, as the water at the mills is still very low. Hardwoods are in light stock, though all kinds can still be found on the yards. Shingles are in fair supply. Lath are getting scarce, but will be kept in stock till the close of navigation.

THE WEST.

LUMBERMAN'S GAZETTE,
BAY CITY, MICH.

It is now pretty definitely settled that the end has about been reached so far as lumber piling is concerned on the Saginaw River. Nearly all the mills closed down last week, and the cold weather on Monday induced the few remaining ones to halt; and unless there should be another unexpected warm spell the occupation of those who have been industriously occupied in kicking out of it what little vitality there was left in the market is gone. It will be understood, therefore, that the elements interfered in the interest of these men, when they were persistently working to their own disadvantage.

If the estimate of nearly 600,000,000 feet of lumber piled on the docks, and 200,000,000 feet of logs in the store booms of the mill owners and back in the Tittabawassee and other booms, is not too high, it will be observed that a very small stock of new logs will be sufficient to satisfy the demand which is likely to be made on this market next season.

The shipments from the river last week only footed up 12,00,000 feet, or about half the usual quantity, and not a single board of this went to Tonawanda. Prominent shippers inform us that there is not another cargo to go forward this year, and the naked poles of the vessels in the river which have been dismantled testify to the fact that lumber shipments have ceased.

Prices are unsettled as formerly, but it is expected now that the manufacturing season has closed, that settled values will be resolved on when buyers make their appearance to secure stock to enter into next year's consumption.

The Northwestern Lumberman says of the Chicago market:

The stimulation given to demand by the cut rate to Missouri River points has brought more lumber to market within the past ten days than would otherwise have been the case. About October 1 there were indications that the cargo market season was tapering off, and would likely close early. The demand was slack, freight rates low, and vessel owners inclined to shelve their craft for the winter. But when the 5-cent southwestern rate was declared the heavy shippers began to want piece stuff and common inch lumber, so as to avoid, as far as possible, the necessity of giving yard prices to their neighbors. The prospect of placing a number of cargoes, and doing so at prices a little better than had prevailed, induced the sending forward from mill points considerably more lumber than was expected previously to the cutting of southwestern rates. The effect of the new demand has been to increase receipts and stiffen prices, and thus put a nub end on to a rather dragging season.

While prices have not greatly differed from those of last week, on most sales there have been several instances in which piece stuff has sold at $8.75, an advance of 25 cents a thousand on ordinary sales. The higher figure has been realized in cases where the cargo was very desirable, and suited the purpose of the yard that was catering to the Kansas demand.

No. 2 inch is selling at about former prices, though instances are frequent in which dry lumber has sold at $1 above quotations. A special demand has prevailed, for the reason before mentioned, and when that had to be met the purchaser was willing to pay outside prices. Shingles are selling at mostly unchanged prices, though there is a tendency to outside figures.

The continuance of fine weather is likely to cause considerable lumber to be sent forward, notwithstanding the lateness of the season. The regular east shore barge lines will continue to run as long as the weather will permit.

Quotations are as follows:

Piece stuff, green	$8 50@ 8 75
Long timbers and joists, green	10 00@12 00
Coarse common	9 00@ 9 50
Boards and strips, No. 2, green	9 50@11 00
" medium, green	11 00@15 00
" No. 1, green	15 00@18 00
High grade	18 00@22 00

Contrary to all expectations the hardwood trade is still on its back. It is generally conceded that the present is about as dull a period as ever known to the Chicago handlers, though one or two concerns claim that their trade so far this month is a little better than for a corresponding period last month. But whatever the degree of depression may be it is a sufficiently low one to make this a very cold season for the hardwood men.

Quotations remain as before, with the same uncertainty as to actual going prices. This is a great time for the scalper, and he is getting in his work to the frequent disgust of the regular dealer. Receipts by rail continue moderate in amount, but vessel arrivals hardly ever report any hardwood cargoes. The season of navigation has about closed, and prices on maple, beech, basswood, and other woods that largely reach this market by lake, can be expected to show more firmness.

The Lumberman and Manufacturer of Minneapolis says:

St. Louis has shipped as low as 370 M and as high as 780 M per day during the last fifteen days, which is about half of last year's trade for the same time. A letter from there reports "tremendous dullness." Sales are very light at all points along the river, and prices are unsteady, especially from Davenport down. The Wisconsin lumber holders are getting ugly over the situation. They are unable to see their way clear for winter operations. With unsalable stocks of lumber on hand many of the railroad mills will do little or nothing this winter. There will be a reduction of the log cut on the Black River, but the Wisconsin and Chippewa will approximate their usual cut. The latter has a large amount of old logs. Business on the Mississippi is ended and ice is forming rapidly. Men are being hurried to the woods in all directions.

Minneapolis goes into the winter with approximately 190,000,000 feet on the sticks against 172,000,000 a year ago. The effect of the Chicago cut rate will be seen in the reduced shipments. All trade below northern Iowa has quit. St. Paul is in about the same fix.

THE PROVINCES.

The following from Montreal Journal of Commerce:

The only change of any importance in the lumber trade during the past week has been an advance of $5 per 1,000 feet for first and second black walnut. The total exports of lumber from this port to South America during the season of navigation, now about closed, is 36,000,000 feet, against 18,760,000 feet for the corresponding period last year, showing the large increase of nearly 100 per cent. It is expected that the shipments of deals for the past season will also show a material accession to those of last year.

METALS.—COPPER.—Ingot has been subject to rumor of considerable sales on foreign account, and some of the reports put the amount very high. From regular home sources, however, the demand comes slow and irregular, and it is difficult to place more than an ordinary jobbing invoice. Prices have been easy, and at present still rather favor the buyer. We quote at 12¾c. for Lake, down to 11¼c. for the more ordinary brands. Manufactured Copper dull and to some extent nominal in value at the moment. We quote as follows: Brazier's Copper, ordinary size, over 16 oz. per sq. foot, 22c. per lb.; do. do. do., 16 oz. and over 12 oz. per sq foot, 24c. per lb.; do. do., 10 and 12 oz. per sq. foot. 27c. per lb.; do., do., lighter than 10 oz. per sq. foot, 29c. per lb.; circles less than 84 inches in diameter, 25c. per lb.; 84 inches in diameter and over, 28c per lb.; segment and pattern sheets, 25c. per lb.; locomotive fire-box sheets, 23c. per lb.; Sheathing Copper, over 12 oz per sq. foot, 20c. per lb., and Bolt Copper, 23c. per lb. IRON—Scotch Pig has sold so slowly as to lead to some accumulation of stock. The influence upon values is noticeable, and an easier tone prevails, though holders are not ready to shade to any decided extent. We quote at $19.00@22.50 per ton, according to brand, etc. American Pig is going into consumption very slowly, and while some agents report a pretty close sale of the output of the furnaces, the general report is of a slow trade from first hands. Prices are unsettled, but without radical change. We quote $19@19.50 per ton for No. 1 X foundry, $18.00@18.50 for No. 2 X do. do., and $16.00@17.00 for gray forge. Old Rails have been dull, a considerable margin between the asking and bidding rates tending to retard operations, though at the best buyers were quite indifferent operators. Scrap has been dull and more or less nominal in the absence of any fairly testing business, but with a general tendency in buyers' favor. We quote at $16 50@17.50 for old tee rails, $18@19 for double heads, $18.50@19.00 for No 1 wrought scrap ex ship, $19.00@20.00 for selected do., $16.00@16.50 for old car wheels, and $15.00@16.50 for crop ends. Steel Rails not selling regular, and there appears to be quite a cautious disposition among a great many buyers, but a number of orders are thought to be on the market and manufacturers hold to a pretty steady margin. We quote at $28@29 per ton for heavy sections. Manufactured iron is generally dull in toue and too unsettled in price for other than a nominal line of valuation. Supplies are ample. We quote Common Merchant Bar, ordinary sizes, at 1.90@2c. from store and Refined at 1.95@2 40c.; Rods, round and square, 2.05@2.30c.; Bands, 2.35@2.50c.; Norway Nail Rods, 5¼@6c., and domestic sheet on the basis of 2.70@3.00c. for common Nos. 10@16. Other descriptions at corresponding prices, with 1-10c. less on large lots from cars. LEAD—Domestic Pig is still finding only an uncertain sort of demand, and the difficulties in the way of placing goods have a weakening influence upon values, especially as stocks are quite full. We quote at 3⅝@3½c. per lb., according to brand and the size of invoice handled. The manufactures of lead are steady and quoted: Bar, 4½@4¾c.; pipe, 5¾c.; and sheet, 6¾c., less the usual discount to the trade; and tin-lined pipe, 15c.; block tin pipe, 40c., on same terms. TIN—Pig secures some jobbing attention, but beyond that, demand is slow and uncertain and supplies cannot be placed until buyers are offered more or less favor on cost. We quote at 16⅝@17c. for Straits, 16¾@17¼c. for Australian, 17⅝@17¾c. for English, and 19@19¼c. for Bancs. Tin Plates slow. Cokes and charcoal ternes have rather weakened of late, but bright charcoals, though quiet, were held with quite a showing of steadiness in pretty much all cases. We quote I. C. Charcoal, third-class assortment, $5.00@5.10 for Allaway grade, and $5.65@5.70 for Melyn grade; for each additional X add $1.25 and $1.50 respectively; I. C. Coke, $4 55@4.60 for B. V. grade; $4.65@4.70 for J. B. grade; Charcoal terne, $4.50@4.60 for Allaway and Dean grades 14x20; $9.25@9.60 for do. 20x28; Coke terne, $4.35@4 40 for Glais grade 14x20, and $9.15@9.20 for do. 20x28—all in round lots. Spelter has been dull and rather weak in tone, though holders refrained from pressing stocks to any extent. We quote at about 4⅜@4¾c. for domestic and foreign, according to brand, quantity, etc. Sheet Zinc meeting with about usual trade all and steady at 5½@6¼c., according to quality, uantity, etc.

NAILS.—Stocks continue to be carried without any great difficulty, and there is a tendency toward a considerable display of firmness in many cases. Manufacturers seem to be managing the production very well, and with a disposition to refrain from "cutting" prices at sources where it has been a practice the market obtains good support. Demand fluctuates slightly, but in a general way keeps up to a fair average and comes from regular sources. We quote at $2.10@2.25 per keg for 10d. to 60d., according to size of invoice.

PAINTS, OILS, ETC.—The demand does not amount to much, and indeed, beyond calling for what may be considered a sort of ordinary trade assortment for current wants, buyers appear unwilling to enter into any contracts worthy of notice. Supplies in the meantime are in good shape from which to draw almost any reasonable assortment, and bids at former prices are quite sure to be accepted. Linseed Oil is steady on jobbing lots, but a little irregular in a wholesale way, clearing at about 53@54c. for domestic, and 54@56c. for foreign. Spirits Turpentine not very active, but gradually hardening in price and closes at 33½@34c. per gallon, according to the size of invoice, etc.

PITCH AND TAR.—The general movement of supplies continues of about average volume and in ordinary form, with no reported change in price. We quote Pitch $2.25@2.30 per bbl., Tar $2.50@3.00 do., according to quantity, quality and delivery.

DECEMBER 6, 1884.

The election of thirteen directors of the Real Estate Exchange and Auction Room (Limited) will take place next Monday. Nine of the Board of Directors of last year are candidates for re-election. It will undoubtedly be best to continue the same officers in power for one year more so that the plans of the originators of the Exchange can be fully carried out. The annual report, we understand, will show that the Exchange is on an excellent financial footing, and that its prospects are all that could be desired. The rental outside of the hall and offices of the Exchange itself will amount to 6 per cent. gross on the capital stock, while the sources of revenue to be developed should in time pay good dividends to the shareholders. It is said that the membership of the Real Estate Exchange will compare very favorably in wealth with that of the Stock Exchange. An interview with Mr. George H. Scott, secretary of the Exchange, published elsewhere, will be found very interesting to members who wish to know the exact status of that institution.

It is to be hoped that the Land Transfer Reform Commission are in readiness to report as soon as the legislative session commences. They have had nine months to deliberate on this matter, the points of which are well understood by all intelligent members of the legal profession. There should be no excuse for any delay. It is unfortunate perhaps that the entire commission are lawyers. A reform of our land laws is so vital a matter that a real estate owner and a dealer should have been represented on the commission. There is a suspicion that the legal profession cannot be greatly interested in a reform, which, if it fulfills its purpose, will cut down the exorbitant charges that are now necessary in transferring titles to real estate.

Corporation Counsel Lacombe's interpretation of the new constitutional amendment shows that marked defect of the legally trained mind which is apt to place a greater value on a fiction than ona fact. Upon an examination of the figures any average business man would say that New York city owes something over $90,000,000; but the city's legal adviser, while not disputing the fact, is of opinion that the apparent debt of $135,000,000 prohibits the city from incurring further indebtedness, although under the constitutional amendment we would not reach our limit until we actually owed about $122,000,000. It is this pottering with words and definitions, and giving them the preference to facts, which has discredited our courts in dealing with business disputes. The leading exchanges of the world are unanimous in refusing to recognize courts of law. They have established their own arbitration committees to settle the question of facts involved in all business disagreements. Practically the Corporation Counsel's decision will be a good thing for the city in temporarily, at least putting a stop to the creation of new indebtedness. Tax payers will not be sorry for this, that is if provision can be made for giving us the new parks in the annexed district.

An inter-State railroad bill is very much needed, but some of the provisions of the Reagan bill now under debate in the House are preposterous. They aim to put a stop to consolidations, pools and understandings between competing lines. The theory underlying this proposed enactment is that the railroad companies are plundering the public. The very reverse is the fact. It is the public which is now profiting at the expense of our railway system. We are suffering from rate wars and the carriage of freight and passengers for less than cost. The business of the government should be hereafter to protect railway property from undue depreciation. No more new lines should be permitted unless authorized by the central government, and every consolidation or connection of rival roads should be encouraged, as it saves expense and is an accommodation to the public. There should be no more building of Nickel Plate and West Shore roads. The money invested in the stock of these companies might better have been thrown into the sea. Unnecessary railways are a national calamity, and permanent competition between them is, and always has been, an illusion.

But we ought to have a national railway commission with power to collect statistics, settle differences and make suggestions to the corporations and to Congress. The business of the roads, now regarded as the private property of the directors for use on the stock exchanges, should be made public in reports sworn to by the officers, and false swearing should be punishable by fine and imprisonment. Directors in insurance and other companies who make fraudulent statements are sent to prison and fined; but railway directors have frequently told the most deliberate falsehoods to their stockholders and the public, and there is no law to punish them. In time this proposed commission might have power to grant permits to build new roads, but the Reagan bill now before the House is an abomination in its present shape.

Secretary McCulloch's recommendation to withdraw the one and two-dollar greenbacks so as to afford a place for the circulation of silver dollars and small gold coin has often been advocated in these columns. Ours is the greatest gold and silver producing nation in the world, and we should have made use of the precious metals in all retail transactions, but, instead, we have deliberately set them aside and substituted paper in their place. When the national banking law was passed it provided that the one and two-dollar bills should be withdrawn when specie payments were resumed so as to leave a place for gold and silver coins to circulate. They accordingly were retired from circulation on the 1st of January, 1879. But Secretary Sherman, in order to discredit the silver dollar, issued one and two dollar greenbacks in place of the cancelled bank notes. It was a shrewd move for the object he had in view, and has furnished a standing newspaper argument against the silver dollar; indeed it makes its last appearance in President Arthur's message. The other commercial nations, Great Britain, France and Germany, prohibit the issue of small notes, and hence gold and silver is almost the only retail currency known abroad. Having one more use there than in this country gold as well as silver naturally gravitates towards Europe except when the balance of trade is against the nations of that continent. We ought to stop the issue, not only of the ones and twos, but of the fives and tens, both of the national banks and the government notes. We would then not only utilize the gold now piled up in the bank vaults and hoarded among the people, but attract some of the yellow metal from Europe, and stimulate the production of our own mines. We then would coin eagles and half-eagles. Our present gold coinage is almost exclusively in double eagles, which are convenient for banks and for gold exporters, but practically useless as a currency.

Secretary McCulloch's report, by the way, is a very notable one. It is a plea for fuller and freer trade with other nations, and for subsidies by government in aid of our foreign commerce. Were the Secretary's policy carried out it would greatly advantage the trade of this city, for it would give us lines of steamships sailing under the American flag to all the principal ports in the world. The merchant princes of New York would in time vie in wealth with the present race of railway kings. But the purblind press of this city will antagonize all the recommendations of the Secretary of the Treasury to add to the commerce of this port.

Both the President and his Secretary of the Treasury unite in recommending that the tariff be modified so as to abolish duties on raw material and that treaties be entered into with other nations, especially with South American States, to give a market abroad for our manufactures. The home market is confessedly insufficient to consume all the goods we produce. These views are not novelties to the readers of THE RECORD AND GUIDE.

The meeting in favor of the passage of a bankruptcy act by Congress was falsely described in the papers as being an important one. As a matter of fact the merchants and business men of New York were conspicuous by their absence. All bankruptcy laws passed so far by our government have been swindles upon the commercial community. The assets of the bankrupt estates have invariably been eaten up by the court officials and the lawyers. The legal sharks who profit by these bankruptcy acts are very smart. They detail confidence men to dog the editors of the city press so as to induce them to write articles favoring a bankrupt law. The editors, managers and leader writers of the various journals are fairly run down by these plausible scamps, who claim to represent the mercantile community; but the latter, while they would be very glad if a national bankruptcy law was enacted which would be efficient, know from bitter experience that no one so far passed has been of the slightest value to them. The laws enacted have thus far proved such monstrous swindles that they have been quickly repealed. No Congress of lawyers can be trusted in framing the bankruptcy act for the mercantile community.

William M. Evarts is the best candidate mentioned as United States Senator from this State. This is the greatest State in the Union and it ought to have its very foremost citizen as its representative in our upper chamber. Chauncey M. Depew would make an admirable Senator in case Mr. Evarts could not be chosen, but no third-rate man should be even considered. Levi P. Morton has been mentioned but he has nothing to recommend him save his money. His election would be a very suspicious circumstance. Mr. Morton is supposed to owe his position as minister to France to his large contributions to help elect Mr. Garfield President. If Mr. Evarts should be chosen next winter it is to be hoped that Mr. Roscoe Conkling will be chosen three years from now. By that time he will probably have made money enough to satisfy his modest wants. Evarts and Conkling would be hard to match in any State of the Union.

November and the Past Eleven Months.

The annexed tables will be read with very great interest by all who deal in and own real estate in New York city. The first table records the number of new buildings, and their estimated cost, filed at the Building Bureau for the month of November, compared with the corresponding month of last year and the year before. The record is an unexpectedly good one and shows an actual increase over last year in the number of new buildings, and over the last two years in the cost. The plans for the entire eleven months of this year show an increase over last year of 211, but the total cost is less than last year and the year before, which is due to the fact that there are fewer large apartment houses and office buildings commenced this year than in former years. Another point is worthy of note. The number of buildings east of the Central Park show a steady diminution since 1882, while the number on the west side of the Park show a relatively large increase. The number of buildings beyond the Harlem also show a steady increase. The following is the table:

The conveyances for November of this year make a good showing over the November of last year, especially in the annexed district. The totals for the eleven months, compared with last year, show a gratifying increase, not only in the number of transactions but in the amounts involved. By the close of the year the records will show that nearly $200,000,000 have been invested in real estate in this city. The aggregated totals in the several deeds will not quite reach that amount, but in nearly 3,000 of the deeds no consideration will be given, though of course in a majority of the cases the passing of the title involves the payment of large sums of money. In addition to this $200,000,000 invested in real estate, some $42,000,000 will have been spent in constructing new edifices. This is a pretty good showing for one city. These comparative tables year by year prove that New York is steadily growing. Be the times good or bad the number of transactions steadily increases, and there is no serious stoppage to the construction of new residences and stores. The following tells the story of the conveyances and mortgages for the past eleven months:

* Does not include one mortgage for $10,000,000 on property of Postal Telegraph Co.

The Sun has discovered that bank notes are diminishing very rapidly and gold notes and silver certificates are taking their place. Since 1878 we have coined 185,000,000 silver dollars, all of which are in circulation save $39,000,000 in the Treasury. On January 1st, 1879, there were $119,000,000 in gold in coinage, and $188,000,000 have been coined since then. Our national bank circulation is diminishing at the rate of from $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 a year, while our gold and silver coins or certificates representing them are being added to the currency at the rate of $55,000,000 and $56,000,000 per annum. The Sun is right. The national bank currency is doomed. The United States will in time issue all the currency, gold, silver and paper. The same paper thinks, however, that the debt-paying policy of our government will be continued. We don't. But we believe and we hope that our present surplus will soon be changed into a deficiency, and that the close of President Cleveland's administration will see a larger debt than there is at present.

Our Prophetic Department.

CITIZEN—Is there anything in the President's message, and the report of the Secretary of the Treasury, which suggests to you a possible change in the foreign and domestic policy of the United States? In other words, do you find anything which would lead us to suppose that the government itself might be a factor in bringing about a changed condition of business?

SIR ORACLE—The recommendations of the President and his Secretary and the attitude of the Democrats really give us some hope that the incoming administration may do something to stimulate our domestic business and foster our foreign trade. While free trade is not popular with either party, what Mr. William M. Evarts once happily called "full trade" would be regarded by all parties as a very desirable thing. We have an immense surplus of manufactured goods in this country; but are confined to our home markets because of our high import duties. President Arthur's government has entered upon what may be called a course of foreign trade policy which President Cleveland's administration will probably be forced to continue and extend. We are making treaties with foreign powers so as to get new markets for our manufactures. To do this we are reducing our import duties on articles which do not enter into competition with our own manufacturers. This is a round-about way of liberalizing our tariff, but in the end will accomplish the same object as that aimed at by the Morrison bill. The protected interests of this country are so powerful that it is practically impossible to pass any bill through Congress affecting a generel reduction of tariff taxation. Yet it is clearly not to the interest of manufacturers to have duties imposed on raw materials, or to tax at unnecessarily high rates chemicals, alcohol or other articles which enter into the manufacture of goods. The whole current of events is toward freer or fuller trade.

CITIZEN—But what is there in the President's message, apart from the treaties of which you speak, indicating any change in our traditional policy?

SIR O.—For years past in these conversations I have called attention to the importance of the Panama Canal. I have held that when it was completed the question would arise, by whom will it be controlled? Built by foreign money, principally French, England, France and Germany would probably insist upon its control being in the hands of the nations whose commerce would be its chief patrons. This would bring up the Monroe doctrine, and the United States would be placed in a most humiliating position if the management of the canal should be vested in a syndicate of foreign powers. This will be the most delicate and dangerous question in our foreign politics that is likely to embarrass the administration of President Cleveland. The treaty with Nicaragua entered into by the Arthur administration brings this question to the fore at once, for it will involve the possible construction of an inter-oceanic canal with the money of the United States. Should the present Congress endorse this project it will be a new departure on the part of our government, for the money could not be raised without a guarantee from the United States. This would increase our national debt and necessitate the creation of a navy to protect interests outside of our own territory.

CITIZEN—The Democratic party will never countenance a debt for building a canal through a foreign territory, and all its traditions commit it to keeping our navy inefficient.

SIR O.—That certainly has been the attitude of the Democratic party while in opposition, but once in power it will want to spend money and create patronage. After twenty-four years' abstinence from the flesh-pots of office Democrats would not be human if they did not wish to personally profit by the expenditures of the government. Congressman Cox, chairman of the Naval Committee, says that he will favor liberal appropriations for ships and guns, and the tone of the Democratic press on this subject is very different to what it was previous to the election. I expect to see large sums of money voted for the navy at this session of Congress; but the expenditures will be given to the incoming Democratic Secretary of the Navy. Nor would I be surprised to see substantial aid given to steamship lines to foreign ports. The civil service rules stand in the way of all the spoils being distributed among Democrats, and they will naturally wish to create new conditions by which they can profit at the expense of the national treasury. I do not believe that the present Congress will diminish the internal revenues, and I confidently predict that there will be a deficit in the national treasury within two years time instead of a surplus, and that the national debt, instead of being decreased while President Cleveland is in office, will be increased.

CITIZEN—Surely that is not a very hopeful outlook, nor is it likely to inure to the permanent benefit of the Democratic party.

SIR O.—Notwithstanding that, this greater expenditure may be an excellent thing for the country. I have never believed in our debt-paying policy. It put an unnatural value on government securities, reduced the rate of interest below what it should be in this new country and stimulated speculation in securities. If we spend money on ships to protect our commerce, in guns to defend our seacoast cities, in postal subventions to add to our merchant marine, in loans to build a Nicaragua canal and in works of public improvement generally, there will be a healthful stimulation of our iron and other industries. Labor will be more generally employed and capital will find profitable investments in new manufacturing enterprises. Our credit is the cheapest thing we have, and we should make use of it to develop the splendid possibilities of this wonderful country of ours.

CITIZEN—Would not this policy not only increase our national debt, but bring our 3 per cent. government bonds below par?

SIR O.—Probably. But our national debt is a trifling one, considering the resources of the nation and compared with that of other countries. We want a larger debt for the safe keeping of trust funds and as a basis for our banking circulation. If the Democrats spend their money productively the nation ought not to complain if its permanent debt is increased by a few hundred million. Our rapid increase in population and wealth will make the burden lighter year by year.

CITIZEN—To change the subject, how about the stock market?

SIR O.—For months back I have stated that prices would be better toward the end of November and in the first part of December. This forecast was based on the movement of the corn crop which the "street" would discount before the facts were made known by the railway reports. Just now we hear of the losses in revenue during October and November, but the leaders of the street are aware of the fact that December will show a recovery in earnings. I look for a further spurt in prices but a break before and perhaps during the holidays. The money loaning in the "street" by the corporations will be called in to pay dividends in January. Then at the close of the year people balance up their books and withdraw their money from speculative ventures. Hence the close of December generally witnesses a shrinkage of prices in Wall street, but I look for a liberal rise sometime during the first two weeks of January. There will be $60,000,000 disbursed in dividends which must be re-invested. Then money is very easy, we are importing gold and stocks are cheap. Put me down as a bull.

CITIZEN—How about wheat, corn and cotton?

SIR O.—Wheat in Chicago at 75 cents a bushel and corn at 35 is very cheap. There is no profit in short sales at those figures. If there is money in the market it is on the long side. Cotton is a purchase, too, at this side of 11 cents. It will, I think, sell for over 12 some time next year.

CITIZEN—You may be called a bull then?

SIR O.—On stocks, grain and cotton, yes; on general business, no. Next year will be a very bad one for business men and the working classes. It will be a year of great distress for employers and employed alike. Congress might help matters in this session by authorizing public works and necessary expenditures that would stimulate industry, but I do not believe that anything of the kind will be undertaken this spring.

Recent statistics show how unexpectedly large has been the production of iron in the Southern States. The distress among the iron manufacturers in Pennsylvania and other Northern States is now found to be largely due to the increasing output of pig iron in the South. According to Bradstreet's, Maryland, the two Virginias, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee and Kentucky produced in 1880 394,837 tons of pig iron, which production steadily increased until last year it was 696,879 tons; that is to say, on a steadily declining market the Southern production nearly doubled. The total production of pig iron in 1880 was 4,295,514 tons. In 1883 it was 5,146,972 tons. In other words, in the whole United States the increase was 20 per cent.; but counting the Southern States alone the increase was 75 per cent. This is a startling exhibit, especially for Pennsylvania, and to make the matter worse this Southern iron is underselling Pennsylvania iron in Wilmington, Del.; Elizabeth, N. J.; New York, New Haven, Stamford, Providence and Boston. Consignments of Alabama iron have actually been sold in Pittsburg itself.

The above facts show that great industrial changes are under way. Many of the industries now concentrated in Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey and Ohio will be transferred to Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee. A larger white population will be attracted to these Southern iron and coal fields. Less attention will be paid to cotton in these States and more wheat and corn raised than heretofore. The colored people will be driven towards the Gulf and across the Mississippi to cultivate cotton in new sections of Texas. Pennsylvania and the Middle States will care less about the tariff for protection, while iron can be produced so cheaply in the South that the foundrymen there will not fear foreign competition. It would seem as if a better demand for Southern lands for farming purposes would result from these industrial changes.

When our city journals have nothing else to do they utter lamentations over the coinage of the silver dollar and indulge in dismal predictions as to the danger of the business of the country getting on a silver basis. They never publish a solitary fact to show that silver has done us any harm. The Tribune one day last week in the course of a Jeremiade on the silver question says: "The total circulation, October 1, Mr. Burchard estimates at $610,500,000 gold and $262,000,000 silver. Adding various kinds of paper money, the aggregate circulation reported is $1,806,412,324, of which he reports that $1,094,000,000 was held by the public, not in the Treasury nor in the national banks." Now, as a matter of fact, we are constantly exporting silver and importing gold. We mine one-third more silver than we do gold. Yet, although we have coined $182,000,000 worth of silver dollars since 1878, we have steadily added to our stores of gold without enlarging our supply of silver. The way things are going on we are in more danger of being struck by a comet than we are of getting on a silver basis. We have only about $3.50 of silver per capita while France has over $14 of silver coinage per capita. But the French editor who would express a fear that France would get on a purely silver basis would be ridiculed on the Paris bourse as a financial ignoramus, but these ridiculous predictions are soberly made in this city in papers like the Tribune, Times, Evening Post and Financial Chronicle.

Interesting Facts About the New Real Estate Exchange.

In view of the annual election for Directors of the Real Estate Exchange and Auction Room (Limited), a representative of THE RECORD AND GUIDE interviewed Mr. George H. Scott, the Secretary of the Exchange, respecting the condition and prospects of that institution.

"I have come to you, Mr. Scott," said our representative, "to make some inquiries which may save explanations at the meeting next Monday. Of course I could not ask you for a copy of the annual report in advance, but perhaps you will be willing to furnish some facts which would throw light on the prospects of the Exchange?"

"That I will very willingly do," replied Mr. Scott, "only I wish to caution your readers that what I may state apart from the obvious facts in the case will be my own private impressions. The Board must not be held responsible for anything I say outside of the annual report."

"There has been some complaint, Mr. Scott, at the delay in altering the building purchased by the Exchange so as to fit it for the transaction of business. What is the explanation?"

"I am glad you asked that question," replied Mr. Scott, "as I think that when the facts are known the shareholders will see that we have done everything we could to expedite the work. No one was worried more about it than our lamented President, Mr. E. H. Ludlow. He had the matter so much at heart that I really believe it aggravated his fatal illness. The Building Committee, you must know, was composed of seven members—a majority of the Board. This was to prevent even a shadow of suspicion that any unworthy influences were at work in giving out contracts and the like. To insure efficiency three members were made a quorum. The labor was incessant, and when business men were generally taking their vacation, this Committee met repeatedly every week during the summer, and never less than once a week. Mr. Ludlow very rarely missed a meeting. The Exchange was a hobby of his, and he felt his responsibilities very keenly."

"But, Mr. Scott," queried our representative, "why the delay?"

"I'm coming to that. While we got possession of the property on the 1st of February we were unable to do anything until May, when certain leases would expire. Then the plans had to be filed and the contracts given out. But the work came to a stop from an unexpected difficulty. Our architect's plans required the making of an immense girder, the largest in the city—larger, I believe, than any on the Brooklyn Bridge. It weighed 22 tons. Unfortunately there was only one establishment in the country that could cast this great girder, and it was the only order given for work done in which there was no competition. We expected at the very outside to get the girder within six weeks' time, but it was not delivered until three months had passed by, and in the meantime the other work came to a standstill. Then all builders know that altering an old structure is much more uncertain work than constructing a new edifice. We tried very hard to have our fine hall in readiness for the annual meeting, but it could not be done. It will, however, be finished long before the spring business opens. We can promise it for the 1st of February next. This salesroom will be a very fine one—42 feet wide by 86 feet long and 33 feet high. It will comfortably hold thirty auctioneers' stands and one great public stand for large sales."

"Will not that be a rather small hall, Mr. Scott?"

"The present salesroom never has more than half-a-dozen stands occupied at one time. Should the salesroom be found insufficient in space we can take in the two lower floors on the corner of Liberty street and Liberty place. The hall will be a very fine one, well lighted, and we hope with good acoustic properties."

"How about the Exchange as a property, Mr. Scott? Will it pay dividends? Will it have any debt after the construction account is paid?"

"I have some diffidence in answering those questions as I do not wish to excite unrealizable expectations. The real estate dealers who chose the site were among the most experienced in the city. They had been in the habit of caring for estates and augmenting the revenues in the interest of their clients. They were careful in selecting a piece of property, that it should be productive even while the alterations were going on. They were offered vacant property, but that would have required the construction of a new building which might have taken a couple of years to finish, and which would be all expenditure and no income. The old Produce Exchange, on Whitehall street, was urged upon them, but while the necessary alterations were under way there would have been no rentals coming in. The Liberty street buildings, however, have been paying from the very start. We have been in possession since February 1st, and up to the 1st of December have received $21,000, and this while the work was going on. When our buildings are completed we expect to have a yearly revenue of $30,000, that is, nearly 6 per cent. gross on the capital stock of $500,000. This will be exclusive of the hall and the executive offices necessary for conducting the business of the Exchange."

"But you will have other sources of revenue, Mr. Scott?"

"Of course. The thirty stands at $150 a piece should bring in between $4,000 and $5,000. Then there are the knock-down fees, the charges for real estate information and the annual membership, $60 each, which ought in time give us quite a large revenue apart from the rentals."

"What will the debt be after the building alterations are completed?"

"The original cost of the property was $421,500. We paid off everything but an $80,000 mortgage. We have yet a large cash balance and my personal estimate is that after we have paid every bill we will have a debt of about $40,000, which I judge the income of one year will more than wipe out. There is no individual liability in the matter beyond the cost of the shares to any member of the Exchange. I may here remark that any member of the Exchange can see the books at the office in the Duncan building before or after the annual election. The Directors have been very careful to spend as little money as possible and to do their work so openly that the most captious can find no fault."

"I see, Mr. Scott, that the regular ticket embraces the names of nine of the Directors chosen last year."

"We thought," said Mr. Scott, "as a matter of justice that the old Directors should be continued in office. Two have died during the year, and two others, Messrs. Sherwood and Cruger, declined to serve; one on account of ill-health, and the other of pressing business engagements. The four new names have been carefully selected. An entirely new Board would be unacquainted with the details of the organization and it was thought only fair that those who originated the Exchange should continue in power until its machinery was fairly in operation. This coming year will be the most important in the history of this institution. I believe that the seats will have great value in time, and it will put real estate dealing in New York on a much higher plane than has heretofore been possible. The real estate interest is the most important in the country and our institution ought in time to rival the Stock and Produce Exchanges in wealth and influence."

The movement inaugurated to repave Fifth avenue seems to meet with a great deal of favor. Mr. H. R. Bishop states that the roadbed on Fifth avenue, above Fifty-ninth street, is in a deplorable condition, and utterly unfit to resist the wear and tear of the heavy traffic which passes over it. It is in some places worn down to a depth of six or eight inches, and is rough and full of holes, so much so, that carriages could not go over it at any speed, but had to proceed almost at a walk. The dust consequently raised by the continual passage of vehicles was a source of great annoyance to residents, and the condition of the road depreciated the value of property on that line. What was required was a granite pavement, with a concrete foundation, and this he hoped would be undertaken by the city next spring. The walk laid out by the Park Commissioners outside of the Park along the avenue was once used very largely by workmen and their children, but it is now avoided on account of the clouds of dust raised by passing vehicles.

The first sale under the Brooklyn arrearage law of 1883 took place last Wednesday with satisfactory results. Three wards were completed and $44,136.76 was realized. The bidding was spirited. There were eighty-two bids for one parcel in the First Ward. This law has proved very effective in inducing delinquent taxpayers to pay up their indebtedness. In these three wards there were originally 721 parcels in arrears amounting to $266,000; but the total advertised for sale was only 170, having an indebtedness of $113,000. The new law seems to be very effective in collecting the revenues of Brooklyn. If the highest court should finally decide that these sales give a valid fee simple title it will mark a new era in city governments, for a way will have been found to relieve honest taxpayers from shouldering the burdens of those who do not meet their municipal obligations.

We are to have a number of new armories it seems; all of which, by the way, are very much needed. It will furnish work for a great many builders and mechanics. The secretary of the Armory Board furnished the following estimates:

For purchase of site for Ninth Regiment Armory with First Battery...	$250,000
For purchase of site for Seventy-first Regiment Armory.....	300,000
For erecting and furnishing Twelfth Regiment Armory.....	325,000
For erecting and furnishing Twenty-second Regiment Armory.....	375,000
For erecting and furnishing Eighth Regiment Armory with Second Battery.....	425,000
For erecting and furnishing Ninth Regiment Armory and First Battery	375,000
For erecting and furnishing Seventy-first Regiment Armory.....	325,000
Total.....	$2,375,000

Twenty-six years ago R. T. Wilson was the keeper of an ordinary grocery store on the line of the East Tennessee road. He at this time made the acquaintance of Governor, now Senator, Brown, of Georgia, who on the breaking out of the Civil War made use of Mr. Wilson as a confederate agent. Being a handsome man with suave manners and a fine address he acquitted himself well in the various trusts imposed upon him and he was finally chosen to represent the Southern States to negotiate the cotton loan in Europe. How well he succeeded is a matter of history. Upon the break-down of the confederacy it is said that Mr. Wilson became heir to the funds, $2,000,000, derived from the last sales of the cotton bonds. At any rate he returned to this country a rich man and by bold and wise investments in railway securities and real estate in New York he became very wealthy. Two of his daughters have since married into the Goelet family and it was his son who has just wedded Miss Astor. He has yet a son and daughter unmarried. Mr. Wilson has seen strange mutations of fortune in a little over a quarter of a century, but all who know him agree that his elevation from poverty to wealth and social position is well deserved.

The Nineteenth Century Club discussed at its last meeting the relative merits and demerits of the aristocracy of birth, which is dying out, and the aristocracy of wealth, which is taking its place. The speakers were Mr. Courtland Palmer, T. W. Higginson, John Swinton, the Rev. Mr. Lloyd and Mr. Carnegie, the famous iron millionaire. The views expressed by Messrs Palmer, Higginson and Carnegie were optimistic. The aristocracy of birth had proved hurtful to the best interests of the race, as it lasted from generation to generation, but the aristocracy of wealth in the absence of any law of entail and primogeniture was really no aristocracy at all. The best and most influential society of any of our large cities was literary, artistic, scientific or professional. Apart from a few well-known names, such as the Vanderbilts and the Astors in New York, the tens of thousands of very rich men in America are unknown and uncared for. They may exercise an influence upon legislatures and in the control of corporations, but they have no social status. Then the great fortunes in America rarely last beyond two generations. The son generally scatters the accumulations of his father. If a Vanderbilt wanted a loan for twenty-five years he would have to put up government bonds as a collateral. Mr. Carnegie spoke contemptuously of the British peers, whom, he said, were far inferior to the members of other legislative bodies, more particularly the House of Commons, which represented in manners, culture and ability all that was most notable in the English race. The same speaker also believed that the time would come when there would be special legislation in this country against vast accumulation of wealth in few hands, and avowed himself a radical of the radicals. Altogether this was a curious meeting. The ladies and gentlemen present were all in full dress and represented some of the wealthiest families in New York. Yet the most socialistic sentiments of the speakers were heartily applauded.

The United States promises to be the greatest field for actors and singers in the world. Forty years ago there were said to be only seven first-class theatres in the country. There are now eighty-six, not counting minor places of amusement. There is more money paid out for amusements of this kind in New York city alone than in the whole country in 1840. So lucrative is this field that foreign artists are attracted to it, as is shown by the number of famous German artists especially, who have acquired the English language to act in this country. No American has ever been tempted to acquire a foreign language to act on any part of the European Continent. There was a time when a lecturer sufficed for the amusement wants of the interior towns; but the travelling theatrical companies have taken the place of the lyceum lecturers. Then, the appetite grows with what it feeds upon, and by the opening of the twentieth century the United States will be a very paradise for competent actors and singers.

Mr. Christopher R. Robert does not believe that there will be any serious decline in New York property, for the reason that as yet there has been no speculation in real estate. Panics in real property never occur except after periods of unnatural prices. The upper end of the island, he thinks, requires more transverse roads. He was surprised to find how many people were ignorant of the existence of Riverside Drive. New Yorkers who know all about the fine avenues of other cities were actually unaware of the existence of this most delightful of city drives. The apartment house building, Mr. Robert thought, had been overdone. Some of them were found to be unwholesome, due to defective plumbing. The upper part of the city, especially the west side, is sadly in need of cross-town roads and better facilities for reaching down town.

Since the Stockholder came under Jay Gould's malign influence it has steadily misinterpreted the market. There was a time when it was right three times out of four; but it has been left on the recent rise in values because of the perverse points which came from Connor's office. The only use great operators have for the press is to deceive the "street." If there is an able-bodied financial liar in the country it is Jay Gould, as the Stockholder probably by this time has found out.

Frank Moulton, "our mutual friend," is dead. A splendid man he was in every way. Large-brained, noble-hearted, of great vitality; but the newspapers giving his obituary omitted to state one fact which would have pointed a moral. His life was cut short by his love for alcoholic stimulants. His case is another added to the tens of thousands showing the danger of careless liquor drinking.

Portieres are made of heavy Turcoman velours of double face; the most beautiful of these are wrought in arabesque pattern in gold cord.

Home Decorative Notes.

—Odd and antique chests or tables are placed in hall alcoves and are ornamented with statuettes; the card-basket stands in the centre on a fancy plush mat.

—Frames of pictures or mirrors may be easily decorated with growing ivy; in planting for this ornamental purpose a wedged shaped zinc pan should be used, and placed behind the frame.

—Small brass tables for holding vases or lamps are square or round, sustained either by a slender post or by three or four legs, having one shelf or three, ornamented or plain, to suit the fancy of the purchaser.

—A hat-rack formed of three spears is a novelty.

—A toilet set of Bolting cloth has arbutus blossom embroidery, very fine and delicate, with lace edge and pale pink satin cushions.

—One use to which baskets are now put is to hold plant jars; nothing makes a prettier covering than a decorated basket.

—Lovely little Christmas souvenirs are sachets of yellow satin ribbon painted with blue violets and maiden-h ir ferns with streamers of the same material; they suggest themselves very forcibly to the looker by the following little couplet that is painted in quaint lettering on the streamers:

"Do I tempt you with my beauty?
Buy me, then, it is your duty."

—Copper is the favorite decorative material of the hour, when used in conbination with forged iron it is most effective.

—Fashion wields her sceptre in floriculture as in most other ornamental branches of industry, orchids are to be the fashionable flower this winter, the brilliant coloring and witching forms of some of the varieties are especially adapted to dinner-table decoration; the chrysanthemum excitement has not yet abated, pots of the golden yellow bloom are exceedingly decorative, their varieties have this season been re-enforced by importations from Japan embracing some new colors never before seen.

—Quaint little footstools are made of plush, with "Rest thy weary feet" embroidered in one corner, and a large satin bow placed on the opposite corner.

—The wood baskets now so fashionable to place beside the fire-place come in all manner of pretty designs; one lately noticed was made of twigs intricately twisted and covered with gold varnish.

—A new idea for splashers are those made of Canton matting suspended by small gilt rings from a brass rod, bannerwise, and painted with branches of wild roses.

—A popular form of stand in brass is the elongated leg of a turkey, the claws being spread so as to give it support.

—The present century has a brilliant record in the advance that has been effected in the production of stained glass, both as to colors and artistic composition. A very beautiful effect is produced in a room by the use not only of stained glass door and window panels, but stained-glass ceilings as well; these may be very beautiful if colors are properly selected with due regard to their location. The growing popularity of open fire-places has created a great demand for fire-screens, and various innovations in the shape of embroidery have appeared, but none so well express the artistic sense of the times as the fire screens made by the stained-glass workers; these are combinations of many-colored glass, set in frames of polished brass. Several very elegant specimens of this art have recently been contributed by the La Farge Decorative Art Company, No. 33 East Seventeenth street.

—Candles are to be used more than ever on the dinner table this season, and for this purpose many beautiful designs in candles are imported.

—Silk brocades wrought with gold thread are used as furniture covers.

—Old-fashioned mirrors over the mantel are again in style.

—White nuns veiling is very pretty and delicate for a bedspread, a dandelion or a thistle design showing buds, full blown blossoms and the airy puff of the seed ball would be a novel design for decoration.

—Novelties in brass are being brought forth as rapidly as designers can make them, there are multitudes of small objects made for the decoration of the walls and mantels, shields, breastplates, swords, scimetars and daggers; paper weights appear to be without end in variety, crocodiles, petite billiard tables, flocks of geese, lizards, peaceful eagles, etc.; paper cutters are quills in metal swords, and more curious than all is a side plan of a gondola with the keel sharpened for cutting and the Lion of St. Marc as a handle; brass pitchers are novel, they are made in showy designs and contain a great amount of work; pedestals in brass come in all prices and sizes; the number of elegant articles is indeed legion, and every one who is interested in whatever is beautiful and unique will find it a pleasure as well as an interesting art lesson to visit the store of L. Wright Kirby, 909 Broadway.

—Finger bowls of heavy cut crystal are very elegant.

—Centre-pieces of beautiful Venetian glass have a mirror at the base surrounded with flowers of like composition.

—Costly though they may be thought there is really nothing so economical in the long run nor so continuously satisfying in the adornment of a home as a well-selected assortment of choice Oriental rugs; the charm in all Eastern carpets, apart from the marvellous workmanship, lies in the rich harmonizing tones of color; the sale of these carpets and rugs is steadily increasing, and Eastern dealers regard the trade as yet only in its infancy, wherever Oriental carpets are used specimens of Indian metal work will be among the most appropriate articles of furniture or decoration, the Indian hand-wrought chased goods are the most elegant it is possible to conceive; an effect is produced of gold shining through a mist, which is indescribably rich and beautiful; at T. A. O. Hague's establishment, of 28 West Twenty-third street, was noticed a very attractive collection of the products of Persia, India and Arabia.

Funeral of E. H. Ludlow.

The funeral service took place on Monday morning, at Zion Church, corner of Madison avenue and Thirty-eighth street. The edifice was crowded with friends of the deceased, the real estate interest being largely represented. The officiating minister was the Rev. Dr. Charles C. Tiffany, assisted by the Rev. Dr. H. Y. Satterlee. The remains were borne into the church at half-past nine, the coffin being surmounted by a simple sheaf of wheat, flowers having been omitted. The pall bearers were: Morris Wilkins, James A. Roosevelt, H. H. Cammann, Charles H. Tillotson, J. Kearney Warren and Goldsborough Banyer. The body was followed by the following relatives of the deceased: his son, E. Livingston Ludlow and wife; Elliott Roosevelt and Miss Hall, granddaughter of Mr. Ludlow; Henry Parish and Miss Susan Ludlow, another granddaughter; Robert H. Livingston, Jr., a brother of Mrs. Ludlow; Valentine G. Hall, Edward H. Ludlow, Jr., and E. Hall, three grandsons. Mrs. E. H. Ludlow and her daughter, Mrs. Valentine G. Hall, Jr., were unable to be present, owing to indisposition. The service was very impressive, the "Rock of Ages" being sung with great pathos by the choir. As the body moved out of the church many were visibly affected. Among those present were Parke Godwin, John H. Sherwood, David Dudley Field, Fleming Smith, Richard V. Harnett, Cyrus Clark, William E. Laimbeer, J. Pierpont Morgan, T. S. Clarkson, E. A. Cruikshank, Thomas L. Ogden, James E. Levines, Carlisle Norwood, Albert Bellamy, Delano C. Calvin, William H. Gunther, General J. Watts De Peyster, Geo. H. Scott, Matthew Clarkson, Edmond J. Sause, Jr., S. D. Hatch, James Bleecker, Geo. A. Folsom, Carlisle Norwood, T. Bailey Myers, Christian E. Detmold, John B. Ireland, Louis Mesier, J. Augustus Hamilton, Ambrose C. Kingsland, John F. B. Smyth, Gordon W. Burnham, V. K. Stevenson, Samuel D. Babcock, Matthew Wilks, George L Kingsland, John W. Hamersley, David L. Clarkson, Geo. R. Reed, J. Romaine Brown, D. Willis James, Daniel M. Seaman, Matthew Clarkson, Benjamin Richards, Edward M. L. J. Carpenter, S. F. Jayne, W ilkins, S. Walley Brown, James C. Hall, Jr., Edward S. Wilkins and John Halm. A long line of carriages followed the funeral cortege to the depot. The remains were interred in the family vault at Tivoli, Ducthess County.

Dr. Archibald Maclay, an old classmate of Mr. Ludlow, was seen at his house by a representative of THE RECORD AND GUIDE. He is a fine old gentleman, well preserved, and in his seventy-third year. His rosy cheeks and erect bearing give him the appearance of a man of sixty. He said: "I knew Edward H. Ludlow very well when a young man. We were class-mates together at the College of Physicians and Surgeons more than half a century ago, and graduated at the same time. The old college, which was the parent of the present institution on Fourth avenue and Twenty-third street, was then located on Barclay street, west of Broadway, a three story unpretentious brick structure. Amongst our professors were David Hossack, Valentine Mott and Alexander H. Stephens. I was always friendly with young Ludlow; indeed he was liked by all. He was distinguished among the students for his courtesy and urbanity, and his society was sought after. I was very fond of him and all the class liked him. In personal appearance he was a handsome fellow. He had a fine eye, was vivacious, had sound reasoning powers and a good heart. He was, in fact, recognized as being superior to the generality of students. One of his principal 'chums' was Gunning S. Bedford, whose son, if I recollect aright, was once Recorder of this city."

Who will be Commissioner of Public Works?

Editor RECORD AND GUIDE:

Hubert O. Thompson's friends say he will be certainly re-appointed as Commissioner of Public Works. It is alleged that a sufficient number of Aldermen were long ago secured to decline confirming anyone but Mr. Thompson. This matter was fixed, it is said, before Governor Cleveland was induced to veto the tenure of office bill. Lawyer Coudert is, it is rumored, the trustee of a pledge made by William R. Grace that he would re-appoint Hubert O. Thompson if elected Mayor. Of course Mr. Grace will not want to do this and he is far more keenly alive to his public responsibilities than to his private obligations. It was John Kelly who made him Mayor, but he had no scruple in throwing his patron over when elected, and if he can get out of his bargain with Thompson in any legal way he will do so but, as I have said, Thompson expects to be re-appointed.

SPECTATOR.

The General Term of the Superior Court rendered a decision lately in the case of Engel vs. Fisher, which will be of interest to the mercantile world, and settles a novel controversy. It appears that the defendan tin 1873 accepted certain drafts in Essegg, Austria, where he was then living, and thereafter in July of that year came to New York, where he has since been in business under a somewhat different name. In 1882 the plaintiff discovered him and asked him to pay a draft of about 4,000 florins. This the defendant refused to pay, and defended the action on the ground that the claim having matured more than six years ago, during all of which time the defendant had been within the State, it was outlawed. The court to-day handed down a decision that the statute will not run in favor of a debtor who comes into the country under an assumed name and continues to reside therein under such assumed name with the intent of concealing himself from his creditors, against a debt incurred under the REAL name. On the application of B. Lewinson, who represented the plaintiff, the judgment rendered below in favor of the defendant has been reversed.

Thurber on South American Trade.

To the Commission on South American trade: It was my intention to appear before you while the Commission was sitting in New York, but a press of engagements prevented, and I now desire to briefly submit some opinions founded upon the experience of my firm in endeavoring to build up a trade with South American countries. The primary requisite is speedy and frequent steam communication. Steamship lines develop business and build up their respective termini just as trunk lines of railroad do, and our experience in trying to build up a trade with South America, which has now extended over a period of several years, has convinced us that this is the starting point. Our position as competitors of England and other countries having frequent steam communication is perhaps well illustrated by an incident which occurred in our home trade. Two retail grocers, customers of ours, doing business at New Brighton, Staten Island, had been competitors for the trade of an out-lying suburb, the people of which had been in the habit of visiting New Brighton and buying at one store or the other as they found prices and goods to suit them, and the trade was about equally divided between them. I sold both of these men their goods. One began to increase his orders, while the other one diminished his. I knew nothing of the cause until the latter one said to me that he had got to buy a horse and wagon and engage a driver to solicit orders and deliver goods through this suburb, as his opponent had been doing it some time and was getting the trade away from him, and he had to do the same thing or stop trying to do that business. Now the merchants of the United States are precisely in the same position as regards those of England and other countries which have established steam lines, and this brings us to the consideration of how can these steam lines be obtained. I answer, in the same manner that our competitors have obtained them, by giving them a liberal compensation for mail service until a sufficient trade is developed to sustain them, when this compensation or subsidy, if you choose to so call it, can be withdrawn. The abuses connected with attempts heretofore made to subsidize steamship lines and railroad companies have created a popular prejudice against the word "subsidy," but it is only another form of "protection to American industries," and all the political economists, even the most ardent advocates of free trade, like John Stuart Mill, admit it is necessary to protect infant industries until they are sufficiently established to "run alone." The anti-subsidy cry, if carried to a logical conclusion, would stop the mails on every route in this country where the postage was not sufficient to pay the expense of carrying them. Steam and electricity have greatly abbreviated time and space, and commerce has outrun not only State boundaries but national boundaries. At any rate, practical business common sense tells us that in order to get our share of the trade we have got to offer equal facilities with our competitors, and the first requisite as above stated is that of frequent steam communication. Monthly lines will not do now-a-days; we must have semi-monthly or weekly lines. A monthly steamship line is as far behind the times now-a-days as a weekly paper is. Both are good things in their way, but do not come often enough for the times in which we live. We must not expect that the business developed by these lines will pay during the first year or two. The first problem is to get the business coming our way, and then it will gradually prove remunerative. There are many indirect advantages connected with the development of a commercial marine which are not at first apparent. There are, of course, other and minor requisites in establishing trade with South America, like the giving of credit, the establishment of branch houses or agencies, studying the wants of the various markets, and catering to them, knowledge of languages, &c., all of which will come naturally if we establish and sustain adequate means of communication. First give us this, then hold a grand exhibition or series of exhibitions under government auspices at the principal American port where these steam lines terminate, invite every nation or government on this continent to participate so that the people of each of these countries may become familiar with the production of the other, and the merchants of each would soon become acquainted with those of the other, and trade would develop in a surprising ratio. All of which is respectfully submitted by yours, very truly, (Signed) F. B. THURBER, of Thurber, Whyland & Co., New York.

A National Trail.

We have national banks and a great many other national institutions, some within the constitution and some without it; and a great many other national projects have been proposed, but never until the cattlemen met at St. Louis last week had there been a demand for a National Trail. The cattlemen in convention assembled unanimously demand the opening of a safe and cheap route from the extensive breeding grounds of the South to the extensive maturing grounds of the great Northwest, and they express the belief that this can only be accomplished by the establishment of "a national stock trail over which stock can be driven." They ask Congress to open, establish and maintain such a trail, "beginning at some point on Red River and extending thence in a north or northwest direction to the north line of the United States." There was a good deal of discussion over the route of the proposed trail. One delegate wished the convention to ask Congress to appropriate and set apart a belt six miles wide, beginning at the initial monument on Red River, in Texas, running thence north upon the 100th meridian line to the northeast corner of Texas; thence west by north to the northwest corner of Kansas; thence north along the 102d meridian line to the northern boundary of the United States—to be used as a national highway and cattle trail for the benefit of all citizens of these United States. All the plans substantially favor a close conformity to the 100th meridian, and all think the trail should be six miles wide. Were it not for the unusual width asked for one might think from reading the accounts that the delegates were discussing a local proposition, instead of a highway over the heart of the continent. The intention is, however, to connect Texas with the fattening pastures of Montana and the adjacent territories, by means of a wide trail that will admit of the slow movement of cattle in order that they may become acclimated as they proceed. The cattlemen claim that the question addresses itself not only to the producing portion of the community, but also to consumers in every part of the Union. Cheap and healthy meats is the great object in view; and it is claimed that a great trail, with perhaps occasional quarantine stations, will do more to keep down the Texas fever than all other remedial measures that can be devised. The trail does not run towards Georgia; but still we have a general interest in the subject, and we trust that Congress will not pigeon-hole the memorial of the cattlemen without first giving it a careful consideration.—Atlanta Constitution.

The South as a Field for Investment.

There is no better field for investment now than the South. In every Southern State there is great need of money to begin new enterprises or to carry on those already established. Farmers want money, business men want money, and those who are preparing to open up mines or to start manufactories want money. They are willing to pay a good interest for it, and they can afford to pay it. It is a mistake to suppose that they cannot furnish good security. The South is rich in resources. Her lands produce abundantly, her forests are valuable now, and are becoming more valuable every year, and her mines of iron and coal are equal to any in the world. It needs only a glance at the assessment rolls of the different Southern States to convince any one that the South is making rapid strides toward wealth. In 1879 the assessed value of property in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Kentucky, Tennessee and Arkansas was $2,184,000,000. The assessed value this year was $2,825,000,000, an increase in five years of $641,000,000. This increase is not attributable to inflated values, but to accumulated wealth. Property is not assessed higher now, in proportion to its value, than it was in 1879. As States have grown richer the rate of taxation has decreased. In this and some other of the Southern States the State rate of taxation is remarkably low. It is only within the last three or four years that the growth of the South in wealth has attracted the attention of the capitalists of the North to any great extent, and even now, outside of a small circle, the advantages the South offers to investors are not known. In any of the States named above money readily commands from 8 to 10 per cent., with excellent security. The great majority of Northern people who have money to loan are not realizing more than 4 per cent. for it. They would gladly send their money South if they could be convinced that it could be safely invested. To satisfy themselves on this point they have only to investigate for themselves. The money of the North made the Western States what they are. In 1878 the insurance companies of Connecticut alone had $50,000,000 invested in the West. Almost all of this money was placed on farms and secured by first mortgages. What was done for the West by the capitalist and moneyed institutions of Connecticut, Massachusetts and other Northern States can now be done for the South. The security in the South is just as good as it ever was in the West, and Southern lands are capable of being made just as profitable. During the coming winter the Northern people will get a better idea of the South and her resources than they ever had before. At the New Orleans Exposition they will see evidences of wealth that will surprise them. Their keen business sense will see opportunities for investing their money in the South that, it is hoped, they will not be slow to take advantage of. The election of Mr. Cleveland marks a new era in the material progress of the South. The Southern people now feel that the last barrier to the most perfect harmony of sentiment and feeling between the North and South has been removed, and they will work to promote the prosperity of the South more hopefully and energetically. It will be surprising if within a year Northern capital is not seeking investment in the South in great abundance.—Savannah News.

American Shipping.

The Democratic party has had a great deal to say for years past about the weakness of our navy and the decline of our merchant shipping. It has also echoed a good deal of the talk which a class of our political economists who aspire to be considered very English have indulged in against subsidies. As a matter of fact, our navy, compared with itself, is much stronger in every way than when the Democratic party went out of power, though relating to navies of foreign powers it has lost rank. For various reasons our merchant marine has decreased in the last quarter of a century. The Democratic party is committed to strengthening the navy, though that is not a traditional Democratic policy, and to building up our merchant marine, though that is as little so. So far as we can judge, the means they propose to pursue for these ends are simply to allow foreign nations to sell us their old ships and put an end altogether to American ship building. The idea of encouraging American ship-building and the increased ownership of sea-going vessels by Americans in the way that foreign nations encourage ship-building among themselves and the increase of their merchant marine is apparently not thought of. As unpopular a word as "subsidy" has been among them, it is by subsidies that others do what we want to do. France has for a number of years granted liberal sudsidies to French ship-builders and French ship-owners, and the foreign dispatches show that England does not halt in the policy by which she has extended her trade to all quarters of the earth. We ought to have an advantage in the Pacific trade, but our vessels cannot contend with the subsidized lines of England. Those dispatches state that England has managed to subsidize two mail routes to New Zealand, alternating weekly between an all-sea route from London and one by sea to New York, thence overland to San Francisco, and thence by steamer to New Zealand. British doctrinaires encourage ours to denounce subsidies, but British statesmen quietly go ahead and grant them wherever they can secure a new line of steamers and new trade by doing so.—St. Louis Commercial.

Over-production or Under-consumption.

There are those who assert that over-production is an impossibility; there may be under-consumption, but to say that an excess of good things in this world exists is a self-evident absurdity. Perhaps this is abstractly true, and if all heads were well sheltered, all bodies well clothed, all mouths well filled, all feet well shod and all physical and mental wants reasonably gratified there would be no excess, but just enough and no more; the markets would be healthy and steady, prices reasonable all around and the general condition of human affairs satisfactory. Nevertheless, it cannot be denied that in the present inharmonious and ill-adjusted arrangement of human relations, we do have what is practically over-production—congested markets, redundant supplies of all the staple commodities of commerce, an excess of agencies of commerce, sluggish trade, prices below the cost of production, low wages, very small profits when there are any profits at all, and lifelessness in all fields of enterprise and all departments of industry. There seems to be an excess of everything, and, what is puzzling, the excesses meet in the strangest contradictions. One might suppose that with an excess of farm products in the West and an excess of manufactures in the East, the railroads would have more than they could do. But there is an excess of railroads too, the crops do not move actively to the East nor the manufactures to the West—and the roads are not tasked to over two-thirds their capacity. Even from the ocean we hear the same complaint, there are too many ships, and hundreds and even thousands of steamers and sailing vessels are lying idle in the great ports of the world for want of cargoes, and the ship-yards on the Clyde are dull and lifeless. Too much is the universal malady—too much grain, too much woollen and cotton goods, too much sugar, too much coal, too much iron, too much lumber, too many boots and shoes, too much machinery, too many railroads, boats and ships, and, as a distressing result of all this excess, too much idle labor in the great industrial districts, not only of this country but of Europe. This condition of excess has prevailed for more than a year, and although a sudden revival of trade may cause it to vanish and times grow better, there are causes at work which must bring about a repeated recurrence of it in the future; for human ingenuity is incessantly engaged in devising new forces and new methods of production whereby one man can raise two bushels of grain where he now raises one, and make two yards of cloth where he now makes one. With this capacity to produce constantly increased, there would appear to be but one way out of the difficulty—increased consumption. In the midst of all the abundance, there are millions of human beings in the world who have not enough to eat and wear—who are suffering from want of shelter, food and clothing. If the existing surpluses were distributed to these they would be consumed, and the glut would disappear—and the great problem of the day, therefore, is to increase the capacity of the needy millions on the earth to buy what they require, and thus make a demand for the necessaries, comforts and luxuries which are now produced in excessive amounts.—St. Louis Republican.

The War against Middlemen.

In this age of socialistic ideas it is well to watch the drift of the movement against middlemen in the different countries. In France the movement is in the direction of paternal control by the government; in England and Wales it takes the shape of insurance against sickness, loss of employment and death. In the United States trades unionism is in a transition state. In Germany, Bismarck is quietly placing himself in harmony with co-operation, people's banks, laborers' insurance companies, etc.—Atlanta Constitution.

The Canadian Pacific.

That the Canadian Pacific Railroad will be completed there can be no question. A good many engineering difficulties have been surmounted; more rapid progress has been made than at one time seemed likely, but when the line has been completed, what then? The Canadian Pacific is essentially a political line. When the union of the different provinces in British North America was proposed, it was part of the bargain that a transcontinental road through Canadian territory should be built. The pledge was entered into rather rashly, perhaps, but it had to be fulfilled without any consideration as to whether, after it had been built, the railway could be made to pay its expenses. By what means the company has been hitherto financed is partially known. It would be well if all the methods employed were more fully known, as they will be one day. A good deal of light has been thrown upon them, but not quite as much as could be wished. Still, unless all the estimates of the engineers are at fault; unless Mr. Collingwood Schreiber is deceived as to the amount of work still to be done and its cost, there are sufficient funds at the disposal of the company to accomplish the work laid out, and to complete a through line between Montreal and Port Moody on the Pacific Ocean, a distance of 2,895 miles. Again we ask, what then? It is certainly practicable to build the line, but how is it to be made to pay? The completion of the line will only, we fear, mark the beginning of fresh financial troubles. The Canadian government may, by giving a guarantee of 3 per cent. per annum for the next nine years upon the capital stock of the company, have been able to procure the funds for construction of a road for the building of which a pledge had been given; but is the government prepared, in addition to its guarantee, to make good the yearly deficiency between gross earnings and working expenses which will almost certainly occur; and if not, how is this deficiency to be met? It seems to have been taken for granted that the road would pay its working expenses; but of this we fail to see any assurance, or, in point of fact, any prospect. Where then is the deficiency to come from? There is a similar case in Brazil, of a railroad enjoying a government guarantee which cannot pay its way. The Imperial Brazilian, Natal & Nova Cruz Railway has a guarantee of 7 per cent. upon a capital fixed at £618,300. This guarantee, amounting to £43,281 per annum, has hitherto been punctually paid by the Imperial government, but it does not suffice to pay 7 per cent. to the shareholders for the simple reason that the line is falling short by some £10,000 per annum of meeting its working expenses, and this deficiency has to be made good out of the sum received from the Imperial treasury, because there is no other fund out of which it can be paid. Supposing that in a similar fashion the Canadian Pacific is unable to pay its working expenses, will the Dominion government pay the difference between the income and the expenditure of the "prodigal son," or will it say that the deficiency must be made good out of the guarantee? This is a question which we have not heard broached, and one to which certainly no definite reply has been given. Why does not Mr. Stephen tell the shareholders something more? Why does he not speak out frankly as to the position and prospects of his road? He has been here for some time; yet beyond vague rumors every now and again as to the formation of fresh syndicates there has been nothing to indicate his presence in London. —London Financial News.

A New Great Ore Region.

A district that gives promise of becoming an important producer will be opened upon the south shore of Lake Superior before the shipping season of 1884 comes to a close. This is the Lake Agogeebic range, where numerous iron properties have been developed to such an extent that they will be prepared to ship ore as soon as the railroad tapping that district reaches Ashland, which is to be made the shipping port for the Agogeebic mines. Ore docks are in course of construction at Ashland, and the contractors expect to have the road—the Milwaukee, Lake Shore & Western—through to that point by November 1. Those interested in the new field intend to make a good showing next season, and your correspondent sees no reason why that district should not be heard from loudly next year, as there is plenty of ore there, and much of it is of fine quality. With reference to the future, the writer evidently has very great faith in the advantages of the Lake Superior region, for he predicts: "The iron fields lying south and west of Lake Superior in this State, Wisconsin (part of the so-called Agogeebic mines are in the latter State), and Minnesota are destined soon to furnish a vastly enhanced quantity of the very best ores in the world. Not only this, but they will place their ores on the market at prices that must necessarily drive out the inferior ores of certain competing fields, which were able to find sale for their product while high prices were maintained by making heavy concessions to furnace-owners, and thereby making it an object for the latter to use these ores, though the grade of iron produced was not at all equal to what they could obtain by using the Lake Superior ores."—Cor. Pittsburg Telegraph.

Look Here, Manufacturers and Merchants.

Everyone may not know that a very important agreement has recently been entered into by the governments of Great Britain, France, Italy, Belgium, Spain, Holland, Portugal, Switzerland, Servia, Brazil, Guatemala, San Salvador, Ecuador and Tunis for the formation of an International Union for the Protection of Industrial Property, under the rules of which "the subjects or citizens of each of the contracting States shall enjoy, in all the other States of the Union, in everything that concerns patents for inventions, designs, models and trade marks, the same advantages that the law of these States accords to their own citizens, including the same protection and the same legal remedy against persons infringing their rights, on the sole condition of submitting to the formalities and regulations which each State imposes on its own citizens." Under the same treaty it is agreed that commercial names shall be protected in all the States belonging to the Union, by the seizing, at the request either of the party injured or a diplomatic representative, of articles imported into any of the Union States under a fictitious name of a person or place, or otherwise marked in a way calculated to deceive purchasers, or to injure the business or reputation of established manufacturers; and, moreover, that applicants for patents or inventions who have filed their application in any one of the treaty States, shall be entitled by that act to a term of six months for European countries, and of seven months for countries beyond the sea, within which he shall have the right, prior to all others, to file applications for patents in any or all the other States of the Union, in accordance with the regulations of each State in regard to patents.

Notice is given that the Board of Street Opening and Improvement deem it to be for the public interest to alter and change the grades of streets and avenues, and portions of streets and avenues, in order to adjust the grades thereof to the grade of 8th avenue within that section of the city bounded on the south by the northerly line of 59th street, on the north by 123d stree , on the east by the westerly side of the Central Park and the westerly side of Seventh avenue, and on the west by the easterly side of Ninth avenue.

Defending the Bakers.

Editor RECORD AND GUIDE.

I see you are inclined to think the bakers are making a fortune too quickly. Please look at it from their standpoint. After an experience of twenty-four years selling their goods, what I say on the subject ought to have some weight. A single barrel of flour, 196 pounds, will make 280 pounds of dough. They are now scaling 18 ounces for 5 cents, making 249 loaves selling for $12.45. The average expense of working up a barrel of flour is four to five dollars—it depends greatly on the number they bake—say it costs $4 50, leaving $7.95 to pay for the flour, which costs the baker now delivered $5.50, leaving $2.45 for his profit and out of this he must deduct for stale bread, which is considerable at times. You of course know rent has not varied much the last five years, wages, coke or coal are the same, the only thing that has fallen in price are the goods he uses. It is a business that requires close personal attention and he must be ready to work every day in the year, and to save anything the "Boss" has to do more work than any man he hires, consequently the proportion of failures are quite as large as in any other business. There are a few bakers making larger bread for the same money as well as some (and only a very few) making smaller, but the above is the average price per pound for bread sold in and about New York city. BOSS BAKER.

REMARKS.—Our correspondent will not convince bread-eaters that they should be charged as much when wheat is 80 cents a bushel as they were when it was $2.00 a bushel. Rent and labor have got to come down, and bakers' loaves must become larger or there will be a row among consumers. ED. RECORD AND GUIDE.

Real Estate Department.

Judged by the filing of plans for new buildings and the number of Conveyances at the Register's office, real estate dealing is in a fair way. Undoubtedly there are a greater number of transactions than last year, and money is still being invested in new structures, but, on the other hand, there are very few auction sales apart from the foreclosures, and these last are unpleasantly frequent. Dealers do not speak hopefully respecting rentals next spring nor does anyone estimate higher prices. There may be an active business, but it will be at reduced valuations. Should this winter see any reform in our system of transfers it is possible that the dealings might be very active in the spring after the new Real Estate Exchange is under way. In the meantime business is undeniably dull.

There were but few sales at the Exchange during the week except those held pursuant to court orders in foreclosure or partition suits. Nearly all of the former were new dwellings or tenements and parties in interest invariably became the purchasers. The New York Life Insurance Company bid in seven houses on East Sixty-fifth and Sixty-seventh streets, on which there was due the company nearly $500,000. Next week dwellings, tenements and lots will be sold under foreclosure on which $189,100 is due the same company. Yesterday store property on Greenwich street and Ninth avenue, and lots on West Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth streets, were sold at good prices. On Wednesday the five dwellings, Nos. 33, 35, 41, 43 and 45 East Sixty-third street, were withdrawn from sale, as satisfactory bids were not made.

R. V. Harnett will sell on Tuesday, December 9th, the two four-story brown stone office buildings with stores Nos. 21 and 23 Maiden lane. These are extremely desirable investment properties. This section of the city is now the headquarters of the diamond, gold, silver and jewelry trade of the country. As this is an executor's sale, we expect to see a large attendance of investors and very spirited bidding. This is leasehold property with renewals.

Attention is called to the valuable business property offered by V. K. Stevenson & Co., No. 106 Broadway, embracing houses on Broadway running through to New street, and lots on Fifth and Madison avenues, on Broadway and Fifty-ninth street; also lots on One Hundred and Forty-fifth street, near the "L" station. These parcels are among the choicest on New York island, and are portions of the estate of the late Mr. Stevenson.

The three-story brick building No. 152 Bleecker street, with lot 25x125, has been sold for $23,000 to Mr. Weindhandler.

Emil C. W. Macholdt has sold for Dennis Loonie the last of his five-story brown stone flats on the south side of Seventy-first street, between Second and Third avenues, 20x70x100, to Isaac Teichman, for $20,500.

V. Freund & Son have sold, for Moritz Bauer, the five-story stone front tenements, Nos. 217, 219 and 221 East Seventy-third street, for $22,500 each, to Charles Goldstein.

The Blodgett estate have sold five lots on the south side of Sixty-fifth street, 175 feet east of Eleventh avenue, to Henry Lipman, for $25,000.

The Equitable Life Assurance Society has purchased the Metropolitan Bank building on the northeast corner of Broadway and Pine street for $762,500. The property has a frontage of 43.10 feet on Broadway, 101.9 on Pine street x54.8x10[illegible].8. The company now owns the entire front on Broadway, from Cedar to Pine street, the dimensions being 168.5 feet on Broadway, 224 on Pine and 223 on Cedar street. This takes in the entire block, with the exception of the Nassau street front, which is about 85 feet deep. The company purchased Nos. 4 and 6 Pine street, from William K. Aston, in March last for $267,500, and Nos. 8 and 10 Pine street was sold by the Storm estate in April for $400,000. It may be added that the cost of the Metropolitan Bank is $113.52 per square foot. The property of the Williamsburgh Fire Insurance Co., on Broadway, northeast corner Liberty street, cost $115.96 per square foot, and as the former building is two blocks nearer Wall street, and only one block distant, the purchase has been effected at a figure which, were it not for the enforced realization of the Metropolitan Bank's assets, could not have secured the building. The society intends at some future date, when the necessity of their enlarged business requires it, to improve the property so as to make one immense building of the whole. It may be of interest to mention that the highest price paid for down-town property was by M. Wilks, for the southwest corner of Wall and Broad streets, the figure being $330.70 per square foot.

Out Among the Builders.

J. R. Thomas has been selected by the Armory Commission as the architect for the Eighth Regiment armory. The structure will have a frontage of 204 feet on Madison and Fourth avenues, and 400 feet on Ninety-fourth and Ninety fifth streets. It will be three stories and basement high. The latter will contain a menage, battery, drill room, battery room and a rifle range 300 feet long. The first story will have a drill room, 200x230, squad drill rooms, executive offices, &c. The second story will contain company's rooms, and the third a gymnasium, kitchen, &c. The exterior architecture shows a free treatment of the style that flourished in Scotland in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, giving means of offence and defence, as well as habitation. The cost of the building will be about $3[illegible]0,000.

Henry F. Kilburn has been selected as the architect for the Twenty-second Regiment armory on the Boulevard, Sixty-seventh and Sixty-eighth streets. Mr. Kilburn is unable to give particulars of the building at present owing to a remodelling of the plans being in progress. The style adopted by him is the early Norman. The building will also cost about $300,000.

There is a strong feeling amongst the unsuccessful architects who competed for the armories that they should receive some consideration for their work. Their expenses have varied from $300 to $500 each, and they think the commission should certainly make a small appropriation remunerating them.

Martin Grossman intends to erect three five-story brick tenements at Nos. 234, 236 and 238 Mulberry street.

James F. Crumbie intends to erect seven five-story brick and brown stone flats, 26.10x65 each, on the south side of Sixty-sixth street, 75 feet west of Avenue A, at a cost of about $100,000. The sketches are being drawn by J. H. Valentine. The same architect has the plans for four five-story brick and brown stone tenements to be erected for John Walker on the southwest corner of Second avenue and One Hundred and Fifteenth street. The corner will be 22x62, the two inside 27.6x62 each and the one adjoining 25.11x80. The cost will be about $70,000.

Andrew Spence has the plans under way for five improved three-story brick stores and dwellings, 20x50 each, to be erected on the northwest corner of Eighth avenue and One Hundred and Fortieth street, for P. J. O'Brien, at a cost of about $40,000.

Bart Walther has the designs on the boards for altering the school-house on the west side of Mulberry street, between Grand and Hester streets, into a four-story brick factory, 50x90, for Louis Metzger, at a cost of about $5,000.

William H. Appleton, the well-known publisher, intends to erect a private house and stable on a lot, 30x100.5, on the south side of Sixty-second street, commencing 86.8 west of Fourth avenue.

John J. Macdonald will commence at once the erection of five five-story brick and stone double tenements on the north side of Seventy-first street, commencing 200 feet east of First avenue.

The Board of Education has awarded the contract for the erection of a new school-house on One Hundred and Tenth street, between Second and Third avenues, to George B. Christman, for $112,889. The building will be four stories high, and of brick with Dorchester stone trimmings.

A. B. Ogden has the plans under way for eight structures, to be erected on the southwest corner of Avenue A and Eighty-eighth street. Four will front on the avenue; they will be five stories high, brick and brown stone tenements and stores, 25.6x60 each. Three will face on the street, and will be 27x65 each, and the eighth will be a one-story store adjoining. The estimated cost to the owners, W. & R. A. Johnston, will be $90,000. The same architect has the sketches on the boards for four five-story improved flats and stores, to be built on the northeast corner of Lexington avenue and Eighty-first street, all fronting on the avenue. The corner will be 40x66, and of brick and Ohio stone, and the three adjoining 20.9x56.6 each, with brown stone fronts. The owner is Fernando R. Walker, and the estimated cost $50,000.

Thom & Wilson have drawn the sketches for two five-story brick and brown stone stores and tenements, 27x82 each, to be erected on the south side of Eighty-fourth street, 100 feet east of Third avenue, for Thomas Molony.

John Brandt has the plans for a five-story brick and brown stone tenement, 25x50, to be built on the south side of Eighty-first street, east of Avenue A, for Emil Haenschen at a cost $12,000.

A four-story brick and brown stone tenement, 25x65, is to be built for a Mrs. Connolly at No. 479 One Hundred and Forty-first street, between Morris and Rider avenues, to cost about $12,000.

The erection will now at once be proceeded with of the eleven five-story tenements announced last spring to be erected on the southeast corner of Third avenue and Ninety-sixth street, the owner being H. J. Macdonald. Six will be on the street, 28x62, with an 18-foot extension, and five on the avenue, 19x72 each. They are estimated to cost $150,000. John Brandt is the architect.

It is the intention of a west side property-owner to erect nine or ten private residences on Ninety-third street, between Ninth and Tenth avenues, and four or five on Ninety-second street. The architects will be D. & J. Jardine.

Fred. C. Withers has the plans under way for a two-story and basement brick and stone school-house, 50x60, to be erected for the Columbia Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, Washington, D. C., at a cost of about $18,000.

N. Gillesheimer has the designs for an ornate two-story and attic cottage, 30x60, to be built at Steinway, L. I., for H. A. Laimbeer, at a cost of about $8,000.

Brooklyn.

H. Vollweiler is preparing plans for a three-story frame double stores and tenement, 25x50, with one-story extension 12x17, to be erected at No. 1547 Broadway, for Mr. Heiland at a cost of $4,000.

Special Notices.

Arrangements have already been perfected for two more sales of building lots in the near future—one in Brooklyn and one in this city—with title insured by the Title Guarantee and Trust Company at the expense of the seller, after the manner so successfully practiced at the Fox estate sale in October. The prediction then made, that the result of that sale would be to soon make it the general custom at such sales to have the title insured before a bid was taken and leave the purchaser nothing to pay beyond the amount bid at the sale, is already being verified. The owners of the Fox estate can figure a clear gain of 20 per cent., or an aggregate of over $6,000, as one measure of the advantages of the new method to them, while the purchasers have secured their lots for less in the end and have been saved all annoyance and delay. These significant facts are of interest to all owners of real property, and cannot fail of their effect on future transactions. It is perfectly plain that it is better and cheaper and safer to have a single careful and financially guaranteed examination and set of searches covering the whole tract and made by an independent corporation which, to protect itself as an insurer is bound to use the greatest possible care, than to have the same identical labor gone over separately after the sale by as many different attorneys as there are purchasers at the sale.

The Ansonia Brass and Copper Co., in addition to their lamp business, have added a full line of gas fixtures, &c. This firm have their own copper and brass mines. The ore is taken in its crude state to the manufactory at Ansonia, Conn., where the company have invested over $3,000,000 in machinery; and having the largest and most complete work in the United States, they claim to be able to furnish goods better and cheaper than any other firm in the market. Mr. W. H. Hayden Miller has charge of this department. Builders, architects and property owners are invited to examine their line of goods at their showrooms, No. 21 Cliff street, New York.

The Double Tube Steam Radiator and Ventilator is a novelty in steam-heating apparatus. It consists of a three-and-a-half inch tube, surrounded by a four-inch tube, leaving an annular steam space between for the reception of steam. This gives a large radiating surface from the outside, and the cold air from the floor, drawn through the inside tube, becomes rapidly heated, thus inducing circulation and ventilation, so that the appas ratus is both a heater and ventilator at the same time. Full information can be obtained from Thomas M. Mayer, No. 55 North Seventh street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Brooklyn and New York builders and architects are referred to the card of Messrs. Marx & Wachschlager, designers and manufacturers of newels, mantels, mirrors and buffets. Among the Brooklyn houses for which this firm has supplied the work is that of Mr. De Baum on Bedford avenue, Mr. Stewart on Quincy street near Tompkins avenue, Mr. Grening on Steuben and Lafayette avenue, and for Mr. Carlin on Lafayette and Steuben street. They also turn out panel and fine cabinet work. Their factory is at Nos. 97 and 99 Gwinnett street, Brooklyn, between Marcy and Harrison avenues.

BUILDING MATERIAL MARKET.

BRICKS.—Operators on the market for Common Hards continue to throw up their hands in horror upon the approach of a newspaper man seeking information, and about all that can be obtained in the way of a report is "dull and nominally unchanged." The mild weather is permitting the pushing forward of some work it was thought likely might go over, and this keeps up consumption, and there is also a little piling taking place, but the same influence keeps navigation open and supplies come forward steadily. No one will admit a surplus in first hands, but the accumulation has been full enough for all outlets presented and available on call. Holders, too, have been ready operators at former rates, and according to the quotations named there is no variation in the general run of figures as compared with a week or two past. A portion of the trade were expressing satisfaction over a little fuller movement in medium grades of stock costing say about $5.25@5.50 per M, though fine quality still meets with proper appreciation. Pales are somewhat more plenty, and while valued about as before, it requires the very best of stock to command outside figures.

HARDWARE.—Demand without much animation and confined very largely to standard goods taken in small quantities to satisfy immediate requirements. Buyers, in fact, have brought business down to a comparatively fine margin, and there is not much reason to anticipate any change during the few remaining weeks of the year. Manufacturers in the meantime are working carefully and so arranging production as to place matters into good form preparatory to the taking of inventories. There is the usual uncertainty regarding values, though the advantage tends in buyers' favor as a rule, and quoting on list rates is of a nominal character only.

HAIR.—Former quotations on plasterers' hair are somewhat modified, but the market at the present time is steady for both kinds of stock. Demand is possibly a little slower as a natural result of the season, but there is also a diminished offering of supplies, and that places sellers in an advantageous position. Shipping orders continue to come to hand to a fair extent.

LATH.—The feeling of confidence among receivers has been endorsed by results and the line of cost shows a further advance. Arrivals were fair for the season but buyers stood ready to take the offering as quickly as made and were ready to engage parcels afloat with receivers of course making good use of the advantage and putting cost up to $2.35 per M, at which figure the market closes firm. There has been a little call from out of town but about all the sales were made to regular local customers. Only small amounts are known to be due and confidence in ability to maintain the position is expressed.

LIME.—The arrivals have been larger coastwise but demand proved fully responsive and the offering disappeared without much of an effort on the part of sellers and full former rates were obtained. Quite a little amount is now said to be afloat but receivers express no fears regarding their ability to dispose of it.

LUMBER.—A close, careful search through the market fails to detect anything of special interest this week either in the yard or the wholesale trade. Dealers make some distribution of stock from day to day but it is only a sort of aggravation and there is no promise of any early improvement. The selling of goods from first hands is slow, and, were it earlier in the season, the effect upon the tone could hardly fail to prove depressing but with the greatly lessened danger of a heavy offering holders possess a certain degree of advantage inducing more or less claim for steadiness. It is straight, full and direct demand, however, now most needed to afford an actual stimulus, and the prospect for obtaining such appears to be quite as remote as ever. There is stock and assortment sufficient for any ordinary outlet from now until spring and some fears are expressed that in instances the load will be rather heavy to carry.

Eastern Spruce is salable to a moderate extent but buyers are not standing around waiting for cargoes to come in, and even at this late season a very few arrivals together would make an accumulation difficult to handle. Prices in consequence are not walled in by thorough supporting influences and sellers have doubtful advantage in pretty much all cases. For the mills at work the proportion of orders is fair and special cuts under hurry of demand could not be obtained except at pretty full cost. Randoms may still be quoted at $12 50@15.00 nominally, and specials firm at $15@17 per M, according to cut.

White Pine is a pretty dull and unsatisfactory article of merchandise to handle at the moment. Choice uppers are firm and form but the usual small proportion of supply, with owners ready to carry stock rather than shade valuation, but all other grades are plenty and neglected with low cost either hinted at or openly named failing entirely as an attraction for orders. Consumption generally is light and exporters handle nothing except under positive instructions. We quote at $16@17 for West India shipping boards; $18@27 for South American do.; $13@14 for box boards, and $16@18 for extra do.

Yellow Pine gets a few orders for some special call, but finds no open demand, and all reports repeat about the old dull and uninteresting story. There is occasionally some talk of a steadier undertone, based on unremunerative returns to manufacturers, but the claim loses all support when a chance to bid excites competition among sellers. We quote as follows: Randoms, $17@19.50 per M; Specials, $19.50 @21 do.; Green Flooring Boards, $20@22; Dry, do., do., $22@23; Siding, $20@22 do.; Cargoes f. o. b. at Atlantic ports, $13@15 for rough, and $18@20 for dressed Cargoes f. o. b. at Gulf ports, $12@14 for rough, and $20@21 for dressed.

Hardwoods are doing as well as could be expected, but at the best there is not much of a market, and no changes of importance. It would have to be pretty good stock offered from first hands to attract attention, but if something attractive did appear a fair rate might be depended upon. We quote at wholesale rates by car load as follows: Walnut, $65@100 per M.; ash, $33@40 do.; oak, $30@55 do.; maple, $20@32.50 do.; chestnut, $25@30 do.; cherry, $50@80 do.; whitewood, $27@35 do., do.; elm, $22@25; hickory, $45@50 do.

Shingles have a moderate export demand and that is about all, with the general line of prices remaining nominally as before. We quote Cypress at $8.00@8.50 per M, for 5x20 and $11.00@12.00 do. for 6x20 regularly assorted shipping. Pine shipping stock $2.00@2.50 for 18 inch, and Eastern saw grades at $2.00@2.50 for 16 inch, as to quality and to quantity. Eastern shaved cedar $4.00@4.50 per M. Machine dressed cedar shingles quoted as follows: for 30 inch, $15.00 @20.00 for A, and $23@28.50 for No. 1; for 24 inch, $13.00@15 for A and $18.50@20.50 for No. 1; for 20 inch, $8@9.50 for A and $11.00@12.50 for No. 1.

To South America	2,515,000

STATE.

ALBANY MARKET.

The Argus reports for week ending December 2, as follows:

The cold weather still holds off and those buyers who have postponed their purchases as long as possible have been favored with a mild week and have bought largely to fill up their stock for the winter. All the barges and vessels, and many canal boats, having brought down their last load for the season, have helped to carry away the large amount of lumber which has been shipped. This is probably the last week of large trade, though some considerable may be done should the river remain navigable. All kinds of lumber were covered in the sales, and there is a large and well assorted stock left in the market. Hard woods are in good stock, and shingles and lath also.

THE WEST.

The Chicago Northwestern Lumberman as follows:

Prices have remained without material change. Sales have been made within the range of previous quotations. The weather was so disagreeable Monday and Tuesday that buyers were neither plenty nor excited. Sales have been made quietly, and without competition among buyers. It is said that the advantage recently gained on No. 2 dry inch lumber, consequent on the southwestern demand at the yards, has been measurably lost since the restoration of rates. It is probable that the last sales of the season will be made at about present prices.

Quotations are as follows:

Piece stuff, green	$8 50@ 8 75
Long timbers and joists, green	10 00@12 00
Coarse common	9 00@ 9 50
Boards and strips, No. 2, green	9 50@11 00
" medium, green	11 00@15 00
" No. 1, green	15 00@18 00
High grade	18 00@22 00

The current market season has been characterized by less activity than any former season of late years, and a lower range of prices from the start. The price of piece stuff on May 1 was the same as on December 1, 1883—namely, $9.50; on November 22, just past, it was quoted $8.50 to $8.75, or not quite $1 less than it was at the close of the season last year, or the beginning of this. When we consider how much the market has labored under this year the decline is not startling No. 2 boards, of a fair quality, are fully $1.50 cheaper than they were last year, while coarse common of an inferior grade has crowded the market and demoralized prices. Good and medium stock is cheaper by $1.50 to $3 than it was last year. The difference in the value of yard stocks relatively to the two years has been greater than it has been on the cargo market, which represents lumber in bulk.

LUMBERMAN AND MANUFACTURER,
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

There is so little trade in the whole Northwest that it is not worth talking about. Nearly all leading houses have ceased all efforts for and abandoned all expectations of trade for the present. The Chicago cut rate has taken all the business of the Missouri Valley and the severe weather in the Northwest has stopped all buying. Prices are merely nominal, a few who are hard up for change will make prices to suit. A number of heavy operators are on the market to pick up heavy job lots. Notable one from Nebraska who desires 300 cars or more if it can be had at the prices which Madam Rumor makes, but a week's hunt has not enabled him to find the stuff at the figures. The lumber is desired to be held on speculation.

Lake and river navigation has closed and all attention is being given to the logging preparations. The log cut promises to be smaller than last season, but not much more than will equal the surplus of old logs carried over.

Chicago is happy in the belief that she has filled the West full of lumber on the 5 per cent. rate, very much of which the shippers hold on sale in Kansas, Missouri and Iowa.

The trade of St. Louis has been less disturbed by the war than any other point, the trade and prices in that city being nearer maintained than at any other river point.

ENGLAND.

The London Timber Trade's Journal as follows:

American Black Walnut.—In this there continues to be a very fair trade doing; large-sized prime logs especially are in demand and bring good prices, but the market is certainly not overdone with such. We notice that several consignments of medium-sized good useful logs have lately arrived, which are sure to find a ready sale. The parcel of squares to which we referred in our last is now landed and appears to be a sound and salable lot.

American Whitewood.—Owing, we suppose, to so much stock having been lately taken into consumption, trade in this shows less activity just now; as we have before stated, the good reputation of this wood is now fully established, and we expect it will continue to develop considerably.

Californian Redwood.—The sale of the first cargo of this wood next week will be an interesting event in the trade. From its many peculiar merits we anticipate that most manufacturers in the trade will like to have some stock, so that from their own experience they may be able to ascertain how it may prove serviceable for their own special business.

NAILS.—The market is much the same as before recorded. A portion of the trade are inclined to talk with great firmness, and nearly all express quite steady views and seem to feel that there is no real necessity for any loss of advantage during the balance of the year. Demand is likely to fall away this month, but there is faith in the comparative moderate accumulations of stock and power to keep production within manageable bounds The present average quotations range at $——@—— per keg for 10d. to 60d., with rather better terms obtainable if buyers are willing to handle large invoices.

PAINTS, OILS, ETC.—Trading has been light and uncertain and of but little account as a factor upon the market to influence the tone. Not much demand could be expected at this season, however, and most dealers are gradually arranging for inventories and straightening out of books with the end of the year. But little variation is made on price, and the line of quotations for the present has rather a nominal basis. Linseed oil sells moderately and closes about steady at 52@53 for domestic, and 53@55 for foreign. Spirits turpentine generally slow and a trifle easier in tone at 32@34c. per gallon, according to size of invoice.

PITCH AND TAR.—Business has been very dull, and there is no feature of importance to advise on the market at the present time. Rates about steady. We quote pitch $2.25@2.30 per bbl., Tar $2.50@3.00 do., according to quantity, quality and delivery.

MORTGAGES.

NOTE.—The arrangement of this list is as follows: The first name is that of the mortgagor, the next that of the mortgagee. The description of the property then follows, then the date of the mortgage, the time for which it was given, and the amount. The general dates used as headings are the dates when the mortgage was handed into the Register's office to be recorded.

Whenever the letters "P. M." occur, preceded by the name of a street in these lists of mortgages, they mean that it is a Purchase Money Mortgage, and for fuller particulars see the list of transfers under the corresponding date.

J. T. LINDSEY, Business Manager.

The new Real Estate Exchange has had its annual election, and the report of its financial condition and prospects has given very general satisfaction. It has so far been a well and economically managed corporation. Great things are naturally expected of it In addition to its value to the trade and regulation of the real estate business, it ought to exert an influence over State legislation affecting the interests of realty. We have had too many pretentious reform organizations undertaking to represent the taxpayers; but the interest this Exchange will have in laws affecting property will be a real one. Hereafter there will be a centre for the real estate ownership of the city, and the voice of the taxpayers can be made known authoritatively in Albany and at the City Hall.

Although the stock market continues depressed there is a strong undertone which may show itself in higher prices after the holidays. Our exports are very heavy, averaging some $2,000,000 per week more than the corresponding weeks of last year. Our imports at the same time show a falling off. The movement of corn and hogs is beginning to affect favorably the incomes of the western roads. The Northwest, which has been running behind last year's receipts for seven months past, has just begun to report gains over last year. The combined reports of the Central and the West Shore show that the receipts are as large as those monopolized formerly by the New York Central, and were rates as high as three years ago would produce enough income to pay 8 per cent. dividends on the Central as well as the interest on the bonds of the West Shore. The crop movement is simply enormous; there was never anything like it. Take wheat and flour for instance, in 1881 from July to December there was shipped to the northwestern markets 36,983,303 bushels. Last year for the same period there was shipped 59,730,766, but this year the sum total of wheat and flour shipped was 77,581,157. The cotton movement has been relatively as large, and as we have now commenced to market the largest corn crop ever grown in the country we may expect railway receipts from this time forth to be in excess of those of last year. With gold importations, large exports, small imports and a heavy business on the western roads there ought to be a better market for securities not far ahead. All the dealers report also a better feeling in the real estate market.

The Chamber of Commerce has memorialized Congress to construct adequate defences for New York harbor. It goes so far as to specify the turrets, guns, torpedoes and submarine mines which are required to make this city reasonably safe against any hostile fleet. It is no secret to any one that New York is at the mercy of any ordinary naval power. We have no navy—not a single gun, nor the means of making one, which would be of the slightest use in beating off a foreign armada. Some people profess to believe in torpedoes, but no torpedo system has yet been employed that has been of any value in protecting harbors. Even if we had a usable system it would require batteries of great guns to defend the shore works from the cannonade of an ordinary fleet, and these are not available. As a nation we are running a fearful and a criminal risk in leaving our seacoast cities in their present defenceless condition. It would take three years to construct the works and batteries that would properly defend New York harbor, while modern wars rarely last more than six months. This is a matter which especially appeals to the real estate interest of this city and Congress should be besieged with memorials from all our exchanges to make the necessary appropriations not only for this but for the other seacoast cities. But Congressmen who represent rural constituencies care very little for our seacoast cities, while the press of the latter would doubtless object to any appropriation for defensive works on the theory that all government work is for fraudulent objects.

Some of our city journals are afraid that the presence of American representatives at the Berlin-Congo international conference will commit this government to a foreign policy, the very opposite of that recommended by George Washington. But would the first President of the United States, were he living now, give the same advice that he did before the opening of the present century? We were then weak in numbers, wealth and power. What took place in the rest of the world was of small moment to us at that time, but how changed is the situation? We soon will have 60,000,000 of inhabitants, and the products of our soil find a market throughout the world. It is not inevitable that we must intervene in international disputes hereafter. It was an American who practically discovered this Congo land. Why should not we try and profit by the development of its resources?

Should we endorse the Nicaragua treaty and construct a ship canal outside of our own territory it would be accepted as a menace to western Europe, and would result finally in forcing us to build a navy and take a new attitude on all foreign affairs. Washington's foreign policy was wise for his day, but the nation has outgrown the traditions of its infancy and must meet the obligations which its maturity imposes upon it.

The Mortimer Building.

The Mortimer building, at Wall and New streets, is the latest of the big office buildings. It is not very big in area, being 56.11 feet on Wall street and 65.7 on New street. In height there are eight stories altogether, a basement of nearly white limestone, six stories of yellow brick and yellow terra cotta, and a roof story, the openings of which are encased in terra cotta. The roof itself is invisible, and the dormers inappreciable from any point opposite the building. From Broadway, however, it is seen that the central part of the Wall street front is crowned with a steep, dome-like roof.

The ground on each front declines rather rapidly from the corner, and the inequality of level is allowed for in the stone basement, the mouldings at the top of which are continuous and horizontal and which accordingly is lowest at this point. At the lower corner on New street it asserts itself as a division of the building, which is there composed of three distinct parts, as before described. The central division of six stories is also subdivided into three parts, each of two stories, by moulded cornices in terra cotta. These parts are virtually equal in magnitude, although the first story is somewhat taller than any other, and are identical in treatment. The openings are round arches grouped by twos between piers of slight projection stopped by the cornices, and are rigidly aligned over each other, so that each division is a counterpart of either of the others.

The corner is rounded and just after the wall becomes straight on the Broadway front it is slightly projected to make a feature of the central division of this front. The treatment of the openings is the same in this projecting pavilion, if it may be so called, as else where, except in the lower stories. These are occupied by a very large doorway, a round arch, sprung from the top of the basement and occupying, with its spandrils and piers, the whole of the first story in height and about one-third of the front in breadth. The scale and treatment of this feature would identify the building at once as the handiwork of Mr. Post, even if other signs were wanting, as they are not. To the left of this, in the first story, is a square-headed opening, the only exception to the rule of pairs of little arched windows.

This description, perhaps, suggests a monotonous building. If so, the suggestion is not misleading. Six stories of little arched openings, all virtually of the same size, all grouped alike, all shaped alike and all treated alike do not exactly suggest an exuberant and ever-changing fancy. It is true that the building is, in point of fact, a collection of little rooms of the same functional importance and consequently of the same architectural value. That is a condition of the problem which may excuse the architect for feeling as if he should like to give it up as insoluble. A plain statement of the case by means of uniform windows repeated through every story would not be exactly a work of art, but it would be a respectable and prosaic performance. The number and littleness of the necessary openings here seems to have annoyed the architect into thinking that by coupling the stories he could alter the scale of his building so as to make three imposing features instead of six unimposing features. No doubt something like that was feasible, but it could not be done by making the stories all alike and then running a cornice over every other one. That process does not give the front to which it is applied any organization of inter-dependent parts. The triple division, with a corresponding differentiation of the openings, would have relieved the monotony. But the triple division, with the stories left all alike, does nothing to relieve the monotony, and, on the other hand, dwarfs the little stories still further by giving a multiple of a story to scale it by.

The same effect of belittling the stories is produced by the enormous doorway, which would be excessive on almost any commercial building, but is here particularly excessive, with the diminution of the other openings brought about in the first place by the uniformity of treatment, and in the second place by the emphasis given to that uniformity in coupling the stories. In contrast with the apartments to which it gives access, this soaring and spreading doorway seems to be prepared for the passage of giants who, as soon as they have passed, shrink into dwarfs.

The projection of the front wall over this doorway into a quasi-pavilion suggests that the elevation was studied on paper, without due regard to the conditions of execution. By itself, and as it is seen from opposite the building, this projection is quite meaningless. A view of the roof from Broadway certainly suggests that it covers a part of the structure otherwise distinguished. Unfortunately the projection is quite inappreciable from any point of view from which the roof is visible, and quite unaccountable from any point of view from which the roof is invisible. No doubt the two seemed in the drawings to go very well together, and even to be necessary to each other.

We cannot, therefore, call the Mortimer building successful. Its plainness is in itself commendable in a commercial buiding, and the decoration with which this plainness is sparingly relieved is neither gross nor minute in scale, and is good in design. For the most part it is effectively placed, although the dormers are so high up and can only be seen at such an angle that it really matters very little how they are designed. It is only the attempt made to relieve the monotony by the divisions of the building that is seriously to be quarrelled with. These attempts are not only unsuccessful in their purpose, but they go far to counteract the impression the building would make, if no architecture had been applied to it, by a straightforward expression of its utilitarian purpose.

The Workingmen and the Corporations.

A pamphlet has made its appearance in Wall street circles which is exciting a good deal of attention, and, if its suggestions are acted upon, far-reaching consequences may result from its publication. The theme is the present extraordinary depression in business, and the remedy suggested is that the federal government should make liberal appropriations to at least partially employ the hundreds of thousands of laborers now out of work. The condition of the country is anomalous. Food and clothing are abundant and were never so cheap. Money is accumulating in immense sums at all the financial centres, yet mills are closing, workshops are being deserted, and the working people who are employed are forced to accept large reductions in their wages. As the wage receiving class are our great consumers their poverty soon makes itself felt in retail trade circles, and the impoverishment of this numerous class reacts upon the wholesale trade, and so every business interest suffers from the non-employment at good wages of the labor of the country.

The contention of the brochure we are considering is that direct government intervention would at once create a better state of things. Instead of paying the national debt before it is due the surplus moneys should be devoted to public works of a national character. As a nation we are defenceless. Why not construct proper defences for the exposed cities on our sea coast? Our Chamber of Commerce has already memorialized Congress to make liberal appropriations for guarding the important harbor of New York, which now is at the mercy of any tenth-rate naval power. A Turkish or Chinese flotilla could capture New York without any difficulty. We need a navy also, for we have none. Why not commence the work at once instead of waiting for several years? Then there are rivers and harbors to improve and custom houses and postoffices to build in all parts of the country. These works we must have in any event before many years pass by, then why not undertake them at once on a large scale, thus taking advantage of the extraordinarily low price of labor and material which now prevails? It would be economy to do this instead of waiting until business revives and materials and labor command high prices.

The announcement that government would appropriate all the surplus revenues for the coming year in works of public improvement would, it is argued, revolutionize the present business situation. Capitalists would be inspired with confidence. The money locked up in our banks and private safes would soon find its way into the channels of trade, and would act as a healthful stimulus to all the industries of the country.

But the pamphlet we are considering, while urging that all this should be done primarily for the working people, thinks that the time has come when the latter should refuse to countenance the anti-monopoly demagogues who are trying to cripple the railway system of the country. The legislative enactments designed to reduce the profits of the corporations have forced the latter to discharge tens of thousands of operatives and to cut down the wages of those remaining. Over 495,000 men were employed by the railway corporations in 1883, and over $195,000,000 was distributed among them that year in the form of wages; but the legislative enactments in the several States and the prostration of business has led to the enforced discharge of tens of thousands of men and the cutting down of wages by some 25 per cent. Hence the enactments passed in the presumed interests of the public have all been deadly blows to the working classes.

It is claimed by those who know that this pamphlet has met the ready endorsement not only of such labor organizations as have been made aware of its contents, but that the corporations are likely to lend a helping hand to an agitation demanding general appropriations for works of great and urgent public utility. In other words, there is a likelihood of a union between the corporations, leading business men and the working people for mutually advantageous ends. The author of this well-written and timely little work is understood to be Mr. F. C. Hollins, of the well-known banker and brokerage firm of H. B. Hollins & Co.

Opportunities Lost.

No person of taste and observation walking through the streets of New York can fail to regret that the foresight of those who built houses in certain quarters of the city was not equal to the "hindsight" of the present generation. In other words, it is clear that many splendid opportunities were lost for erecting edifices which would not only have been an ornament to the city, but exceedingly profitable to those who owned them. At every point where a number of streets cross one another, one of which is an important thoroughfare, there should have been building or buildings to accommodate a large retail trade. Take, for instance, the neighborhood of the Cooper Union. At this point Broadway, Fourth, Third and Second avenues are within a stone's throw of one another, Eighth and Ninth streets and Lafayette place and two other streets converge at this point. It should naturally have been the site for places of amusement, churches, a public hall and for stores calculated to attract a great retail traffic. A Macy's or a Ridley's started a quarter of a century ago would have done an immense business at this converging point for so many streams of population coming from and setting towards every point of the compass. Our first opera house was located here; but Peter Cooper alone seemed to understand the full advantages of this fine location. The late A. T. Stewart probably erected his great store hoping to attract the custom of the throngs of people who used the streets and avenues in his rear. He was one of the worst judges of real estate, as all his investments proved, while his strenuous and too successful efforts to prevent Broadway from having rapid transit injured the trade of that thoroughfare; but the kind of dry-goods palaces he erected were not calculated to attract an east side population. He should have built his great store on Broadway and Twenty-third street or thereabouts. Even the selection of Fourteenth street and Broadway would have shown more judgment than the site chosen.

It is not too late even now to utilize the region near the Cooper Union. If it could only be rebuilt according to some plan so as to form an ensemble, it could be made as attractive architecturally as it would be profitable in a pecuniary way. Who knows but that in time some great land company may get possession of districts such as this we are speaking of and re-create them, as it were, for the benefit of its stockholders, as well as to the advantage of the city. Such land companies there are in France and they have proved highly successful.

There are other sections of the city which ought, and no doubt will in time, be utilized in a large way for business purposes. Take the intersection of Broadway, Sixth avenue and Thirty-fourth street. This is another region where swarms of people come from every direction. It should be the natural headquarter for business houses and places of amusement for the west side. On this square should have been located the new opera house, and an establishment like Stern's or Lord & Taylor's would attract a large business.

The value of lower Broadway for business purposes has only been realized within a few years past. Hence the Produce Exchange, the Standard Oil, the Welles and the Field buildings. It is to be hoped that the fine front between Whitehall and State streets, looking up Broadway, will be the site of a noble building. Doubtless it will be some time before this improvement is made, as the supply of office buildings in this locality is in excess of the present demands.

But it would take too much of our space to particularize all the locations which should have been taken advantage of by capitalists to erect suitable buildings. Fourteenth street, Twenty-third street, Union square, Madison square have been almost re-created within the last ten years, nor is the work by any means finished. Our population is becoming so dense and our retail trade so large that by a process of natural selection the best sites will be picked out for the most profitable if not for the finest buildings. The beginning of the twentieth century will see great changes in the city, the most marked of which will be in the neighborhoods where crowded thoroughfares cross one another.

The Mexican treaty is still inoperative because of the failure of the House of Representatives to provide the necessary machinery for carrying it out. The Spanish treaty securing reciprocity with Cuba and Porto Rico will be vigorously antagonized by powerful interests. The Louisiana sugar growers and the tobacco manufac turers will fight it to the death, while it is very doubtful if other manufacturing interests will countenance it. But certainly some means should be taken to open new markets for our manufactured goods. We have surplus stocks which must be worked off, and an ability to produce beyond the consuming powers of our home market. A general reduction of the tariff is out of the question, and our only hope is in commercial treaties, such as we have negotiated with Mexico and are trying to negotiate with Spain.

Our Prophetic Department.

OBSERVER—What is there to be said about the general markets this week? It seems that the immediate outlook is gloomy for prices.

SIR ORACLE—I have believed all along, as my conversations have shown, that there would be a modest bull movement in the stock market during the latter part of November and early in December, to be followed by the depression which nearly always occurs at the close of the year. I thought the buoyancy would last several days longer than it did; but Wall street generally gets ahead of even the wisest forecasts. The advance in prices during November was not helped by the great leaders of the street. Vanderbilt and his following are pronounced bears, while Jay Gould has met such severe losses during the past three years that he acts timidly when there is a chance to raise prices. It is quite notorious that Gould did nothing to put prices up in November. That was the work of Morgan, Osborn, Scott, Soutter and probably Cammack and Woerishoffer, but then they only responded to an outside demand.

OBSERVER—What is the explanation of the low prices which usually precede and sometimes accompany the holidays?

SIR O.—I think I explained this matter last year and the year before. At the close of the year the money required for paying dividends on the first of the following year must be withdrawn from the market, where it is usually lent out on call loans. Then business men like to balance their books and pay their debts, which not only checks trading but withdraws money from speculative ventures in all the Exchanges. Many rich men sell their stocks and put their money in government securities to escape taxation. Then again there is a very large demand for money to pay taxes on realty. These obligations are always met towards the close of the year, and affect the prices of speculative commodities in every section of the Union. These various causes combined generally bring down prices of negotiable securities just before the 1st of January. I do not look, therefore, for any important rally before the early part of next year. There is only one circumstance that would cause an important rise in the market, if it came about.

OBSERVER—And that is?

SIR O.—The final settlement of the war between the New York Central and the West Shore. This will cause a decided advance in stocks whenever it occurs.

OBSERVER—But you expect some recovery in stock values after the opening of the new year?

SIR O.—I do. Anyone who can get in at the lowest prices this December ought to be able to make a profit in the month of January provided, of course, some new evil factor does not make its appearance in the business of the nation. There will be from $50,000,000 to $60,000,000 disbursed during January in the form of dividends and interest. Much of this will seek re-investment, and when there are real buyers in the market Wall street accommodates them by putting prices up. The ordinary investor never gets the advantage of the low figures.

OBSERVER—You believe, then, that there are some hopeful symptoms in the business situation?

SIR O.—Yes, some; but I am not very sanguine about next year, taking the country through. Many stocks are, I think, a purchase for permanent investment. The liquidation has, I hope, almost run its course. Mr. Nimmo, of the Bureau of Statistics, says that our agricultural products, provisions, petroleum, etc., will aggregate $4,000,000,000 this year. These we shall have to sell either at the home or in the foreign markets. This will give and is giving the railroads a great deal of business. The farmers and planters are eager sellers at any price, as witness the receipts at points of distribution. Although we have a short crop of cotton, in fact two short crop years in succession, the cotton movement during the past fall was the largest ever known. Then look at the enormous quantity of wheat in sight—over 40,000,000 bushels. Everything is being forced on the market with resulting low prices. This may be bad for the farmers but it cannot but help the railway companies and the allied industries depending upon them. Then look at our heavy exports compared with last year. No wonder that foreign exchange is down. We will not only retain all the gold and much of the silver we mine but will probably import gold. The stock panic of last May was largely due to the export of $38,000,000 of gold during the preceding spring. All the probabilities point to an import of gold next spring, for we will be shipping corn and hogs in addition to the articles we exported so largely last year.

OBSERVER—Do you see any other favorable indications?

SIR O.—No, I do not. On the contrary I expect to witness a great deal of distress in business circles and among the working classes. About February I look for extensive failures in the dry-goods trade. Manufacturing establishments will suffer greatly and hundreds of thousands of workingmen will be thrown out of employment. The grocer, butcher and other storekeepers who give credit to the working people in manufacturing districts will fail by the thousand, for they will be forced to make advances to their customers who will not be able to pay them. The general business of the country outside of the great railway interests will be worse before it is better. There will be more real suffering in 1885 than in any year since 1877.

OBSERVER—But is there nothing that may happen to help the business of the world?

SIR O.—"May Bee's," according to the proverb, don't fly but one month in the year. Were bi-metallism re-established among the nations there would be a stoppage of the downward course of prices all over the world; but there is no likelihood of anything being done in that direction as the banking and creditor classes are all powerful in the commercial nations of the world. So long as their money is augmenting in value, as is shown by the lowering price of every article it measures, it is not likely that the plutocracy will let up on the victims of the corner in gold which they have so successfully engineered. Matters would wear a better aspect in this country if our government could be induced to put a stop to its mischievous debt-paying policy and devoted the surplus to works of public improvement. Were we to proceed at once to create a navy, to construct adequate defences for our seacoast cities, and make liberal appropriations for public buildings and river and harbor improvements, it would make a decided change for the better next year, for it would encourage capitalists to invest some of their now idle funds in productive enterprises. But there is not any likelihood of Congress doing anything so sensible. If it was suggested that we should take advantage of the low prices of labor and material to construct necessary public works the press would shout job! job! and Congressmen would be frightened into voting down every appropriation in which their several constituencies were not directly interested.

OBSERVER.—How about cotton, wheat, corn?

SIR O.—Cotton, I have been saying all along, was a purchase, but it looks high enough just now. Two short cotton years in succession was certain to put up the price. Wheat is very low. Nothing like its present low price has been known for a generation, but then all the world can produce wheat and the extension of steam communication has furnished facilities for bringing it to the very doors of the consumers. There does not seem to be any money on the short side of the wheat market, however, at present prices. But corn seems to be absurdly low. According to the Agricultural Bureau its price averages throughout the country only about 36½ cents a bushel, which is one per cent. lower than the average price in 1879, when the supply in proportion to population was twice as large. It has been lower but twice in ten years. That is, in 1877 and 1878, after two years of an excessively large crop. Now corn, like cotton, is a monopoly of this country. It cannot be grown in quantities anywhere else. It seems to me that that cereal ought to reach higher figures, but of course its price is affected by the extraordinary cheapness of wheat, oats and the roots used for animal food. But the tendency of all prices is towards lower values, because of the adoption of the gold unit by the commercial nations. I see that the announcement that Austria was about to resume specie payments on a gold basis has been followed by a partial panic in that empire. The debtor class in Europe, which means the bulk of the business community, is suffering terribly. The enforcement of the gold unit policy will result in vast successions to the ranks of the Nihilists, Socialists, Communists and all enemies of property.

There will be no stoppage of the silver coinage during this session of Congress. Not a solitary argument was presented showing that the increase of silver dollars has done us any harm. On the contrary the increase of certificates based on the silver dollars have saved us from the horrors of a contraction of the currency, which would have come about from the steady withdrawal of bank currency. From $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 of national bank notes are retired yearly, but their place has been more than supplied by gold notes and silver certificates. Bad as the times are they would be worse—far worse—were we to have a shrinking currency and a tightening money market in addition to the other evils of the times. The ease in money makes the situation more tolerable, and will be a great help when business revives.

Railroad tracks are now being laid in St. Nicholas avenue, the Boulevard and the upper part of Broadway. These are nearly ready for traffic. This will form a part of the system of the company which will eventually own tracks in Forty-second street, Seventh avenue, Broadway, the Boulevard, St. Nicholas avenue, Manhattan street, Eighty-sixth street, One Hundred and Tenth street, First avenue and Thirty-fourth street. The west side will profit greatly by these tracks.

Home Decorative Notes.

—Mantel-pieces of terra cotta are much admired for large halls; they may be artistic to any degree according to the skill of the artist who decorates them.

—Ceilings of hardwood or heavy papers in mouldings of hardwood are very rich in dining-rooms and halls; a novel mode of decorating a hall is to use a leather paper, with a finish at the top of a piece of leather about two inches wide, fastened with large brass-headed nails.

—An autumn fancy is to trim lace curtains with a bordering of tinted autumn leaves.

—A cocoanut mounted in brass to represent the big Indian, Sitting Bull, and concealing within the body a spring call bell, is found among the Christmas novelties.

—The French placque clocks in brass and porcelain, with curled edges which form the frames, make pretty holiday gifts.

—Celery is no longer served in a cut glass vase, but in a crystal dish of oblong pattern.

—Ferns and foliage are used quite as much as flowers for table decorations, and sometimes flowers are dispensed with altogether with good effect; carrot tops are often used in place of ferns, as the foliage is extremely delicate.

—By rubbing with a damp flannel dipped in whiting, the brown discolorations may be taken off cups in which custards have been baked.

—A new caprice in wedding decoration is a chime of five small floral bells, a floral grotto with a floral horseshoe for an opening is another new device.

—The Gladstone pitcher in Doulton ware is much admired, the decorations are ivy, autumn leaves and arbutus.

—Whisk-broom holders are made in the form of lyres and harps, which are made to stand upon a shelf or table.

—A visit to the brass goods establishment of J. S. Conover & Co., at No. 30 West Twenty-third street, for the first time is indeed or would be a revelation in a new branch of the fine arts, vases, jardinieres, fire sets, screens and sconces come in odd and very elegant designs; in the fine Benares brass work articles of great beauty and exquisite workmanship are shown.

—Cane chairs silver bronzed or gilded are very attractive when upholstered in illuminated leather.

—An odd candlestick has a gold grape leaf for its base and with a light receiver of crystal painted in gold.

—An immense demand has sprung up among the prosperous classes of the community for artistic porcelain and glass, and each season comes some new marvel in pottery, china and glass; the Royal Lisbon ware with gold arabesques on a frosted surface and changing in color from different points of view is very attractive and one of this season's novelties; numerous fine specimens of the Ridgway, Old Wedgwood and Royal Worcester attract much admiration, the most fashionable is the yellow Hungarian pottery, the pieces are in the ewer, vase and round-bodied pitcher shapes, the coloring is a bright yellow, slightly mixed, with gilding on handles and edges; then again there is the Leeds ware, which is also in odd forms, mostly in deep rich India red; afternoon tea sets and toilet table sets of Crown Derby ware show that this description of porcelain is regaining the high character it obtained in the last century. Bohemian glass is lovelier than ever, some exquisite specimens show opaline tints and flutings in pink and opal; admirers of bric-a-brac, artistic glassware and all the season's novelties will find numberless attractive articles at Hall, Nicoll & Granberry's, No. 20 John street.

—Bed covers are in rich material, and a scarf of some rich wrought silk is thrown over the round bolster.

—A very satisfactory combination for furniture covering and drapery is dark gray plush with a relief of deep terra cotta, for small reception room yellow plush is much admired.

—Parma violets are elegant favors for lunch parties.

—Long scarf covers are used on the tea table, these have both centre and ends embroidered in Russian cross-stitch.

—Now that such a variety of material is obtainable from which lovely presents can be made no one need lament her inability to remember those whom she wishes to at this one time of the year, suggestively we mention bureau sets, stand covers, etc., of Bolting cloth with designs of flowers in skeleton stitch in French etching silks, it is put over bright colored satin and makes a lovely addition to a dressing case, an easel scarf in salmon surah silk with conventional design in applique and outline is one of the prettiest things in this line, large square necktie cases of embroidered plush lined with satin and tied with ribbon are useful and elegant, also sachet-handkerchief cases and blotting books, the latter have plush covers lined with satin with place for stationery and blotting leaves, stamped plush table covers outlined with silver and gold are very lovely.

—A tasteful table cover is of wine red felt with a border of golden half moons, these are cut out of felt and should measure five inches from tip to tip, baste them on the cloth about an inch apart, and button-hole all around with yellow floss; the Smyrna wool rug, which is knitted or drawn in as fancy dictates, is a new industry, the yarn from which they are knit is in the deep Oriental shades; for those who cannot embroider many things can be wrought very prettily in the Kensington stitch, small square black silk aprons are lovely if finished with a broad hem, then outline in one corner a cluster of clover blossoms and grasses, have one pocket square, also face the pocket and turn one corner over and outline a cluster much like the one on the apron only it should be smaller, let it be very careless and graceful in composition, the strings should be of ribbon of two contrasting colors.

Annual Meeting of the Real Estate Exchange and Auction Room (Limited).

The annual election of the Real Estate Exchange and Auction Room (Limited), was held last Monday in the Guernsey building, at 1 o'clock. H. H. Cammann, the first vice-president, presided, and about eighty shareholders were present. The annual report and accompanying balance sheet was a very satisfactory document, as it showed that the capital stock of $500,000 had all been paid up, and that while there was still an indebtedness of $80,000 on the buildings, the corporation had cash on hand $116,-863.40. A copy of this document should be in the hands of every shareholder, and can be procured at the temporary offices of the Exchange in the Duncan building, corner Pine and Nassau streets. Additional facts about the future prospects of the Exchange can be found in an interview with Geo. H. Scott, its secretary, in THE RECORD AND GUIDE of December 6th.

After the report was formally adopted by the shareholders, Mr. Cammann, the chairman, said that in addition to the regular meetings the directors had held a number of special meetings during the year and that all the committees had been actively at work in their special departments. Rules for the admission of members and annual members had been already adopted, and rules and regulations for the government of the Exchange were in preparation. The office expenses of the corporation during the past year had been kept at a very low figure; these expenses would of course be materially increased when the Exchange was opened for business, although, as it would not be necessary then to rent offices for the uses of the corporation, this item of expense would be saved. The new Exchange salesroom would be a little less in area than the present salesroom in Trinity building, but owing to its better shape it would accommodate fully as many people; if the new room were four feet wider it would give exactly the same floor space as the room in Trinity building. If at any time more space should be required provision had been made by which without doing any of the present work over again all the rest of the building could be thrown into the Exchange, and thus nearly double the present space made available. The mortgage on the property at the present time amounted to $80,000, but after the completion of the present alterations about $40,000 in cash would still remain in the treasury, which, if the Exchange should prove sufficiently large without taking in the remainder of the building, could be used for paying off the mortgage to that extent. The idea of the projectors of the Exchange was not simply to have a room for auction sales, but to make the Exchange the great centre of information for all matters relating to real estate not only for this city but for the entire country. Special attention was called to the committee on legislation, a body composed of members of the Exchange, but acting entirely on their own responsibility and independently of the Board of Directors. Under the chairmanship of Mr. James M. Varnum, this committee had already done excellent work, and their influence was sure to be felt in all matters of legislation affecting real estate interests in this city. The chairman ended his remarks with a tribute of respect to the memories of Mr. Edward H. Ludlow, the late president of the Exchange, and Mr. Isaac Honig, one of the directors, who had died during the past year.

The meeting was a very satisfactory one, and its peaceful character was in marked contrast to the stormy scenes at the annual meeting a year ago. The shareholders at the close voted for thirteen directors. The tellers reported the following as the vote cast:

The regular monthly meeting of the Citizens' West Side Improvement Association was held on Friday evening last. Among those present were Messrs. W. H. Barker, chairman; W. G. Owens, secretary; Drs. Geo. W. Leonard and Farmer, Killean Van Rensellaer, Andrew Powell, John T. McGowan, J. V. V. Olcott, F. S. Bangs, T. A. Ormson, W. H. Lyon, Max Naumburg, Geo. C. Clark, —— Deys, J. P. Hardenburg and the Rev. Andrew Fletcher. The treasurer's report, which was submitted, shows that the association has a membership of fifty-seven. Some discussion took place as to the delay in laying down the much-needed crosswalks on the Boulevard, the Department of Public Works having repeatedly promised to make this improvement. A special committee was appointed to urge upon the Board of Apportionment the necessity of including in their estimates for the coming year the cost of repaving the Boulevard from Fifty-ninth to Ninety-second street.

Concerning Men and Things.

The English people will be highly interested in the great American exhibition to be held in London in 1886. The English press is giving a good deal of attention to the matter. There is an excellent feeling amongst Englishmen towards Americans, though it is quite clear that the latter have as peculiar notions of the manners and customs of the English as the latter have of the Americans. An exhibition such as proposed will do much towards dispelling illusions about us, and foreigners will marvel at the greatness of our industries and the vastness of our country. The exhibition, it is said, will be arranged in "panoramic sequence, the visitor entering the harbor of New York and progressing from the Atlantic to the Pacific seaboard."

John Kelly is a very sick man. He is a victim of insomnia and may lose his wits before he does his life. Should he die it will be a calamity to Tammany and the Democratic party. Notwithstanding all that has been said against him he has proved the most honest and capable boss that ever headed a political faction in this city. People who have objected to Tammany rule have forgotten the wretched materials with which Kelly has had to deal in working city politics. The local leaders were the scurvyest kind of politicians. They were composed largely of briefless lawyers, rum sellers, gamblers and even more disreputable people. Unrestrained, they would have no thought above robbing the treasury. Should Kelly die these political professional plunderers will come to the front. John Kelly's life has been a remarkable one. He is not an Irishman, as is generally supposed, but was born in the Fourteenth Ward in this city, where in early life he was a brass founder. He was always a natural leader of his people. He has tried to choose good men for Mayor; as witness Wickham, Ely, Grace and Edson. The first three "went back on him." His last choice, Grant, was not successful but is confessedly an honest and capable man. Kelly's domestic life has been a sad one. He lost his wife and four sons and daughters, after they had become grown, in a very brief period. His entire family in fact was swept away. He subsequently married the niece of Cardinal McCloskey.

Speaking of John Kelly recalls Recorder Hackett, who became demented while on the bench, his insanity showing itself in most brutal sentences upon minor offenders. Kelly was shocked at his course and refused him a renomination. James Gordon Bennett, who was Hackett's boon companion in the latter's orgies, took him up and with the help of a so-called reform party re-elected the crazy Recorder, who subsequently died insane. At the time our foolish press praised Hackett for his malicious sentences. It is always popular to be severe with felons of a contemptible kind, but it is curious that no effort has ever been taken to hunt up the victims of Hackett's insane malignancy and restore them to liberty.

When Richard A. Proctor first came to this country he was quite a lion. He was received by the Lotos Club, and his lectures were largely attended. Since then he married an American wife, and has settled in this country. He is now delivering a course of lectures in Chickering Hall, but is drawing very scant audiences, although the matter is excellent, being a presentation of the latest facts derived from astronomical observations. The illustrations by aid of a stereopticon are extremely interesting, yet the very poorest variety show would draw larger audiences than those with which Prof. Proctor has been favored.

Statements have been made that Col. W. R. Roberts, the recently appointed deputy-tax commissioner for the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Wards, intends to increase the assessed valuations of property in those districts. It is said that the assessments are already too high, and that the object in raising the assessment is to increase the city's capacity for expenditure, in view of the constitutional amendment, which limits this to 10 per cent. of the assessed valuation. To a representative of THE RECORD AND GUIDE Col. Roberts said: "I have found a great many inequalities in the assessments in the wards named. Some property-owners pay a larger proportion of taxes than others. These inequalities have naturally created dissatisfaction. Advances have been made in the assessed valuations of down-town realty, but they have not been commensurate with the enormously increased values. This is especially the case in Wall and Broad streets, Broadway and Exchange place. I may state that there will be no general increase in the assessed valuations of the Third, Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Wards, but there will be in the First Ward, in certain sections of it especially, as well as in portions of the Second Ward. Wherever it is shown to me that the assessment is too high I shall certainly make it lower. As an instance of the inequality in assessments I may mention a piece of property which sold last spring for over $200,000 and which is only assessed at $50,000. This is, of course, unfair to those property-holders who pay twice as large a sum proportionately. As to the statement that the intention is to raise the valuations so as to counteract in some measure the effect of the constitutional amendment, I can only say that I was appointed September 1, which was before that question had engaged public attention. Had it not been for some unavoidable delay I would have been appointed last summer."

While the Stock Exchange is discussing the propriety of dealing in ten-share lots, the Petroleum Exchange has built up a very large business in fractional shares. The Consolidated Mining Board wants to do the same business. No doubt dealings in ten-share lots would increase speculation by bringing in a smaller class of operators, but it would kill the bucket shops. In view of the great speculation in petroleum some of the members of the Produce Exchange wish to deal in that article, but it is not likely that the operators in grain and provisions will agree to any present change.

Women in the Real Estate Exchange.

Editor RECORD AND GUIDE:

There is a rumor in real estate circles that women are to be admitted as brokers into the Real Estate Exchange and Auction Room (Limited), soon to be open for business. Surely there must be some mistake about this? We don't want any Belva Lockwoods in our business. DEALER.

REMARKS.—Under the limited liability act of 1875 there is no distinction of sex provided for in the formation of a corporation. There were, it seems, some few ladies among the original subscribers to the Real Estate Exchange and Auction Room (Limited). Under the spirit and letter of the law they have exactly the same rights as all other shareholders and can become brokers if they so wish; but among the by-laws adopted at the organization of the Exchange was one which empowered the corporation to distinguish between shareholders and members in all future admissions. Hereafter no person can do business in the Exchange if two of the Membership Committee or three of the Directors object. If it should be considered undesirable to admit women members hereafter, would-be candidates can be set aside provided two members of the Committee or three of the Board object. There is but little danger of ladies being serious competitors of the sterner sex as real estate brokers. Mr. E. H. Ludlow, the late President of the Board, said he could see no objection to a woman becoming a member of the Exchange provided she was competent. It should, he thought, be a matter of character and fitness and not of sex. A woman perhaps would be out of place as an auctioneer, but there is no reason why she should not rent a house or sell realty for others if she can find customers. The Board of Directors as yet have not acted upon the matter, but it is doubtful if there will be any addition to the number of ladies who now have the right to deal in real estate by virtue of their ownership of ten shares of the capital stock of the corporation.

Riverside Drive.

From the time when Riverside Drive was first projected that section of the city has been looked on with special favor, not only by dealers in real estate and speculators, but also by investors. There have been quite a number of "booms" and corresponding depressions ever since the work was commenced. In 1875, before the work was fairly under way, lots on the line of the proposed improvement sold for $10,000 and $12,000. But when west side property was at its lowest in 1876 and 1877 the price of Riverside Drive lots was correspondingly depressed. With the recovery in values in 1879 and 1881 the Riverside Drive lots advanced more rapidly than any of the speculative vacant lots in the city. Then followed another depression, but only in the lots that were forced upon the market, for solid investors always believed that in time these lots would compare in price with vacant property on Fifth avenue, below Seventy-second street. Lately there are evidences that Riverside Drive again is growing in favor. The Park Commissioners have greatly beautified the drive. Trees have been planted and other improvements made. It is noticed that the number of carriages have more than doubled recently on fine days. When the Morningside Drive is completed it is evident that the fashionable long drive will be through Central Park along Morningside Drive to One Hundred and Twenty-second street, drown the Riverside Drive to Seventy-second street, and thence back to the Park. The difficulty with Riverside for residences has been its inaccessibility. The Hudson River road will do nothing to tempt people to live on that side of the island; the "L" road is too far away, and there were no available horse cars. But the Forty-second Street & St. Nicholas Avenue Company will soon have their tracks laid to One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street on the Boulevard, and this has led to an improvement in all west side property, especially along the river bank. Far-sighted dealers now believe that an era of speculation in Riverside Drive property has set in now that actual improvement has begun. Several fine houses are already projected in addition to those recently built. All this lends interest to a sale of some of the very choicest lots on Riverside Drive which Mr. Harnett will auction off next Thursday. This sale promises to be the beginning of an improvement in Riverside Drive lots which has been rendered possible by the construction of a new street railroad.

The financial columns of the Sun are being used by some interested person to bear the price of Manhattan stock. Anyone who rides on the cars of the "L" roads will see that the company is doing a very large business, and if it does not pay then appearances are very deceitful. The Sun says that the city and State taxes will be $485,500 per annum, but of this it charges $409,500 against the capital stock. But in the settlement made last week the tax was on structure, and amounted to $226,769.29. This tax becomes less yearly as the structure deteriorates. The city is unlikely to tax in full the Manhattan as personal property; this is not done with any corporation or individual. If it should tax in this way the mortgages will have to be allowed, and as they amount to $31,000,000 the personal tax will be on only $5,000,000. It is strange that respectable papers should allow their columns to be used to deliberately deceive the business public. The city of New York should not begrudge 6 per cent. per annum to the stockholders of a company which has done so much for the real estate and convenience of the citizens of New York.

A completion of the Mortimer building, at the corner of Wall and New streets, is discussed elsewhere, from an architectural point of view, but whatever may be said of the new structure it belittles the Stock Exchange both on New and Wall streets. Indeed the entrance on the latter street is enough to make the Exchange a laughing stock. Better no entrance at all than the pretentious but shabby little front on the latter street. The Exchange could have purchased the adjoining building at a sale during the past year, but it failed to do so. With the addition on the east it could have made at least a respectable entrance on the thoroughfare on which is supposed to be transacted all the financial business of the country. The Stock Exchange ought also to improve its front on New street.

The Losses and Gains From Low Prices.

The decrease in the cost of food is an important relief to wage-earners from the effects of the reduction in their pay, but it hardly goes as far in mitigating that loss as would be concluded at the first glance. Great as is the decline in wheat, which is a subject of surprise and complaint everywhere, the difference to a workingman in the cost of his bread, at the average consumption of 5½ bushels per capita, would mean a saving of only about $1.50 per annum to each consumer. The difference in the cost of swine flesh would be about the same, but on the cost of beef it would be nil. Those articles constitute the foundation of diet considered only in its relation to the plainest necessities of man for flesh and brawn-forming food. The cost of vegetables, domestic fruits, milk, butter and cheese does not vary much from previous averages. The cost of sugar is sharply reduced. These articles constitute the category of American food productions, as well as the plain necessaries of ordinary diet; and on the whole American producers have lost more than American consumers have gained, mainly in the difference in the values of the exportable surplus. The lowering of the average cost of livelihood is an important factor, as it helps to alleviate the loss of labor for the enforced shrinkage in wages, and assists in its way in working out the problem of reducing the cost of artisan production; but it will do no good to over-estimate its benefits. The normal situation here, in respect to the cost of food as well as many of the most important articles of raw material, is naturally in our favor, as competing foreign labor is ordinarily compelled to pay the cost of transportation on our foodstuffs and material for thousands of miles, as well as all intermediate charges, while American laborers buy them at or near initial values. Whether the average is high or low, the differences between home and foreign cost are about the same, and competitive advantages are not essentially modified. And, whether high or low, the profit is in the favor of the American artisan. The interest mainly affected by the shrinkage in the value of agricultural products is the producing interest, and this is of such overshadowing importance in the United States that its condition pitches the tone of general commercial welfare. There is no doubt that the principle set off against our present commercial situation is the extreme depression in many farm products, and the overstocked condition of the protected artisan industries. The former affords promise of gradually rectifying itself, but the latter is a problem which will tax the wisest statesmanship in providing remedies and cure. There are late developments which appear to justify the belief that the shrinkage in breadstuffs has about reached its limit. A handsome rise in the English wheat markets has occurred in the last ten days, after a continuous decline since harvest. This advance results, apparently, from essential and continuing causes, the principal causes being that other nations have almost quit shipping on account of low prices, foreign stocks are running low, and there are confident anticipations of a relatively great narrowing of the area of wheat cultivation both in Europe and the United States, but especially in Europe. Speculation on this side is timid about operating on such premises, however, because of the immense stocks in sight in the United States and of the continued free deliveries by farmers. It is, at least, a hopeful feature that a steadying tendency has been produced in American markets, which is the necessary prelude to appreciation. The proposed advance in the French duty from 11 cents to 39 cents per 100 kilograms will have less effect on the movement of this crop because the French yield this year was unusually full. The corn market has been settling down rapidly of late, but also as to this cereal farmers should teach the world that there is a stopping place. The corn crop of 1884 is larger by some millions of bushels than the crop of 1880, but the difference in yield is probably not more than equal to the difference in stocks of old corn brought forward from 1879 and 1883, the country reserve in the present season having been practically exhausted. In the meanwhile, the requirements of the country are very much greater than in 1880. A steadying tendency in this trade has also begun to manifest itself. Cattle are selling at relatively high prices. Within the last ten days an advancing movement in the hog and provision markets has set in. Of Southern crops cotton and tobacco have scored a considerable rise within the last thirty days, but sugars have not manifested any preceptible tendency to react. There are changes for the better, therefore, in the most important quarters. The patient, however, has been a very sick man, and it will require nursing and watching to bring him forward in the slow convalescence which awaits him.—Courier-Journal.

Trade and Financial Cycles.

A prophet of future events has declared that the years between 1882 and 1888 would be dull and disastrous. "After the year 1888, the price of pig iron will advance, all business will be prosperous, corn and hogs will advance, agriculture and manufactures will be active, all trades and industries will make money up to the year 1891, when we predict a panic, which will not be confined to the United States, but will sweep over the world, like the panics of 1819 and 1857, and will be felt with equal severity in all countries." The so-called prophet is one Benner, and a prominent merchant, commenting on the above prediction, said: "I feel so much confidence in Benner's theories that if two active years do come after 1888, you may be sure I shall curtail my business operations as closely as possible before 1891." All predictions as to the future of trade, whether prosperous or adverse, are mere guess-work, and are about as uncertain in their results as the predictions of weather prophets. Any conservative merchant would naturally curtail his business after two years of inflation whether he believed in trade cycles or not. The undue expansion is reached in about that period, when a reaction begins. If, however, there is a tendency on the part of trade and finances to shape themselves into periods of activity and dullness at regular intervals, the subject is certainly worthy of investigation. A recent English writer urges that the trade cycle is completed every ten years, and that an examination of the commercial history of Great Britain for nearly seventy years past verifies this theory. The year 1816 in England witnessed a commercial crisis followed by three years of depression. A moderate recovery in 1820 was succeeded by three years of overtrading, and another commercial crisis in 1826. A similar cycle of depression, followed by recovery and subsequent excessive speculation then came, terminated by another breakdown in 1837. Not to pursue this writer's theory into minute details, it may be summarized in the statement that the years 1816, 1826, 1837, 1847, 1857, 1867 and 1876 witnessed commercial crises in England; and that the years 1820, 1830, 1840, 1850, 1860, 1870 and 1879 saw the inauguration of a period of moderate recovery, followed by an era of speculation, which was usually of three years' duration and was then terminated by another panic. To some extent this is verified in our own commercial history. Since the war, panics have occurred in the fall of 1873 and in the spring of 1884. These ten-year cycles are further sub-divided into three periods. The first a period of depression, the second of moderate trading, and the last of excessive speculation. Each subdivision is completed within three years. The depression which followed the great revulsion of 1873 lasted until 1876, when a period of moderate activity occurred. This lasted until 1879, when speculation was excessive in all departments of business until 1882. A reaction commenced in September of that year, and its depressing effects are still felt. The indications are hopeful for an improved trade in 1885, and in that event the cycle theory would hold good.—Grocer and Dry-goods Chronicle.

Our Commerce With Foreign Countries.

Mr. Edward Atkinson, of Boston, has addressed a letter to Hon. Joseph Nimmo, Jr., Chief of the Bureau of Statistics, in which he considers the exports of our goods and wares. We give the most important parts of the letter as follows: Great Britain works up or converts our raw material into manufactured goods, and sends those goods to China, Africa and South America in payment for the raw material or the tea, coffee and sugar we have purchased. Why should this three-cornered traffic continue? Why do we not convert our raw material into manufactured goods and exchange directly with the non-machine-using nations of whose products we are large purchasers? Many of the goods of these several classes are made in the United States of better quality, sometimes at a less cost, and sometimes at a slightly greater cost than in Great Britain. Why, then, is not this cash, which is at our credit in London, applied directly to the purchase of American goods rather than of British goods? For a long time this question puzzled me; I could not solve it until I had studied the conditions of commerce in Great Britain on the spot. My conclusion was that while quality and price enter measurably into the conditions which control that exchange of products which constitutes commerce, yet modern science and modern instrumentalities for production have brought the quality and price of manufactured goods—such as textiles, hardware and the like—so nearly to the same standard that commerce is no longer controlled in any great measure by either quality or price in respect to such manufactured goods. But such differences in quality and in price as exist, being very small elements, are more than counterbalanced by facilities in respect to transportation, in respect to banking or exchange in the technical sense, and more than all in respect to the facilities for obtaining credit on the part of the middlemen who work the trade—this last being the great factor. For instance, there is no doubt that buyers in South America would greatly prefer to buy American cottons at their relative quality and price rather than British cottons. Why don't they do so? We buy a great deal more from South America than we sell to her, and we pay cash in London for the difference. Why don't they take goods in place of cash if they prefer the goods? Why has not a system of steamship communication been established without any bounty or subsidy between the United States and South America as has been done between Great Britain and South America? The reason was far to seek, but I think I shall give you the true one. All the traffic of South America on manufactured goods and wares is done on a very long credit. How is it done? The credit is not granted by the manufacturer of the goods, but it is worked in this way: The manufacturer of cotton goods, for instance, sells the cloth "in the gray" to a warehouseman, so called. The warehouseman pays him the cash for it, substantially, on delivery. This warehouseman, middleman or merchant causes these goods to be bleached, printed or otherwise prepared for each particular district or market in South America, packs them according to the exact section to which they are to be sent, in small packages suitable for mule back if they are to be carried into the heart of the Andes, makes his arrangements to ship them by one of the daily steamers to South America, then takes his bill of lading, ear-marked with the designating marks and number of the packages with the invoice attached to a banker and gets his bill discounted on four months or six months with the expectation of renewal for four or six months longer if necessary, and the cash or proceeds of our wheat, cotton and oil which we have remitted for our South American purchases forms a part of the deposit of this very banker on the basis of which he is enabled to grant this credit. But this would not suffice. These goods are carried to the interior of South America to great fairs, to interior towns, and to various points of distribution, and are there practically bartered for whatever the people, who have no money, but who have other commodities, desire to sell. These other commodities, whatever they may be—wool, hides, ores, nitrates or anything else—being freely admitted into Great Britain for the purposes of distribution wherever they are needed, therefore come back to England to be sold, and out of their sale the warehouseman ultimately recovers his money and pays up his credit granted by the banker in London. London being a great free port has become of necessity the money centre or credit centre of the world. This shows that international commerce is now conducted on so small a margin and on such a great scale that the profit or loss depends on the cost of transportations the rate of exchange and the facilities for credit; and, as before stated, chiefly upon the latter consideration.

The United States Canal.

There is just one thing to be said about the treaty with Nicaragua, which gives us a right of way for a canal across that country to connect the Atlantic and Pacific. It ought to be ratified by the Senate this very week. Then Uncle Sam ought to go ahead and build the canal. The alternative policy is to abandon the Isthmus to the English and the French—the English strengthening themselves in Honduras, the French establishing a state at Panama. Not to seize this opportunity to demonstrate our supremacy in this hemisphere would be to admit that we are not really a nation.—The Washington Capital.

Simplifying Railway Management.

The establishment and maintenance of large and expensive manufacturing works by railway companies is, I believe, likely to be discontinued. Railway companies were not organized for the purpose of manufacturing, but for the special object of transporting merchandise and passengers. This is their particular business, and to this end the efforts of their managers should be specially directed. A manager with the care and responsibility of a railway cannot afford to have his attention diverted from his legitimate vocation; he has, in fact, little or no time to give to the supervision of a manufactory. In the early history of railways, before large and reliable establishments for manufacturing railway equipment and supplies existed, there was doubtless a necessity for each company to control its own manufactures in order to insure thorough workmanship and proper materials; but with the facilities now offered throughout the United States by organizations incorporated for the express purpose of furnishing the railway companies with rolling stock and other supplies, there seems to be no longer any necessity for the railways to maintain such extensive shops; smaller shops, with largely reduced forces, are all that would seem to be required for ordinary repairs. Before the war of the rebellion almost every sugar planter in the South considered it necessary to maintain a mill on his plantation to grind his own cane. It would have been as reasonable to expect that every farmer in the North should have his own grist mill to turn his grain into flour. At present in the South, under the new order of things, one sugar mill accommodates several plantations. And so in regard to the railways; even one repair shop, conveniently located, might be made to answer the requirements of two or three lines, and in this way, by a kind of co-operative system, the cost of even running repairs could be reduced to a minimum. But as regards new work, there can be no question that it can be done now as effectually, with greater facility and at less cost outside of the average railway car shops. I know this does not harmonize with the views entertained by the master mechanics and master car builders. It is quite natural it should not; but when the question of feasibility comes to be determined in the interest of the shareholders, I do not imagine that these gentlemen will be consulted. The practical effect of the railways employing some such outside agency would be to reduce materially their working force, and in this way diminish the labors and anxieties of their managers. Nearly one-fourth of the entire force of employes on our large railways are engaged in manufacturing and repairing.—W. K. Ackerman in North American Review.

Good-Bye, Canals.

The canal must go. The railroad is too much for it. The Erie Canal has closed for the season, and it has been the dullest in twenty years, in spite of free tolls. An eastern exchange says that scores of men who have grown up on the canal are disposing of their boats at a sacrifice, and will boat no longer. They say that the days of canalling are over. Grain, iron, coal, potatoes and lumber, which formerly kept twice as many boats busy transporting them alone as were run on the entire canal this season, disappeared almost entirely as articles of freight on the canal during 1884. The railroads, owing to lower rates and quicker transit, have taken all that business away from the water route, and they now have to depend on the local miscellaneous freight business for their money. It is said that instances are rare where a boat has taken in $1,000 this season, and that is the figure generally set on the expenses of running a boat for the season. It is customary for boatmen to put their teams out for the winter with farmers along the line, paying them for their keeping until the opening of the canal in the spring. This fall many of the boatmen, it is reported, are selling their stock outright, as they have not the means to pay for wintering it, even if they intended to boat again next year. In the light of these facts, why seek to construct new inland canals? They will be of little use. Ship canals are the only ones that are of utility in these times, and there are but few places where such can be constructed. Ordinary canals will go out with the century.—St. Louis Grocer.

Southern Pig Iron Revolutionizing the Trade.

Somewhat more than two years ago the Courier-Journal aroused the indignation of a number of ignorant protection journals in the North by stating that pig iron could be made in the South at from $9 to $12. The greater the ignorance of these journals the greater their indignation. For a while incredulity prevailed, even among those who were unprejudiced, but the authenticated figures submitted left no room for doubt, and when this journal gave full particulars of an immense contract, covering a period of ten years, for pig iron at $12.50, the manufacturers of the North began to realize that Southern pig iron was to be the controlling influence in fixing prices. Recently the managers of the Southern furnaces have assumed the aggressive, and low rates of freight by sea from Savannah and Norfolk have enabled them to put Southern pig in Eastern markets at $16, netting the furnaces $12 or $12.50. If this were simply a cut in order to dispose of surplus stock it would be of some significance, but it is much moro than this, and it really means an industrial revolution. Pig iron at $16 means that the most expensive furnaces and those unfavorably located, the very furnaces most benefited by the tariff, will be permanently closed. It is according to a law of competition, a law higher than any act of Congress, that only the fittest survive. These prices show that the decline in the past two years has been greater than the tariff; yet then it was asserted that if the tariff was removed every Northern furnace would be closed. Now prices have fallen below the tariff mark; the people are getting cheap iron and cheap steel, and while many furnaces are out of blast, the cheapness of a raw product used in so many enterprises fully compensates for the distress in one branch of industry. The value of cheap iron cannot be over-estimated; it is an incalculable boon to any nation. England has conquered the world not so much with her armies and invincible armadas as with her cheap iron. This is veritably the iron age, and the nation which can secure it at the lowest price will stand highest in the scale of civilization. Cheap iron stimulates every industrial enterprise. It means cheaper transportation; a reduction in the cost of every manufactured product; it means new markets for all our products. Cheap iron is assured in America, not by a tariff, but by new beds of coal and iron ore opened to the world by the Southern railroads, and it is a consummation retarded, not aided, by the iniquitous war tariff. In many respects radical changes need to be made. It was a long time before the owners of the furnaces could be convinced that it was economical to put in the Whitwell stoves, and yet it is now plain they reduce the cost of pig $1.50 per ton. Other changes just as important must be made. Better paid, more skillful labor must be employed. It is admitted that accidents are far more frequent in Southern than in Northern furnaces; that repairs are more frequent and more expensive, and that within a given period they are necessarily idle a greater number of days. One cause of this is ignorant and underpaid labor. The coke used in the Southern furnaces must be improved in character and in quantity and reduced in price. It can be done; it must be done. The new processes in use in Europe, what is known as the basic process, or the Bull process, must be introduced in order to make steel of the Southern ores. This is the iron age; the next is to be the age of steel. Kentucky and Virginia and East Tennessee and North Carolina have beds of ore from which steel can be made, but the cheap ores of Tennessee and Alabama are not suitable with the present methods. These hints are valuable, if not altogether original; the truths underlying them have long been recognized, but profits have been large enough to enable the owners of Southern furnaces to ignore them. They can no longer be ignored, for the Southern furnaces having now to be content with a smaller profit per ton, must largely increase their product. —Courier Journal.

Things Looking Brighter.

There is good reason to believe that production is now below consumption. There is but a moderate supply of iron and textiles, and the tendency is to reduce rather than increase. The product of the Southern furnaces is, however, a cause of anxiety to the Northern operators, some of it having recently been sold in Pennsylvania, the principal field of the Northern iron men, and it is a question whether the output of these Southern mines will not keep the price of the commodity permanently on a low level. The execution of the railroad schemes in India would stimulate the iron trade all over the world, but that is not to be counted on as a factor of prosperity, for no definite action has yet been taken by the British government. As for the carrying trade of the world, it is unquestionable that its machinery is much beyond the needs of commerce, but this means low rates, and so long as they do not force the companies into bankruptcy shippers and consumers will have no cause to complain. With the evil has come the corrective. There is little railroad building, and the British ship-yards are idle. Many British vessels, too, have been taken out of commission. The capacity of the British merchant marine was increased 41 per cent. from 1879 to 1883, but the decrease from the loss of vessels and wear is 5 per cent. a year, so with the natural growth of commerce there ought to be some revival even in this dullest of industries before long unless somebody goes to building ships on a large scale. —Chicago Tribune.

American Taxes on English Soil.

It will be news to this free trading country that the American government has discovered a means of taxing our exports to the United States before they leave our shores—taxing them here on British ground and in the very heart of our Empire. So cleverly is this taxation levied that so far it has passed without protest. It comes in the form of fees to consuls certifying exports. "Among the peculiar features of the American protective system is a prohibition on the introduction of any merchandise into the United States as merchandise unless accompanied by an invoice, which invoice must have been produced before the American consular officer at the place of export. The American law requires the shipper to declare to the American consul that the things written in the invoice are true; and the consul must certify this declaration. For receiving this declaration by the shipper and certifying thereto, the American law authorizes the American consul-general (in London, for example) to demand a fee of two dollars and a half, or 10s., and no more. This fee demanded or to be levied in London by the American consul-general applies to every English manufacturer or tradesman sending merchandise to 'the States,' and on small parcels of small values it is a great burden. But the American consul-general in London not content with 10s., now demands 15s. as the price of his certificate, without which the merchandise covered by the invoice cannot be lawfully entered at the American custom house." This tax levied on British ground, at the discretion of the American consul, without the assent of her majesty or the approval of Parliament, must, it is obvious, be very burdensome on parcels of small value. The whole system is bad. It is part of a protective scheme which prevents America from taking the greatest advantage of her position. But what can the British government do? It may make representations to the United States which would have a courteous reply conceding nothing; but that is all. We can only sit down and enjoy with a painful consciousness, that is not all enjoyment, the new proof of the exceeding 'cuteness of our Yankee cousins.—London Standard.

Not so "Depressed" After All.

The London Times of November 14 contains a letter from a correspondent, apparently well informed, who protests against the tone of much of the current talk about the present "unparalleled" and "long-continued" depression in trade. He says that these terms are always used whenever a period of industrial depression comes around. They were applied just the same in 1869 and 1870, and again in the bad years from 1874 to 1879. Besides, he adds, the present is not one of the worst depressions that they have had. The iron and shipping interests are extremely dull, and, so far as can be seen at present, cannot be expected to revive materially until enough of the present surplus of iron ships has been used up by the slow process of wreckage and disaster to set the idle building-yards once more in motion. As for the trades in woollens, worsteds, leather and chemicals, all of them, he says, are doing pretty well. Even in cotton there is a fair business doing. In further confirmation of the notion that things are by no means going to the bad, the same paper editorially cites the increase in the savings-banks deposits, the latest returns of the income tax, and the decrease of persons in receipt of parish relief, as lending support to a more hopeful view. Per contra, Lord Dunraven spoke of the savings-banks returns as "delusive," and stated that an examination of the returns from twenty offices of the postal savings banks showed that the number of artisan depositors had fallen off from 1,223 in 1875 to 923 in 1884, and laborers from 1,052 to 757. On the other hand, the same returns showed that people of "no occupation" (clerks and minors) had very much increased. Supposing these figures to have been fairly arrived at, they do not bear out the impression that England is suffering as a whole, but chiefly in the artisan class, and there not to anything like the extent which current talk would indicate. The reduction in wages which many manufacturers urge is nearly or quite made up to the workman by the cheapness of breadstuffs. Thus there are many elements of encouragement, and at worst the suspension of manufacturing will be but temporary.—Chicago News.

The Department of Public Parks has been petitioned by a number of property owners north of the Central Park to widen the roadway on One Hundred and Tenth street, for the more adequate accommodation of the vehicles and traffic passing that thoroughfare. They suggest that the sidewalk on the south side of the street, which is now 26.6 feet wide, can be narrowed by 10 feet from Fifth to Eighth avenue, thus leaving it 16.6 feet including the wall and coping, and the 10 feet thrown into the roadway, which would then be 36.6 feet. This could be done without any cost for the land to the property owners, the only charge being about $7,000 for the actual work of making the necessary alterations. Among the petitioners are John H. Sherwood, S. Van Rensselaer Cruger, C. H Suydam, James Rufus Smith, Ad. Bernheimer, William D. Whiting and John Downey. Should the Park Commissioners grant the petition, which is very probable, a useful and necessary improvement will be made to One Hundred and Tenth street.

The death of E. H. Ludlow has necessitated a reorganization of the real estate firm which bore his name. The members of the firm hereafter are to be Morris Wilkins, James Edgar Leviness, Edward M. Wilkins and Elliott Roosevelt. The first two names are well known in connection with the old firm, and Mr. Roosevelt is a member of the family of the late Mr. Ludlow. The firm of E. H. Ludlow & Co. stands so high and its business has been so large that it has been determined to do all its future business under the old title. It is to be hoped that the name will not disappear from the list of real estate dealers for many generations to come.

We are requested by Mr. John D. Crimmins, the newly elected president of the Park Commission, to state that he will be in daily attendance at the office of the Commission in Union square from 11 to 1, where he will be pleased to receive suggestions or hear complaints from property owners and others. He further adds that he will cheerfully place maps, &c., at the disposal of those who may require them and give any information that may be desired.

The city authorities of Liverpool have just erected a temporary hospital for infectious diseases on a tract of land containing thirty acres on the banks of the River Mersey. The drainage, heating and other arrangements are of the best description. Flush tanks are provided at the head of each line of drains, which are supplied from special tanks with a strong solution of carbolic acid. The flush tanks are set to discharge every six hours. A special sewer is laid to the river to avoid infection through the city sewers. The heating is done by means of circular open grates being placed in the middle of each building to give radiation and ventilation, and steam pipes are also laid around the outside walls, conveying steam which is generated in the fire place by means of a coil of pipes, some of which form the grate bars. A separate convalescent building of iron, and brick kitchens, scullories and other accessory buildings are situated near by.

There is a project on foot to reclaim a portion of the immense swamp that surrounds New Orleans and make it useful. It is a wonder it was not done long ago. If the Hollanders, centuries ago, reclaimed from the sea the vast stretches of ooze which they now call their country—and which is one of the most fertile and productive regions in Europe—surely, in this age of engineering triumphs, the swamp that comes close up to the back door of the Crescent City can be, and ought to be, made dry and habitable. At present it is worse than useless; it is a nuisance. A company proposes to enclose 2,500 acres of it with a substantial levee, pump the water out, clear it of jungle and bring it into cultivation. The soil is rich, and, if devoted to market gardening, the tract would amply repay the cost of its reclamation—while the levee that protects it would be a barrier to the city against inundations at the same time.—St. Louis Republican.

Real Estate Department.

Although there were no sales of any consequence at the Exchange Salesroom this week dealers in all parts of the city report a better feeling in real estate circles. Indeed some agents and brokers have been quite surprised at the numerous inquiries for desirable investments in real estate. It seems as if people who come into the possession of money are puzzled to know what use to make of it. The stock market does not look inviting; really good bonds are scarce and ordinary stocks are not attractive to cautious people. Hence real estate is proving attractive for people who wish to have some assurance of certainty in their outlays. True, there is not as yet much buying, but it is generally believed by the trade that after the holidays a fairly brisk business will set in. It is thought by the time the new Real Estate Exchange opens that there will be a prospect of a pretty lively market. If the Transfer Reform Commission should report early and the Legislature should act promptly, so as to reduce the cost and shorten the period in which real estate can be conveyed, it will add largely to the spring business on the Exchange.

An extraordinary scene took place at the Exchange Salesroom yesterday. The leasehold property No. 40 Vesey street was sold by auctioneer J. T. Boyd under foreclosure, in the suit of James Turner against George H. Creed, assignee of Charles W. Scofield. The amount due on the mortgage foreclosed was about $7,150. The building is a five-story stone front store, and the lease expires May 1, 1888. The bidding commenced at $6,000, and continued amid much excitement for over half an hour, until it reached the sum of $17,350, when the party to whom the property was knocked down, a Mr. Hyatt, tendered to referee Hamersley an order on the plaintiff in the action for $1,735 in lieu of the required 10 per cent. This the referee refused to accept, despite the urgent request of the plaintiff to do so. The latter and the defendant then asked for an adjournment of the sale, which the referee denied, ordering the auctioneer to resell the property. The bidding this time commenced at $8,000, and finally reached $16,000. The party to whom the property was knocked down refused to pay $16,000, asserting that he did not bid that sum, but acknowledging a bid above $15,500. The referee then ordered the auctioneer to put up the property for a third time, when it was knocked down for $15,550 to John H. Blake, who signed the terms of sale and paid the required deposit of 10 per cent. The sale lasted altogether about an hour and a quarter.

The following is the list of conveyances and mortgages for the past week and for the corresponding period last year. The number of conveyances is about the same, but the total amount shows a decrease. The Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth Wards still keep ahead, the number and cost of parcels sold being three times as large as the year before. The mortgages show an increase both in number and amount, and those at 5 per cent. are larger by about 100 per cent.

On Wednesday the same auctioneer, by order of executors, will sell the house No. 233 Stanton street. On the same date, December 17, Mr. Harnett will sell the four-story building No. 78 Fifth avenue, near Fourteenth street. This is an improving locality, made so by the extensive alterations on Fourteenth street. Mr. Harnett will also sell on the same day the building on the northwest corner of Grand and Sullivan streets; also No. 16 Grand street, adjoining, and the buildings Nos. 115 and 117 West Forty-first street, near Bryant Park.

On Tuesday, December 16, John F. B. Smyth has an important sale of leasehold property No. 211 West Forty-fifth street. This will take place at 10.30 A. M. on the premises. The same auctioneer will sell on Wednesday, December 17th, at the Exchange, by order of executors, the property Nos. 206 and 208 East Twenty-fourth street, also the property Nos. 227 to 231 East Twenty-sixth street, and likewise the leasehold property, Nos. 235 and 237 East Twenty-sixth street.

On Thursday, December 18th, R. V. Harnett will sell six very well-located lots on the southeast corner of the Grand Boulevard and One Hundred and Thirty-first street. This will be a partition sale. In view of the new railroad all Boulevard property is more desirable now than formerly.

On Thursday, December 18th, Richard V. Harnett will sell some of the choicest lots on Riverside Drive. Seven of them are 225 feet north of One Hundred and Sixteenth street; three are 800 feet north of One Hundred and Twenty-second street, and two are on Claremont avenue, 825 feet north of One Hundred and Twenty-second street. These are among the very cream of the lots on this beautiful and popular drive.

E. H. Ludlow & Co. have an important sale of investment property on Thursday, December 18th. On that day the valuable office building No. 35 Nassau street will be sold, by order of the executors of Charles H. Russell, deceased. This is the kind of building which brings to the Exchange the most conservative investors.

The cost of the Metropolitan Bank property, purchased by the Equitable Assurance Life Society, was $151.47 per square foot, and not $113.52 as previously reported. The property contains 5,033.9 square feet, and as the cost was $762,500, it will be seen that the first-named figure is correct.

Brooklyn.

The sale of property in the Fourth and Fifth Wards for unpaid taxes and assessments will take place on Tuesday next, December 16th, in the Municipal building. The assessed value of the property to be sold is $490,850, while the amount due for taxes and assessments is $49,742. At the last sale advertised the delinquents settled the outstanding claims against them, so that but a very small proportion of the property advertised was sold. Special Notices.

Collins' Iron Works make tanks a specialty. They have supplied them to some of the most prominent buildings in the city, amongst which may be mentioned the Vanderbilt houses, the Central Park apartment houses, the Standard Oil Company's building, the Cotton and Produce Exchanges and the Mutual Life Insurance Company's building. They also manufacture boilers and plumbers' tanks. The Collins' Iron Works is at the foot of West Twenty-first Street. Telephone call, Twenty-first street, No. 463.

John E. Hodges, the real estate agent, of No. 206 East Fifty-sixth street, has opened a branch real estate office at No. 455 West Forty-eighth street, where he solicits property for sale, rent or exchange. Mr. Hodges also transacts insurance business.

The Church of the Sacred Heart on Fifty-first street, near Tenth avenue, is rapidly approaching completion. The front is composed of Philadelphia brick, terra cotta and stone. The latter is the Berea (Ohio) stone, and looks very well in contrast with the diaper terra cotta tiles. The Berea stone has been used by the architect in the basement, the arches, the stringcourses and arcades. It was supplied and cut by Andrew Mills, of Fifty first street and Eleventh avenue.

BUILDING MATERIAL MARKET.

BRICKS.—There has been a somewhat fuller movement, at times quite a little animation shown, and altogether a more business-like air to the market for Common Hards during the past week. Considerable irregularity, however, was developed on the tone, as the quality here was drawn quite sharp and it naturally made a great difference whether buyers were ready and anxious to obtain possession of the offering or had it forced on them. Thus we find all reports agree that demand for fine stock has been good and steady from day to day, readily exhausted the offerings and even engaged some cargoes to arrive with full rates paid and well maintained to the close, though making no positive advance. On the other hand, however, undesirable stock has been plentiful, receivers rather anxious about all of it and crowding the worst upon the market in a somewhat depressing manner, with a natural result in weakened value, and we hear of sales of Haverstraw 2ds at prices running down into the valuation line of "Up Rivers," which in turn have gone toward the lowest figure on average Jerseys, and some of the poorest of the latter selling at $4.00@4.25 per M. The best Jerseys, however, will bring $4.50@4.50, Up Rivers $5.25@5.50, and Haverstraws $5.75@6.25 per M, the latter a little exceptional. The general supply has been pretty full, but the forcing process on the one grade and the natural free call for the other has made a pretty good cleaning up of the market, and at the close we note a somewhat more hopeful, and in a few instances quite confident, feeling among receivers. That a large number of boats are aground up the river, and many points have made last shipments does not hurt matters, and especially as it is known that several cargoes as soon as they can get through will be delivered on contract. Pales are very dull, very unsettled and keeping well in buyers' favor. A number of sales have been made at $2.50 and some up to $3.00, with a fraction more claimed but probably difficult to realize.

LATH.—There is not much to say on the market for lath after noting another addition of 15 cents to the line of cost. This gain has been reached through the natural causes of scant supply and full demand, and as the same features still prevail the selling interest feels correspondingly cheerful, with an occasional indication of that confidence unwilling to admit hardly the possibility of a reaction. All the stock was taken on local account at $2.45, and finally at $2 50, with the latter rate still bid at the close, and no lath to meet it.

LIME.—No change at all since last week. All the stock coming to hand has found an outlet, buyers appeared willing to pay and sellers to accept former figures, and thus an even, uniform market was preserved with little or no difficulty.

LUMBER.—"What is the necessity for coming around," is a very common question addressed to our representative when in search of news on the general lumber market, and about the only reply that can be given is "habit." Certainly nothing can be learned differing in any noticeable particular from the reports repeated over and over again for weeks past, and a review boiled down into "dull and nominally unchanged" would cover about the entire ground. The market, of course, can brace up a little at this season when so many sources of supply are practically shut off, and where values have stiffened the reduced offering of stock appears to be the main cause. There is certainly no healthy improvement in the demand nor prospect of any during the present month at least. The accumulation of stock shows up well in quantity, and also contains a good average run of quality, but the proportion of fine and choice stuff to the general supply is quite as small as usual, and rates are correspondingly steadier. Interior offerings are now all by rail.

Eastern Spruce receivers are inclined to talk quite steadily in most cases, because they do not expect many more arrivals, and have only a few mills to which specifications for specials can be sent. They, however, are ready to admit that buyers are not affording them much aid and comfort, and were the necessity to arise under which sellers should desire to hasten negotiations, the first and most important move to secure success would be a modification in the line of valuation. Casual remarks about broken stocks in dealers' hands may be heard, but buyers make no complaint about difficulty in obtaining such goods as necessity may call for. Quotations are placed at $13@15@15.50 on randoms, and so on up to $17 per M for specials.

White Pine remains under more or less neglect and has a stupid sort of market throughout. There is of course a little stock selling constantly either on home or shipping account but the movement appears to give no satisfaction and dealers are in a large number of cases indulging in a sort of chronic grumbling. Prices are thought to be "about as before" and all figures should be considered nominal for the present. Some of the stocks now piled up and the rates at which they were bought show that dealers who "went around Albany" to get a supply lost nothing by so doing. We quote at $16@17 for West India shipping boards; $18@27 for South American do.; $13@14 for box boards, and $16@18 for extra do.

Yellow Pine exhibits the stereotyped conditions of inactivity and uncertainty. For current consumption the supply on hand is liberal and well assorted, indeed there is a large surplus, and against future wants it is folly to attempt opening negotiations as no buyers can be found. Occasional "rumors" come from the South of something about to be done to bring the market into better form but as usual there is nothing accomplished beyond "rumor." A few railroad contracts are under consideration but plenty anxious to get them. Of 1¼ inch floor boards the supply at the moment is a little scant and sellers have no advantage accordingly. We quote as follows: Randoms, $17@19.50per M; Specials, $19.50@21 do.; Green Flooring Boards, $21@22; Dry, do., do., $22@23; Siding, $20@22 do.; Cargoes f. o. b. at Atlantic ports, $13@15 for rough, and $18@20 for dressed. Cargoes f. o. b. at Gulf ports, $12@14 for rough, and $20@21 for dressed.

Hardwoods are not active and little of special interest can be noted. An attractive offering of any grade of stock from first hands would meet with attention but poorer stuff cannot be forced into notice except at very low rates as some consignors are commencing to learn after failing to pay the least heed to warnings repeatedly given. There is some trade on export account but mostly in small lots and taken only when freight charges are favorable. We quote at wholesale rates by car load as follows: Walnut, $65@100 per M.; ash, $33@40 do.; oak, $30@55 do.; maple, $20@32.50 do.; chestnut, $25@30 do.; cherry, $50@80 do.; whitewood, $27@35 do., do.; elm, $22@25; hickory, $45@50 do.

ALBANY MARKET.

The Argus reports for week ending December 9, as follows:

The mild weather leaving the river navigable has been utilized by continued shipments during the week. Several large barges and many canal boats have loaded for New York, Connecticut and New Jersey, and left on Saturday night. There is a considerable amount sold if it can be shipped, one freight agent having 2,000,000 feet, and others smaller amounts. The weather is, of course, very uncertain at this season of the year, and a cold snap may close navigation any day. But few boats were loading yesterday. There is a fine assortment and good stock left on the yards for winter business, which promises to be larger than usual. Most of the offices will be open in the district, though several of the dealers have removed their books down town to their winter quarters, leaving salesmen in the district to attend to any buyers who want lumber.

THE WEST.

SAGINAW VALLEY.

LUMBERMAN'S GAZETTE,
BAY CITY, MICH.

A dead calm sometimes overtakes the mariner, and he finds nothing to do but quietly await a change of the weather. This condition about expresses the lumber business situation just at present on the Saginaw River. The summer rates from the Saginaw valley east are to be retained, and this may possibly develop a car trade which shall move a considerable portion of the enormous surplus stock on hand at the close of operations. Operations in the woods this winter will undoubtedly be limited. We are led to this conclusion, not only by the statements of manufacturers themselves, but by the far better testimony of the dealers in lumber supplies who are complaining bitterly about the limited sales this fall in comparison with several years past. This is a pretty unerring barometer of the extent of operations in the woods; and besides this, the usual bustle and activity among the red sash brigade is almost entirely imperceptible. Whereas, in former years, the trains were literally loaded with men and supplies at this season of the year, they may now be "counted on one's finger ends." It is generally believed that the stock of unsold lumber in pile at this point is nearly double that on hand at the close of operations in 1883, and that the entire amount of lumber on the docks will reach 500,000,000 feet, if it does not exceed that figure. This is considerably over 100,000,000 feet more than was left in 1883, which was greatly in excess of any previous year.

The Chicago Northwestern Lumberman as follows:

The market season is over. Yet within the week ended to-day 80 loads of lumber have arrived in port, but only a small number have been off red on the market. During the closing days of last week the tail end of the season's shipments hustled in out of the winter that was hard after them, which swelled the fleet to considerable proportions. Offerings were worked off at about the previously prevailing figures. Piece stuff was sold at $8.50. A load of dry inch, of medium class, sold for $13.50. No. 2 stock changed hands at prices that had prevailed during the last half of November, namely, from $9 to $11.

No vessels are now going out for lumber—or next to none—though the weather this week thus far has been fine for navigation. Everybody connected with the lake transportation of lumber appears to have abandoned the business for the season. The yard merchants are making little inquiry about stocks, so that there is nowhere any motive for a market.

On account of the limited number of offerings and sales on the market the past week, and the fact that there will be no further business of importance at the docks this year, we have dropped cargo quotations and the usual schedule of lake freights.

The commission men are getting their breath after the season's scramble, and appear to feel much relieved. They seem to be satisfied with the amount of lumber handled, but complain somewhat of the prices realized. For four months the white wings of peace will hover over the rotting wharf at the market, the pop-corn man will be out of business, the market peeler will have an easy job and these reports will be absent from our columns. In the meantime the autumn bulls will be developed into spring bears, and the commission men will be converting beefsteak into muscle and nerve that shall enable them to grapple with yard men in the spring.

On the hardwood market the month has hardly progressed far enough to announce its character, but it is safe to say that it will not vary much from that of the last two or three months. At the opening what we stated as the probability has come to pass: that the building trade would be likely to show a temporary activity. The actual advent of winter has hastened the completion of buildings under construction, and the mild weather succeeding the snap has encouraged the builders to proceed with outside work.

A peculiarity of this season promises to be that maple will show no firmness in price for some time after lake navigation closes. The same will be the case with birch, beech, basswood and other woods which largely come in by lake during the open season. The reason is that there are large stocks of most of those woods in the hands of dealers here, and the demand will not soon exhaust them. Birch is an exception and further supplies would be welcomed.

LUMBERMAN AND MANUFACTURER,
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

"Quiet reigns in Warsaw," or words to that effect. The lumber business has run down to a minimum, both in volume and prices, at all wholesale points. As the figures of the season's operations come to hand it appears that stocks, although in excess of last year's figures, are not more than will meet the expected demand of 1885, with any ordinary crop season. Our estimate from returns already in is that the stock on hand January 1st will be only about 20 per cent. above last year's figures. This is encouraging when it is remembered that nearly the last board of 1883 was sold by July 1st, 1884. The chief trouble lies in the apprehension of another excessive season's sawing, which would certainly increase the surplus next summer and lead to utter and complete demoralization if not ruin to all concerned. If the output of 1885 could be reduced one-half in the three States it would be safe to say that lumber would go up to $15 next summer. Every indication now is an assurance that this will not be done anywhere. On most of the streams the large surplus of old logs, added to the proposed cut, brings up the figures to nearly those of 1884.

There is so little doing that prices are merely nominal. Collections are reported easier and discounts are much more readily obtained for every purpose save logging. Lumber well insured is now collateral.

ENGLAND.

The Timber Trade's Journal as follows:

American Black Walnut—The retail trade is going on steadily and consumption remains satisfactory, but there have been no sales effected publicly.

American Whitewood—Without any specially noteworthy feature, this trade is going on with regularity, and stocks are passing into consumption more freely than they are being replaced by arrivals, which is certainly an encouraging sign.

Perhaps the leading feature in the trade this week was the sale of the cargo of Sequoiawood (commonly called California redwood), which brought together an unusually large gathering of fancy wood buyers.

We think the importers of this cargo are to be congratulated upon its successful introduction here; almost all the leading buyers in the mahogany and hardwood trades were amongst the purchasers, all seeming equally desirous to secure some lots; and thus this wood will become widely distributed, and an opportunity be afforded for the practical testing of its suitability for the various purposes in the trade to which its special merits appear so strongly to commend it. We may add that we hear another cargo of this wood is shortly expected. There are no public sales advertised for next week.

Three thousand six hundred and fifty-nine planks California redwood (Sequoia), containing 22,740 cubic feet, a prime parcel of useful sizes, ex Prince Rupert, from San Francisco. All was sold from 2s. to 6s. 6d., average 3s. 5d.

METALS.—COPPER—Ingot on all home outlets is very dull and more or less depressed in tone. Rumors still prevail of liberal contracts for export entered into by the lake companies some time ago and it is generally accepted as a fact that a Montana company has contracted its entire output for 1885 to foreign buyers, the price to be fixed upon ruling values upon certain standard grades at time of delivery. All that, however, has no influence here and, under free offerings made with a considerable degree of pressure, cost has receded and now shows 12c. for Lake down to 11c. for the more ordinary brands. Manufactured Copper of all kinds is slow, and to a considerable extent nominal in value. We quote as follows: Brazier's Copper, ordinary size, over 16 oz. per sq. foot, 20c. per lb.; do. do. do., 16 oz. and over 12 oz. per sq. foot, 22c. per lb.; do. do., 10 and 12 oz. per sq. foot, 24c. per lb.; do. do., lighter than 10 oz. per sq. foot, 26c. per lb.; circles less than 24 inches in diameter, 23c. per lb.; 24 inches in diameter and over, 26c. per lb.; segment and pattern sheets, 23c. per lb.; locomotive fire-box sheets, 21c. per lb.; Sheathing Copper, over 12 oz. per sq. foot, 18c. per lb., and Bolt Copper, 21c. per lb. IRON—Scotch Pig has not undergone much change on the general line of valuation, but the undertone was weak and sellers could not hurry matters even on small lots until ready to offer customers somewhat more attractive terms. Supplies ample of all grades. We quote at $19.00@22.00 per ton, according to brand, etc. American Pig has met with much neglect and the market ruled heavy throughout. Stocks in many instances prove to be in excess of calculations, desire to realize has become greater, and with no special inclination among any class of buyers to turn their advantage to account, the current feeling is far from encouraging Actual selling values are quite uncertain, but it is understood that some of the companies are contracting in anticipation of a general reduction to take place with the turn of the year. Indeed at the close we understand that one of the leading companies has contracted for somewhere in the neighborhood of 50,000 tons next year's delivery at $18 for No. 1 X foundry and $17 for No 2 do. do. We quote $18.50@19 per ton for No. 1 X foundry, $17.50@18.00 for No. 2 X do. do., and $16.00@17.00 for gray forge. Old Rails sell occasionally, but in a general way the market is slow and unsatisfactory, and the undertone weak. Scrap also shading more or less on cost whenever business is accomplished but no outlet offered for full parcels of stock. We quote at $16 50@17.50 for old tee rails, $18@19 for doubleheads, $17.50@18.00 for No. 1 wrought scrap ex ship, $18.50@19.50 for selected do., $16.25@16.50 for old car wheels, and $18.50@19.00 for crop ends. Steel Rails again somewhat lower under the adverse influences of a light, uncertain demand, and quite sharp competition over the few buyers who do appear. We quote at $27@29 per ton for heavy section. Manufactured iron under much neglect, and showing quite an unsettled tone, with valuations to a great extent nominal. Contracts are few and far between. We quote Common Merchant Bar, ordinary sizes, at 1.70@2c. from store and Refined at 1.90@2.40c.; Rods, round and square, 2.00@2.30c.; Bands, 2.30@2.50c.; Norway Nail Rods, 5¼@6c., and domestic sheet on the basis of 2.70@3.00c. for common Nos. 10@16. Other descriptions at corresponding prices, with 1-10c. less on large lots from cars. LEAD—Domestic Pig has met with some trade orders, but beyond that the market ruled very quiet, and the wholesale rate is more or less nominal in the absence of a fair test, though at the close indications were a trifle firmer. We quote at about 3½@3¾c. per lb., according to brand and the size of invoice handled. The manufactures of lead are steady and quoted: Bar, 4½@4¾c.; pipe, 5¾c.; and sheet, 6¾c., less the usual discount to the trade; and tin-lined pipe, 15c.; block tin pipe, 40c., on same terms. TIN—Pig has not received much attention from speculators, found only a moderate, uncertain trade demand, and in an irregular way prices favored buyers, closing to some extent nominal. We quote at 16¼@16⅝c. for Straits. 16½@16¾c. for Australian, 17½@17⅝c. for English, and 19@19¼c. for Banca. Tin Plates are rarely called for in large parcels, and the jobbing trade is also slow, the general market having quite a dull tone. Values vary little though weak on the average. We quote I. C. Charcoal, third-class assortment, $5.00@5.10 for Allaway grade, and $5.65@5.70 for Melyn grade; for each additional X add $1.25 and $1.50 respectively; I. C. Coke, $4 55@4.60 for B. V. grade; $4.65@4.70 for J. B. grade; Charcoal terne, $4.50@4.60 for Allaway and Dean grades 14x20; $9.25@9.60 for do. 20x28; Coke terne, $4.35@4 40 for Glais grade 14x20, and $9.15@9.20 for do. 20x28—all in round lots. Spelter under some pressure to sell has lacked tone and character, especially as very few buyers were attracted. We quote at about 4¼@4⅞c. for domestic and foreign, according to brand, quantity, etc. Sheet Zinc dull and nominally unchanged at about 5¼@6¼c., according to quality, quantity, etc.

NAILS.—Demand is somewhat erratic and confined largely to the stimulus obtained on sudden and unexpected wants of regular operators. It is in consequence difficult to fairly estimate and compare the general volume of business, but the impression gains that the movement is gradually falling away as a natural sequence of the progress of the year toward its close. Supplies, however, are in the meantime "shaped up" as much as possible, and a heavy pressure upon the market presented. Quotations may be placed at $2@2.15 per keg for 10d to 60d, with due allowance to be made in favor of extra-sized invoices, and some sales of car lots understood to have been made below $2 per keg.

PAINTS, OILS, ETC.—Only a moderate amount of stock of any description is wanted, and a pretty dull sort of market prevails throughout. There does not appear to be anything of interest, in fact, since our last and on the general run of prices the situation may be called nominally unchanged for the various grades of paints, oils, colors, etc. Linseed oil secures average trade orders, and stands about steady at 52@53 for domestic, and 54@56 for foreign. Spirits Turpentine has found moderate sale only, and still rather favors the buyer at 31¾@33½, according to size of invoice, style of package, etc.

PITCH AND TAR.—Not much inquiry prevails, and the general market has a dull sort of tone all around.

Supplies, however, are not urged, and about former rates continue to be asked. We quote Pitch $2.25@2.30 per bbl., Tar $2.50@3 do., according to quantity, quality and delivery.

MORTGAGES.

NOTE.—The arrangement of this list is as follows: The first name is that of the mortgagor, the next that of the mortgagee. The description of the property then follows, then the date of the mortgage, the time for which it was given, and the amount. The general dates used as headings are the dates when the mortgage was handed into the Register's office to be recorded.

Whenever the letters "P. M." occur, preceded by the name of a street in these lists of mortgages, they mean that it is a Purchase Money Mortgage, and for fuller particulars see the list of transfers under the corresponding date.

The holiday season which is approaching will be gloomier than it has been for several years past. Trade is depressed, and the immediate outlook in all the markets is anything but reassuring. All classes will suffer, but this will be a particularly bitter winter for the poor. The laboring classes have had several prosperous years, but it is not likely that the bulk of the working people have made any provision for such times as they are about to experience. Fortunately food is cheap, and the price of coal must come down. For a wonder even meat has fallen in price in the wholesale markets. Some concerted efforts should, however, be made to enable the poorer class of consumers to profit by the lower prices of meat, grain and fuel. It is the retail dealers who now get the advantage of the lower prices, not their customers, and as usual it is the very poor who have to pay the highest prices for the necessaries of life.

We have our doubts about the wisdom of our government undertaking to build an inter-oceanic canal through Nicaragua. The Panama Canal will be a short but open one. Like its great predecessor, the Suez Canal, it will have no locks and vessels can pass through it within a few hours' time. The Nicaragua Canal will not only be a long one, necessitating lake and river as well as canal navigation, but will involve six locks on the Atlantic side and seven on the Pacific side. The delay will necessarily be a very serious one and the advantage will be entirely in favor of its French rival in point of time and, of course, expense. There are other considerations which should forbid us going into this enterprise as a nation, but the one we have indicated is sufficient, if there were no others. If we wish to compete with the Panama Canal why not adopt the brilliant suggestion of Captain Eads and construct a ship railway across the narrowest point of the isthmus. His plan is to dry-dock the incoming vessels, lift it upon a gigantic railway and deposit it in the waters on the other side. The scheme is so novel a one that the ordinary engineer will not consider it, yet experts say it is entirely practical and that it will cost far less than any water canal and will save time as well as money.

But novelties in engineering, like Captain Eads' plan, are never adopted when a number of people are asked to give their assent to an untried experiment. If we have any money as a nation to spend it should be in building up our navy and providing defences for our seaboard cities. The construction of a Nicaragua canal would be a menace to Europe, a violation of the letter and spirit of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty and would necessitate on our part a warlike foreign policy for which we are not prepared. However, there is hardly much danger of the Nicaraguan treaty being endorsed by the present Congress; yet it is curious to notice that all our executives, including Grant, Hayes, Garfield and Arthur, as well as their respective Secretaries of State, were in favor of some such treaty and programme as that contained in the recommendations of President Arthur in his last message.

All who wish to keep posted should not fail to read the "Business World" department of this paper. It contains some of the best articles taken from the press of the country on trade prospects. We rarely quote our city papers, as it is presumed that they are seen by our readers; but we copy this week short articles from the Commercial Bulletin and Bradstreet's on the almost unnoticed but important change which is taking place in the foreign policy of the nation. We have made no pronounced new departure, yet here we are taking part in an International Congress regulating the trade of internal Africa, securing coaling stations in different parts of the world, and proposing to build an inter-oceanic canal in a foreign country with government money. Brother Jonathan is evidently beginning to think that the foreign policy of an infant nation of 5,000,000 of people is not exactly the thing for a great country, which will soon have 60,000,000 of inhabitants. A new era is evidently dawning.

And now another treaty has been made, this time with San Domingo, the object being as in the case of the Mexican and Spanish treaties to open new markets for our manufactures, but we see no prospect of any treaty, however desirable, being sanctioned by the present Congress. Even should the Senate ratify a treaty the House would refuse, as it did in the case of the Mexican treaty, to provide the necessary money to carry out its provisions. Because the Representatives must vote the supplies that body has always claimed that it must be consulted when a new treaty is being negotiated. True, the trade of the country may suffer by the non-recognition of a treaty, but that is considered of minor importance by Representatives in a matter where the privileges of their body are concerned.

The opposition to these new commercial treaties is simply exasperating. The warehouses of the country are stocked with unsalable goods, and our capacity for producing manufactured articles is far in excess of the requirements of the home market. The aim of all these treaties and others now negotiating is to give us foreign markets for our surplus products, but the high protected interests become alarmed and bring a pressure to bear in Congress which the latter cannot resist. Then our national legislature is an inefficient body. Its rules are designed to prevent legislation of all kinds, and nine-tenths of its members are of a profession with whom talking and hair-splitting are the chief ends of life. Some day the mighty interests of the nation will assert themselves, and the first thing that Uncle Sam will be asked to do is to put his foot on this Congress of chattering lawyers.

The Shortcomings of Congress.

There is a growing impatience among the people of all countries at the dilatoriness and incompetency of congresses and parliaments. We live in a business age in which events affecting public policy are rapidly made known by the press through the aid of the telegraph and governments are often called upon to deal with them summarily. But legislative movements are necessarily slow, and lag far behind the natural expectations of the community. The very forms of constitutional legislative assemblies which are designed to protect minorities and prevent inconsiderate legislation make parliamentary rule procrastinating and inefficient. In England the Gladstone ministry has been forced to adopt several measures to expedite necessary legislation. In France Gambetta, and Ferry after him, have tried to reform the French Chambers by electing members on a general ticket rather than by single districts. This change, it was hoped, would lead to the choice of representatives who cared more for France than for their petty localities, but these efforts have so far failed. Our own Congress has become an exceedingly inefficient body. It pays no heed to the wisest recommendations of the executive, and cannot be got to give any attention to the larger interests of the country. Ex-Mayor Smith Ely, Jr., declared after having served in the House of Representatives, that so far as he could see the object of every rule in that body was to put a stop to legislation. The Times of last Tuesday prints an interview with a leading lawyer whom we take to be none other than William M. Evarts, who passes the following judgment upon Congress:

I don't want to be disrespectful to Congress, but a correct appreciation of what is due the dignity of the government would have resulted long ago in a declaration, backed by all the powers of the government, settling forever the question of isthmus supremacy. Our executive department has always held right views and urged right measures to enforce them. The matter has been practically in the hands of Congress for years, for the executive is powerless without Congressional co-operation. Gen. Grant entreated it, as did Mr. Hayes, and now President Arthur. I regret to say that this experience has conclusively proved that the primary Congressman, the average member, is unequal to questions beyond the politics of the hour or his local interests. He is utterly lacking in conception of the true and statesmanlike province of higher legislation. I don't believe Congress will give effect at this session to the Nicaraguan treaty, the Spanish treaty, or to any other, and I am unable to predict when these important matters will get intelligent consideration in Congress; probably not until free discussion of them outside of Congress shall have dictated a course which Congressmen, under the pressure of local influences, will feel bound to follow.

Just now the nation needs wise Congressional action on a number of very important subjects. Were we under the control of a far-seeing and sensible despot there would be some chance of a beneficial change in the business of the country within three months' time. He could make the Mexican treaty effective; correct and adopt the new Spanish treaty; then he could stop our absurd debt-paying policy and turn our surplus revenues into productive channels, that is, commence works to guard our seacoast cities, build war vessels, improve our rivers and harbors and so set the business of the country again in motion. But our Congress of pottering lawyers will do nothing but talk. Toward the end of February it will pass a few appropriation bills and then adjourn. The next Congress will not meet until December and will not try to do anything until the spring of 1886. In the meantime our seaport cities will be at the mercy of any tenth-rate naval power; we will be without a navy or a torpedo service, or batteries of guns to defend our exposed points on the coast, while the commercial treaties which would have made markets for our manufactured goods in Central and South America will remain unconfirmed, or if confirmed inoperative because of the failure of the House to devise the necessary machinery for carrying them out, as is the case at present with the Mexican treaty.

We have often urged in these columns that a certain proportion of both the Senate and the House, say one-third of each body, should be chosen by a vote representing the whole nation. We want legislators in the Senate and House who will represent not Rhode Island and Nevada, Podunk or Bunkum, but the whole United States. It is localities which are now deferred to, not the nation.

Then there is a growing feeling that executive authority must be increased and legislatures stripped of much of their present power. The business of the world is best transacted by presidents, governors, mayors, rather than by hair-splitting and contentious lawyers assembled in legislative halls. The powers given to the mayors of New York and Brooklyn and taken from the aldermen of those cities show the tendency of things. In the meantime the business world must make up its mind that there is no hope of beneficent legislation from Congress during the present session.

Why Low Prices?

The London (England) Timber Trade's Journal comments at some length upon the controversy which the Northwestern Lumberman has had with THE RECORD AND GUIDE on the subject of the low prices now prevailing throughout the world. The Lumberman took the very generally held view that the cause of the trouble was overproduction, while THE RECORD AND GUIDE was of the opinion that the depression was mainly on account of the shrinkage of the metallic basis of the precious metals which measure prices.

A first and superficial view of things is very often incorrect. Our senses tell us that the sun rises in the east and sets in the west, while the earth to all visual appearance is a flat surface; but an instructed person knows that the earth is not flat, but round, and that it is the earth which rotates on its axis from west to east, thus giving the impression that the sun moves in the opposite direction. How natural then is it when we see elevators filled with unsalable grain and warehouses stocked with goods for which there is no market to say that there has been overproduction? This explanation is so simple and an obvious one that it is generally accepted almost without question in business circles. Hence the efforts to restrict production. There are coal combinations to stop mining, mills cease running, furnaces are blown out, working people are thrown out of employment at the beginning of winter, and capital accumulates at money centres because its owners will not produce on a falling market.

But we have held that the trouble is not overproduction of either food or clothing, for it is notorious that in the best of times the mass of the community have not more than they can eat or wear. Empty stomachs and bare backs are always plentiful in this unhappy world of ours. There was never a time in the history of mankind when there was more food or clothing than could have been consumed if those who needed the goods had money wherewith to buy them. This is our contention—there is not sufficient money taking the whole world through to enable the working classes to use up the store of food and raiment which are waiting for a market.

We hold that the history of mankind shows that in every period when money has been abundant that trade has been prosperous and no one ever dreamt in these times that there was overproduction. It is also true that when the money supplies have been cut off that the trade of the world has suffered and goods become unsalable, as the masses of mankind were pinched because of the insufficient supply of money rewards for their labor. To make this matter plain we propound the following queries:

1st. Is it not true as a matter of fact that during the reign of the early Roman emperors the world was exceptionally prosperous, and at the same time the amount of gold and silver per capita in circulation was unusually large?

2d. Is it not also true that during the Middle Ages Europe suffered severely from extreme poverty? The religious influence of the times was opposed to the mining of gold and silver and the proportion of the precious metals fell off to about $11 per capita.

3d. Is it not also true that the only prosperous communities toward the close of the Middle Ages were the commercial cities Florence, Genoa, Venice, &c., which drew unusual supplies of the precious metals from the East?

4th. Did not an era of great prosperity follow the Spanish conquest of Central and South America, which resulted in pouring within a few years some $600,000,000 in silver into the channels of trade? Was not the splendor of the reigns of Charles V. of Spain and Queen Elizabeth of England due to the prosperous trade based upon this addition to the money metals of the world?

5th. Did not the discovery of gold in California and Australia stimulate wonderfully the trade of the whole earth? The populations of every country were better employed and remunerated because of the streams of gold which flowed through all the arteries of commerce.

6th. Was not the demonetization of silver by Germany and the United States in the spring of 1873 followed by a distressful panic in both countries in the fall of that same year? Other nations were also injured by the fall in prices due to the fact that gold was made the sole unit of value.

7th. Is it not true there was no recovery in values in the United States until the Bland Silver Bill was passed over President Hayes' veto in the spring of 1878? This rendered possible the resumption of specie payments in January, 1879, which added all the gold and silver in the country to the paper money previously in circulation. This doubling of our currency was the prime factor of the rise in prices and prosperous times which followed.

We might multiply queries like these, but does not the merest tyro in finance know that any addition to the currency of the country enhances prices, while every reduction in the money supply brings down values? We have said nothing in the above with reference to paper issues; but is it not known to everyone that periods of paper inflation, such as we had for instance during the Civil War, give us for the time an active business and apparent prosperity? Is not the popular craze about greenbacks due to the new business they brought the country in times of depression and peril?

On this point let us not be misunderstood. We believe in gold and silver money and in paper convertible into the precious metals. These we regard as the solid food, the wholesome sustainer of the trade of the world. Irredeemable paper currency is an unwholesome stimulant. It acts like the strong spirits which cause a momentary elation to be followed by a painful depression.

The business distress the world over is due to two causes—one natural and the other artificial. The supply of gold has been growing less year by year. This is the natural cause of the depression in prices. The artificial cause is the demonetization of silver by the commercial world. At a time in the world's history when there is a prodigious expansion of trade and industry we have cut off silver from the task of measuring prices and made our steadily diminishing stock of gold the sole unit of value. Hence the crash in prices, which is only another way of saying that gold has augmented enormously in value. And we are only in the beginning of our troubles. Stopping production and starving the working classes is not going to help us at all. If the consuming classes, which are the bulk of our population, didn't have money to purchase the goods produced a year ago they will have still less money to buy goods next year and the year after. All business men and borrowers have reason to dread the future, for debts contracted in the past in a cheap currency will have to be paid in a dearer currency. A few days since we were told that Austria was about to resume specie payments on a gold basis. The next news that came was of the failure of the Bohemian Mortgage Company. A panic is shortly in order upon the Vienna bourse.

Our English contemporary wants to know what is the remedy? We answer, the remonetizing of silver by the commercial nations. It is and always has been the favorite money metal of mankind. It is almost the only money metal used in Asia and Central and South America. It is the money of retail trade and of the poor in gold nations. Its degradation by the nations has been a blunder, and a continuance of this policy will be a crime against mankind.

One of the dangers of the telegraph system of the country being in private hands is that news may be doctored to affect the markets. A short time since there were reports in the evening papers that a panic was raging upon the Vienna bourse. This was denied in the morning papers; but now comes report of an embezzlement of over a million dollars in the Lower Austrian Discount Bank, with an agitated feeling on the bourse in consequence. This is published in all the papers, but the following paragraph is given only in the Herald, being either suppressed by or not furnished to the other morning journals:

"The Raubitschek iron firm has failed with liabilities amounting to £35,000. Marco Cohen, of Braila, has failed, with liabilities of £40,000. His son, S. M. Cohen, of Bucharest, has also failed."

The fact that the great Bohemian Mortgage Company had failed was allowed to be made known during the week and that there was trouble among the savings banks in consequence. The significance of this financial disturbance is that it followed fast upon the announcement that Austria was in the market to purchase $250,000,000 of gold to resume on a gold basis. We all recall the panic which occurred in this country and Germany in 1873, within six months after silver was demonetized by ours and the German government. A first-class panic is in order in Austria, the effects of which will be felt throughout the commercial world and which will add to the prevailing distress in the trade of the several nations. This will account for the suppression of the news by Jay Gould's orders, who feared the effect upon stocks in this market. Fortunately a new cable has been opened which is not under the control of the Gould syndicate. The Mackay-Bennett company has a chance to achieve higher repute in financial circles if it will give all the facts of the business situation abroad without suppression or distortion.

A New Mission Chapel.

A massive brick building at the corner of Broome street and Centre Market place has architectural interest enough to move the critical passer to inquiry. This elicits the facts that the building is a Presbyterian Mission Chapel and that the architect is Mr. Cady, the latter piece of information being a confirmation of the conjecture the critical passer would naturally form by his unaided lights.

The opportunity is rather unusually good for a building of this class. The apparent building is not a mere street front, but two visible sides, and the dimensions are ample, being about 75 feet on Broome street by about 110 on Centre Market place. The plan is peculiar, the axis of the chapel proper, the "auditorium," being the shorter of the two dimensions and the front in the lower story being given up to subordinate rooms.

A large tower occupies the corner. The front on Broome street has at the opposite corner a smaller tower-like flat-roofed structure to balance the larger mass, and between the two rises a broad low-gabled wall. In the first story is a large round-arched doorway at each end and in the central wall two pairs of round-arched windows. Over these in the second story are two large single windows with the "colonial" (or is it Queen Anne?) substitute for tracery—a wooden arch inside the opening and concentric with it, connected with the outer arch by straight pieces of wood. These are in the present case much more massive than mere sash-frames and count as rude traceries. Above these openings is an arcade of seven openings, the central one blind, and over these in the low pediment a small wheel window.

The flank of the building opposite the market shows at one end the other face of the main tower, and at the other a corresponding feature not carried above the eaves, and having a flat-arched doorway at its base and a pair of arched openings above. The wall between is divided into three bays, each of three arched openings below, and one large window above, such as has already been described. Under each of these large windows is a little arch with perforated plates of terra cotta filling the recess, apparently designed to facilitate ventilation. The wall is crowned by a brick cornice of small projection.

The large tower has six stages above the doorway, each a "practical" story, and the purpose of the tower itself seems to be entirely utilitarian. The several stories, all of the same height, look perhaps lower than they are, at all events they look very low; and all of them are lighted by groups of small round-headed windows virtually identical in design. The roof of the tower has a decided concave curve, which, except that this is four-sided, would recall the roof of a Chinese pagoda. So far as the general treatment suggests any historical style, it is the Italian Romanesque that the designer seems to have had in mind.

It seems plain that there was very little money to be had for the edifice, considering its dimensions, and that the architect was forced to content himself with the simplest possible method of so enclosing the space as to provide the requisite accommodation. This is by no means necessarily detrimental to the architecture. Indeed there are architects of whom it may be said that the more money they have to spend the more offensive structures do they perpetrate. Mr. Cady is far from being one of them. He has evidently taken the ground that since elaboration was denied him he must seek his effect in the forcible disposition of the masses. This has been successfully done, and the impression of his work is of a simplicity and massiveness entirely appropriate to its purpose and to the neighborhood in which it stands, the architectural character of which it relieves without contradicting. This is a consideration which does not appeal to our architects as often as it might and indeed the effect of "keeping" in the present case may be the accidental result of the commonness of the materials and the absence of decoration to which the architect was compelled. The material, indeed, helps greatly to give the building its character. It is a selected common brick, with the slight variations of color which are so dreadful in the eyes of the makers of pressed brick. But for a large building, where the effect is to be wrought by mass and not by elaboration, there can be no question that this material is far preferable to the more expensive article. Here the whole building virtually is made of it, though terra cotta, indistinguishable from the brick in color, is sparingly introduced in strings and copings. Sometimes one regrets that there was not money enough to supply such ornaments as would express and develop the structure. The larger openings are modelled so far as they can be by the use of retreating courses of brick work, but the springing is not marked, and the absence of emphasis here gives a look of uncertainty and indecision to an arch, especially to a round arch, which is always unsatisfactory. A light label to define the extrados is also very desirable. It is evident enough here that the architect is not blamable for omitting these things, helpful as they would have been to his work. There is nothing of which one can say that it might have been retrenched to add them. The tower is a very comfortable feature. The superposition of six stages of equal value and like treatment might be expected to produce a monotonous object, and so this tower would very likely be if it were isolated. In fact it goes very well with the building to which it is attached. In spite of the number of the openings it is kept quiet by the smallness of them and by the large spaces of plain wall. The perfectly straightforward expression of its utilitarian purpose makes it more agreeable than the commoner case of a tower which the designer has undertaken to treat monumentally, but has found himself forced to compromise by the introduction of practical features.

Our Prophetic Department.

REAL ESTATE OPERATOR—You have been discussing politics and general business a good deal lately, why not give us your views on real estate? The subject is large enough to be considered quite often, and it ought to be of special importance to the readers of THE RECORD AND GUIDE.

SIR ORACLE—You know I am rather committed to the theory that speculation moves in certain cycles; that business activity first shows itself in the stock market, but higher prices on "'Change" are often preceded by an improvement in price and a demand for iron. From stocks and iron the speculative fever reaches general business and all departments of trade are successively stimulated. The last interests affected are land and labor, which are the last to go up in price as well as the last to come down; and a curious phenomenon often occurs in the course of prices. After the speculative fever has spent its force in stocks and general business, and the Stock Exchange list as well as the price current show declining figures, the price of labor and land may still go up. Now this is what has occurred within the last couple of years. When Stock Exchange values were falling and while the iron industry was depressed and general trade profitless, the working people were striking for higher wages and the price of realty continued to advance. Our great apartment and office buildings were commenced after the reaction had begun in Wall street, and the foolish strikes of the masons and stonecutters ended only a short time since. But finally the liquidation must make itself felt in the price of labor and the value of land. In a general way I should say that realty, taking the country through, will fall in value, and owners must accept lower prices during the next two years than they could command during the last two years.

R. E. O.—But is it true that there has been any "boom" in real estate? There was undoubtedly a speculative flurry in stocks commencing in 1877 and continuing until the summer of 1881. But while there was an improvement in prices in real estate, comparing say 1878 with 1884, we certainly had no unusually high prices for vacant property in or near New York. I do not see a chance for much reaction when land proper without houses has not reached any unusual quotations.

SIR O.—There is force in what you say. It may be that the speculative cycle which commenced in 1878 has not yet culminated. We ought to have some such times as prevailed in real estate circles from 1868 to 1871 before the crash in real estate prices should come. As you justly say there has been no unnatural enhancement in values of unimproved lots and lands in the neighborhood of New York, and we ought to have such inflation before the end of a speculative era approaches. A strong investment demand for improved property, such as was active last spring, is an evidence of wholesome trade and should not be a forerunner of any unusual disaster. But when I spoke of speculative prices for realty I had in mind the West—more especially the Northwest—where undoubtedly a real estate fever prevailed of very great magnitude. It is this speculation which has collapsed and which is bringing distress to a wide range of country. I judge that our agriculturists, South and West, are in great straits to-day because of excessive land speculation. In no other way can you account for the great quantities of grain and cotton thrown upon the market at unremunerative prices. Such shipments of wheat, oats, barley, rye and cotton were never known so early in the season. The corn and hog movement now under way will be equally large, but prices are not profitable to the farmers. I fear that the money they receive will be spent in paying the interest upon their debts and for the barest necessaries of life. The trade of the East, I apprehend, will not be much benefited, for the agricultural classes will have no surplus to spend.

R. E. O.—How do you account for the absence of speculation in unimproved property in and near New York and other large cities of the East?

SIR O.—The large apartment houses have, I think, something to do with the weak speculation in lots. Were there no apartment and tenement houses, and were our up-town buildings to be the ordinary three or four-story brick and stone structures, there would have been a large demand for lots which are now unimproved. Buildings eight and ten stories high economize ground-room. However, I judge that we have seen an end of these great buildings for some years to come. It is small houses which are now in demand. With this change in building, I do not see why as many lots may not be used in the next two as in the last two years, even should less money be put in new structures.

R. E. O.—What is the outlook for this immediate neighborhood of unimproved property?

SIR O.—New York and Brooklyn are bound to grow whether the times be good or bad. Probably over $40,000,000 have been spent in new structures during the past year in this city. There may not be over $30,000,000 next year; but in the absence of large apartment houses about as much vacant land will be taken up. The principal building will, I think, be on the west side, in the annexed district and in Brooklyn. We ought to have a very lively movement in real estate in the region beyond the Harlem River; but the unaccountable lethargy of the Suburban Rapid Transit Company and the doubt about the new parks, due to the adoption of the constitutional amendment will, I fear, check improvement in that region. Matters look rather better in Brooklyn. The increased facilities furnished by the Bridge and the completion of one rapid transit road ought to help our sister city. I doubt, however, whether the number of new structures for the year 1885 will equal those of 1884 and 1883. The supply of houses in Brooklyn is more than equal to the demand, but cheap residence property, well located, ought to do fairly well for, as you know, this kind of realty is most in demand right here in New York to-day. I think the prospect in Brooklyn quite good.

R. E. O.—You were speaking of the West and Northwest, is there anything noteworthy in the situation in these outlying regions of the country?

SIR O.—There has been a collapse of the real estate speculation which was stimulated by the building of the Northern Pacific and other roads when they were being pushed out into the wilderness. As usual there was much indebtedness created, and Eastern money was employed to forward Western land buying. Pay day has come. The farmers cannot meet their obligations, and the holders of the mortgages will in many cases get the land, which will be worthless to them. Those Northwestern regions can grow wheat, oats, the other small grains and potatoes; but the summers are too short for corn and the winters too long for raising cattle. Owing to the distance from markets and the railway rates, growing the small grains is not a profitable business at present prices. I judge that the extreme Northwest will be regarded by emigrants as an undesirable region for years to come. Emigration will, I judge, from this time forth seek more central and Southern latitudes; but as THE RECORD AND GUIDE has pointed out there is a likelihood of a speculation in grazing lands. Meat does not fall off in price, free grazing land is getting very scarce, and the cattle ranch companies are quietly but certainly absorbing all the wild land available for pasture. The cattle country extends as far north as Montana. While therefore I expect to see an extreme depression in the wheat growing region along the line of the Northern Pacific, I would not be surprised to see what is vulgarly called a "boom" in the wild lands available for pasture. The Northern Pacific, Canada Pacific and Manitoba roads will all, I think, suffer from the unprofitableness of wheat culture in the extreme Northwest.

R. E. O.—Have you anything to say about the prospect of the stock market?

SIR O.—I am willing to stand by my previous forecasts. Before the election I said that a rally was in order in the stock market towards the end of November and that perhaps the better prices would extend into December; but I have time and again foreshadowed a weak market immediately before and during the holidays. The lower prices came a little sooner than I anticipated, but I expect to see a continuance of the depressed feeling and still lower quotations. Indeed I will not be surprised to see a panicky feeling in the coal and Southern stocks before there is a marked revival.

R. E. O.—How about the Grangers?

SIR O.—They or the trunk lines will lead the recovery when it comes. The time is not distant when the Grangers and all the Vanderbilts will be a purchase. All the roads which run through a corn country will do well during January for the farmers will be forced to send their produce to market, but the coalers will have to liquidate. There can be no revival of manufacturing industry until fuel is offered at the cheapest possible rate, which cannot be done in the face of a combination which keeps prices artificially high. Every interest in the country will be benefited by cheap coal.

R. E. O.—I am aware that you believe in a rise in stocks early next year. When should one buy in the meantime?

SIR O.—When matters look blackest and prices seem as if they could have no bottom. While there is no immediate prospect of general business being better, stocks will probably be quoted higher in January than they are likely to be in December. The Southern roads I fear will be under a cloud until a large cotton crop is grown. Two short crops in succession with low prices has pinched Southern producers. I do not think that the exposition at New Orleans will make much difference except to a few local roads.

The daily papers reported Professor Felix Adler as saying that the law should interfere to compel landlords to accept a low rate of interest for tenement-house property. Of course the reporters must have mistaken the drift of the remarks of the speaker, for a law of that kind would put a stop to the building of houses which would be less profitable than investments in other business enterprises. In a conversation with a representative of this paper Professor Adler suggests that we should follow the precedent set by Great Britain, where the law permits the sanitary inspectors to tear down unwholesome tenements and then authorizes the lending of municipal money to a private company to enable it to erect wholesome structures which can be rented at a low rate to very poor tenants. Of course this is State socialism in a modified form, but we doubt whether it would be received favorably in this country. The community has a right to protect itself against the evils arising from overcrowding and unsanitary conditions among the very poor, for these may become centres of infection and thus imperil the health of the municipality. But the direct intervention of the State to help erect buildings for the accommodation of the poor is quite another matter. When population becomes denser and the ranks of the impoverished laborers are largely recruited, we may be forced to resort to State aid on their behalf, but this will not be done in our time.

The federal government recently bought a site for a postoffice in Brooklyn. United States District-Attorney Tenney searched the title, for which he has brought in a bill of $7,485.14. His personal claim was $5,500; the clerk of Kings County was to get $1,079.50, and the Register $622.50. Attorney-General Brewster thought this bill excessive and cut it down to $5,000. It seems that the real work of the search was done by an assistant in the office when Mr. Tenney was in Europe. This case shows the defects of our land transfer laws. There is no reason in the nature of things why it should cost any more to convey the ownership of a piece of real estate than that of stocks or bonds in Wall street. Indeed, there is less reason. Real property is a tangible thing about which there can nor should be a mistake, while personal property is often mere good will and its physical existence is a matter more of faith than sight. Yet it is possible to purchase millions of property in Wall street in a few hours' time at a trifling expense, while a title to real estate cannot be passed in less than a month and always at an excessive cost. This is a vital matter with real estate owners and dealers and they must see that a reform is effected in regard to it this winter; at least so far as this city and Brooklyn are concerned.

The country has always had a great respect for Senator Bayard, for he is confessedly a man of exceptional ability and high character. If he is called to President Cleveland's cabinet he should be Secretary of State and not Secretary of the Treasury, which last position it is said he desires to fill. On monetary matters Senator Bayard is a doctrinaire. He is a devoted follower of August Belmont in this city, and is on record as a gold mono-metallist, an enemy of the greenbacks and a free-trader who objects to tariffs, except so far as they protect the industries of his native State. Abram S. Hewitt would be the right man in the right place as Secretary of the Treasury; even Samuel J. Randall would be better as a finance minister than Bayard.

Stocks are down and threaten to go lower, but there is reason to believe that a better feeling will obtain early next year. The prices of securities seem to be "dragging bottom." While the outlook for general business is bad enough the large crops of this year ought to advantage the railroads, which will carry them from this time until another crop is grown.

A Conversation on Cotton.

"Why," asked the writer of a well-known firm, "has cotton advanced so largely when every other product is selling for such very low figures? Is it not true that the warehouses of the world are stocked with unsalable cotton goods, and that the actual demand for raw cotton is light while the deliveries for the season are the largest ever known?"

"There are two causes at work," was the reply, "one natural and the other artificial, for the increased valuation of raw cotton. The natural cause is the fact that we have had two short crop years in succession. Now, however bad the times may be, the wearers of cotton goods must have them. The world may economize in its use of silks and other costly fabrics, but the times can never be so bad that there will not be a demand for cheap cottons. As consumption must continue, and as we have had two short crops, long-headed operators have engineered an advance, believing that the stock of cotton would be very low before the next crop is available. Then, I think, an artificial cause is operating. My impression is that some of the large manufacturers and capitalists who have advanced money on cotton goods have formed a syndicate to advance the price of raw cotton so as to create a speculative demand for staple goods, and this is what the advance in cotton has really done. Large operators with money, seeing goods relatively cheaper than raw cotton, have been purchasing them to such an extent as to advance the price and clear out some of the warehouses. The news reaches us from Georgia that prosperity has again visited the mills. Not only have the accumulated cotton goods disappeared, but the orders for new goods are so large that the mills cannot supply them. As this is a purely artificial activity, I expect to see a break in cotton during January or February. The general tendency of prices is downward and the time has certainly not come for any 'boom' in cotton or cotton goods."

Dr. Adler on Tenement House Reform.

The two great cities of the Eastern and Western Hemispheres have recently been awakened to the miserable condition of the poor in their midst. Last winter a publication entitled "The Bitter Cry of Outcast London" stirred the heart of England to its very depths. The great evi- complained of is the squalid and unsanitary condition of the dwellings in which the poor are forced to live. During the last session of the Legislature a commission was appointed to inquire into the character and condition of tenements, lodging houses and cellars in New York city. The gentlemen comprising the commission were as follows: Alexander Shaler, Joseph W. Drexel, S. O. Vanderpoel, Felix Adler, Oswald Ottendorfer, Morris Moreau, Anthony Reichardt, Joseph J. O'Donohue, Abbot Hegeman, Charles F. Wingate and William P. Esterbrook. The matter has been vigorously taken up by Prof. Adler, who may be said to be the pioneer of the movement, and his Chickering Hall lectures are now engaging public attention. In an interview with a representative of THE RECORD AND GUIDE Dr. Adler said:

"I wish to call special attention to the Torrens and Cross acts passed by the British Parliament, and to point out that we shall have to come to similar legislation in the United States. Philanthropists may endeavor to improve a single unsanitary house here and there, but it requires more than individual effort to cope with such an important problem. One great difficulty to be met with is that the owners of unsanitary property refuse to sell at reasonable figures, for the worst property is comparatively the most profitable. Another difficulty is that whole neighborhoods are in an unsanitary condition. The Torrens act provides among other things that if a house is not itself in an unsanitary condition, but is so placed as to make neighboring houses unsanitary, it may be torn down by the authorities. The Cross act provides that whole blocks of houses may be purchased and demolished by the authorities, and makes it obligatory on the latter to erect or cause to be erected in their stead houses of a better character, that shall have good light, ventilation, plumbing, and so forth. We need a law compelling the owners of unsanitary houses if they will not repair them to sell them. Now the only feasible way in which the plague spots of New York can be removed is by purchase. I do not believe that any Board of Health would have the power, even if they had the will, to compel the owners of such houses to undertake the costly repairs that would be necessary to put them in proper condition. The plumbing may be amended and the yards repaved, but when it comes to considerable internal changes, such as are necessary to give good light and air to the inner bedrooms, I don't think the health authorities will ever be able to enforce them. It has been shown that the new sanitary legislation in regard to the construction of tenement houses has only been of partial benefit. In the new houses now being erected the law requires a much higher sanitary standard than it ever did before. The consequence is, that having to come up to the new standard, the cost of buildings is greater and rents are consequently higher, so that the indirect result of the new law has been, as it were, to legislate the poor out of the better houses, or rather to keep them out, owing to the rents being beyond their capacity to pay. Therefore I say that new sanitary laws alone will not avail. What I propose is that a private building company shall be formed, which shall consist of the most trusted citizens. This company shall accumulate a fund of say $500,000 as a guarantee of their interest in the matter, and they shall then be supplied with a large loan, either by the city or State, for the purpose of buying up old tenement houses and rebuilding better ones in their stead. I make this proposition for the following reasons: Experience has shown that private enterprise never accumulates sufficient capital to meet so large a problem as this; hence we must have a loan from the State. On the other hand, experience has also shown that large financial undertakings, when administered by public officials, are apt to become jobs, and that much of the money so appropriated for public uses is squandered. It seems wisest, therefore, to combine private with State action, because the State alone can loan large enough for the purpose; while on the other hand the funds would probably be best administered by private citizens of standing in the community. If any one thinks this cannot be done I would point to England, where it has been done. The trustees of the Peabody fund administer a large fund of their own, but they also receive loans from the Public Loan Commissioners to extend their operations."

Mr. John H. Sherwood is of the impression that there is no way to put a stop to the tide of business traffic on Fifth avenue, north of Fifty-ninth street. The vans and carts on each side below Fifty-ninth street will naturally take the line of Fifth avenue to the upper part of the city. This is why he thinks that people who want quiet homes will prefer to live on Sixth and Seventh avenues above the Park, which will be free from traffic, except such as is associated with riding for health or pleasure. He would not object to a street railway on Sixth and Seventh avenues, for he does not think they have ever harmed property, but it will be many years before a railway will pay on those boulevards. But people who live on the line of Fifth avenue must make up their minds that the business traffic cannot be stopped in front of their houses. The region above the Central Park and between Morningside and Mount Morris will, Mr. Sherwood believes, be the scene of great improvement within a very few years. It is exceptionally healthful, will be free from business establishments of all kinds, except perhaps along the line of One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street and will be regarded as a very desirable locale for families who wish to lead a quiet and retired home life.

Home Decorative Notes.

—There is rather a tendency in the present day to make both bedrooms and boudoirs gloomy, and we do not sufficiently consider the necessity of brightening up the dull nooks and corners which will creep into all dwellings. One of the prettiest and simplest bedrooms has its walls covered with paper of the tenderest tint of green; the cretonne draperies are of a creamy-white ground, with bunches of lilacs powdered on them, and the carpet of a soft green has a narrow border with bouquets of lilacs at each corner; the tiles for the fire-place and toilet articles are all decorated with the same flower.

—Smokers' sets in brass show novelties in the way of a brass standard three feet high, with ash tray, tobacco, cigar and match boxes sunken in the brass, these may be found also in wood, and make elegant little tables which are convenient and take up little room.

—Banjo cases are now elaborately embroidered, the monogram is in gold or silver thread on a dark broadcloth background.

—As a suggestion for wedding gifts we may mention five o'clock tea sets, a complete outfit; mahogany table, embroidered cloth and china service is sometimes given.

—A pretty way to serve lobsters is to line small colored glass dishes with lettuce leaves, then put the lobster into the dishes and place one beside each plate, make a rich mayonnaise dressing, and allow each person to help him or herself to it; in this manner each individual taste may be gratified.

—A lovely floral device is a fan composed of ivy and lily-of-the-valley fringes around the edge; the centre is of roses and delicate ferns, and the sticks are formed of tiny pink rosebuds.

—Cedar wood fires are an expensive luxury, but most delicious in their fragrance.

—The pretty little spirit lamps are quite an addition to a handsome writing-desk.

—The variety of screens is endless and their rich beauty fabulous; the foreground of a large plush screen painted in oils is sown and bunched with primroses, violets and branching ferny feathers; here and there is a rambling blackberry vine and buttercups; birds and butterflies hover over all; the sky is a soft pearly opal blue with a few drifting fleecy clouds.

—Champagne glasses are in heavy cut glass, rather slender and as high as an ordinary tumbler.

—An umbrella stand in brass, in the shape of a half open umbrella, in bas relief, is very artistic.

—Wall papers are made so artistically beautiful that they form no insignificant part in the decoration of a room, for walls the latest designs are those in India patterns with carved wood effects, for the decoration of a drawing-room the fine heavy paper is put on to the same height as though it were intended to use a frieze and the wall is then frescoed in colors to harmonize with those in the paper; another beautiful device is to take silk and have it decorated in landscape embroidery and use that as a frieze. Geo. Allen, No. 500 West Forty-second street, introduces many beautiful effects in wall hangings and interior decorations.

—At the Lilliputian Bazaar, 60 West Twenty-third street, both amusement and instruction are to be found in the quantities of goods which are displayed, toys of all kinds, steam engines, tool chests, dolls, furniture, houses and kitchens, rocking horses the size of a Shetland pony covered with a real bay horse's skin, and having a saddle, full trimmings and bridle. A panoramic history of the United States Capitol at Washington is valuable as an educator, the panorama is moved by turning the small dome on the top of the central building; a brief history of the building and a poetical history and portraits of all the Presidents from Washington to Arthur accompany each box.

—Small thermometers are set in easel palettes of cardinal and other colored plush, exquisitely embroidered in chenille and velours in floral designs.

—A new fancy in folding-beds comes in the form of an apparently ornamental mantel.

—Bohemian glasses are lovelier than ever; a new variety shows opaline tints and flushings in pink and opal, light yellow, green and opal.

—A very handsome mural ornament is a large quiver with bow and arrow in gold and silver bronzes; filled with growing ferns it is exquisite.

—The gift season will soon be upon us, and the all-important question is, what shall we purchase? Present making to be worth anything should be as individual as possible and the gift represent the sympathy existing between the giver and the receiver, but as time is precious we must glance quickly about; a half hour at Stern Bros., of 24 West Twenty-third street, may conquer some of our difficulties and gratify the taste and desire of some few loved ones; for the lovers of ceramic art here may be found some very fine specimens of Hungarian pottery in a great variety of odd shapes, vases, pitchers and jugs; this ware is constantly sought for and the widely differing varieties are each perfect studies; among the most beautiful specimens of foreign art exhibited are several porcelain paintings in very rich brass frames; the pictures are copies of famous paintings in European galleries. The display of Vienna goods comprises numberless conceits in brass, steel, silver and bronze; inkstands in all sorts of odd forms, paper weights, racks, ash receivers, smokers' sets, etc.; an odd claret jug is of ruby glass in the shape of a parrot, with gold bronze head and wings.

Wages and Production.

Editor RECORD AND GUIDE:

In speaking of the present depression in business the newspapers generally speak hopefully of the future, pointing out the undiminished resources of the country and the extremely low prices which prevail for all the products of labor as well as for labor itself. This state of affairs they assert combines all the elements of prosperity, and thereupon they found their rosy prophecies.

It does not seem to occur to most people who express opinions on economical questions that as the price of commodities becomes less the price of labor ought to become greater. One is necessarily measured in terms of the other, so that when the products of labor are cheap, measured in terms of labor, the labor itself, measured by its product, ought to be dear. In the same way when gold is used as a measure of the value of other commodities, when for any reason a certain amount of gold can be exchanged for more commodities than before, we can say either that commodities are cheaper or that gold is dearer. Their values, as well as the values of labor and its products, are relative and not absolute.

Thus, if a man with no tools but the awl, the knife and the waxed-end can produce in one day one pair of shoes, and by the aid of machinery he can produce fifty pairs in the same time, his wages will be in the one case one pair and in the other fifty pairs of shoes, if he can use so many and desires to retain them. Should he wish to exchange them for the product of the labor of someone else he will still be able to obtain in the latter case fifty times as much for the same amount of labor, or, what comes to the same thing, he can make as good a living as before with one-fiftieth of the labor.

When by the progress of invention the whole community is able to produce fifty times as much as it could before we ought to find a condition of very great ease and comfort; each one ought to be able to enjoy not, of course, fifty loaves of bread and fifty pairs of shoes where he formerly had but one, but fifty times as much of the products of labor in general, of the comforts and graces of life which demand gratification as soon as merely animal wants are satisfied.

As a matter of fact, however, we find now that while the products of labor are very cheap, which is truly said to be advantageous to the common welfare and individual benefit, the labor that produces so much and so easily is not rewarded in proportion to what it produces, does not receive a proportionately increased return for its vastly increased power of production, but is, like its product, cheap, which it is a great mistake to suppose is advantageous to either community or individual.

Labor and commodities produced by labor are complimentary; each is measured by the other. When commodities are high labor is low, and when commodities are low, as they now are, labor ought to be high. The mere fact that it is not is sufficient to show us that something is radically wrong.

I take no note of the claims of capital, the interest on the machinery that gives the increased power of production in modern times, because capital itself is produced by labor, the machines must be built by somebody, and when the product of capital and labor jointly is large the reward of both ought to be large and the equitable allotment between them would be inevitable. Capital itself, however, as well as labor is now cheap, the reward of capital does not increase with the amount of its product any more than does that of labor. Evidently there is something wrong. What is it?

RIENZI.

REMARKS.—Our correspondent asks a conundrum which all the nations of the earth will be trying to solve for the coming century. There clearly is something wrong when the people who do the hard work of the world are so poorly compensated and who are injured in the end by every invention and improvement in the industrial arts. For, while it is true that at first invention increases the employment and rewards of labor in the particular field affected eventually the machinery competes with and reduces the compensation of labor. English industry profited when that country had a monopoly of all the markets outside of its shores, but when all nations use the same machinery and have the same mechanical advantages the producing classes will everywhere suffer from the excess of production. Indeed, this is one of the troubles of the world of business to-day. There are more goods than there are people to buy them or perhaps it would be more correct to say that there is too little money in the world to purchase the manufactures offered.

But surely "Rienzi" is little in saying that the workman who makes the shoes should be paid fifty times as much for fifty pairs of shoes as he received for one pair before the old regime when machinery was unknown. The leather surely is an item worth considering, also the invested capital and the award to the inventor. It would be a splendid thing for the community if the laboring which is also the great consuming class was always in receipt of high wages. And yet we know that the incomes of the laboring classes are being reduced month after month and that there is no present prospect of any betterment of their condition.

Editor RECORD AND GUIDE:

Your article on "Opportunities Lost" is very good; but it seems to me you have left out of consideration the very best site of all, I mean the block bounded by William street, Frankfort street, Printing House Square, shall I call it, and the Bridge. Think of it and you will come to the inevitable conclusion that it is the finest site in the world for a magnificent building. I own a gore there, but that does not alter the facts.

R. T. B. E.

REMARKS.—We did not profess to mention all the sites that should have been improved, and as the Bridge is a comparatively recent work the capitalists who invested on Frankfort street and Tryon row property from twenty to fifty years ago could not very well be taken to account for not being prophets. We have repeatedly pointed out the great enhancement in values which must follow the pouring of a vast Brooklyn population upon the locality referred to by our correspondent. But will not the necessities of the Bridge itself lead to the taking of the property at the corner of Frankfort street to accommodate the traffic and travel which is certain to grow year after year?

EDITOR.

Investing on the West Side.

A reporter of THE RECORD AND GUIDE met Mr. Isidor Cohnfeld at the office of V. K. Stevenson & Co., on Thursday last. Concerning his purchase for $50,900 at the Exchange on December 18th Mr. Cohnfeld said: The plot has a frontage on Riverside Drive, 225 feet north of One Hundred and Sixteenth street, of 172 feet, embracing about twelve lots, and adjoins the plot I bought last June from P. Callaghan, the parcels together at that spot having a frontage of 289 feet. There is, he added, no plot on Riverside Park superior to this one, inasmuch as it commands a view up and down the drive and river, the horseback ride (the new Rotten Row), also the new flower beds that are being put in, and which will be completed next summer, under the management of Park Commissioners Crimmins and Viele. Mr. Cohnfeld owns the large parcel of lots adjacent to the new residence of George A. Noakes, and was the purchaser of about three acres of land on Central Park West (Eighth avenue) and One Hundred and Third street at the memorable sale of the estate of the late ex Governor E. D. Morgan. A portion of this land he sold to the Astor Hospital. It seems that Mr. Cohnfeld is gradually investing his large surplus income in west side property for cash, and the transfers for several years past show that Messrs. Astor, Higgins, Eno and Cohnfeld have been four of the largest buyers of west side lots. The Riverside Drive is Mr. Cohnfeld's favorite investment spot, as well as his favorite drive behind the famous stallions, Maxey Cobb and Neta Medium.

The Stockholder denies that it has ever been misled by points given by Jay Gould, but certainly that paper carried more weight before its editor announced his intimate relations with the aforesaid J. G. We always have read the Stockholder with interest because it has honestly tried to tell the truth about the market. Other financial papers have endevored to make out a case either for or against prices, which is not what traders want. They care nothing for a bull or a bear theory and have no pride of opinion, and they promptly lose confidence in a journal which is always on one or the other side of the market. "How can I make money out of the street?" is the thought uppermost in the mind of a dealer in securities. Now a paper may be right in its general theories but altogether wrong in its comments upon the fluctuations of the market. The course of prices since the summer of 1881 has been generally downward and the sensible bears on values have made the most money; but wise operators are not always on one side of the market. They wish to take advantage of its fluctuations up and down and hence the value of papers like THE RECORD AND GUIDE and the Stockholder, which have no object but to tell the truth and inform the judgments of those who deal on our exchanges.

The Stockholder shows no little courage in championing Jay Gould. It says that THE RECORD AND GUIDE is mistaken in calling him "an able-bodied financial liar," and adds:

"We have found him one of the squarest, perhaps the very squarest, men whose operations are so large as to at times control the market. That isn't a popular thing to say, and for that reason, perhaps, we take some satisfaction in saying it. He isn't a man who has something of value to communicate every day. We do not recall that he has said or done anything for three months that has been of any value to the paper. But two or three times a year, perhaps, he speaks, and when he declares his position on the market we believe what he says, and simply because at no time has he deceived us. Of course when he says 'the market is looking well, stocks are cheap,' that doesn't mean anything. But when he says 'I'm going into a movement to advance prices, I'm going to take special charge of Western Union, Union Pacific, Missouri Pacific,' etc., that's business. A good many people think Mr. Gould a very bad man and a great liar merely because he doesn't tell them the course of the market for the next six months. It is as impossible for him to satisfy them as it would be to furnish them with common sense. Newspaper men who abuse him the year around, think that they may call at his office, that a great fuss should be made over them and all the office secrets be exposed to their view. That isn't the kind of a man Mr. Gould is."

This is a new estimate of Jay Gould's veracity and honesty, but the Stockholder knows very well that it is held by very few people. We may add that its estimate of Deacon White as that of a straightforward, honest operator is not shared by those who are aware of his past relations with George R. Roberts and the various schemes floated upon this market during the mining excitement. The history of Hukill, Robinson, Chrysolite, the State Line mines and others would not, if told, advantage the deacon in a court of law or at the bar of public opinion; unless, indeed, which may be the case, that common rumor is an atrocious liar. To clear the reputation of these two Wall street notabilities the Stockholder will find a more difficult task than it would be to repeat the twelve labors of Hercules.

"The petroleum situation looks bullish," said a member of an oil shipping house, "because for a month or six weeks there are not any new wells to be opened. The stock of crude oil on hand is only about the average, but the amount of kerosene or refined oil in sight is simply enormous. The manufacturers of illuminating oil have over-produced, and the exporters have over-exported. Not only is there a vast quantity of kerosene in the country, but large cargoes can be found in every oil consuming port in the world. The shippers of oil to Asia and Europe have suffered heavy losses because they have looked for an advance in price, which has so far not come. Were the surplus of refined oil worked off in a short time I would expect to see crude oil probably advance to a dollar or more a barrel."

A spirited contest took place at the St. Patrick's Cathedral fair, Mott street, for a gold-headed cane, to be presented to "the most popular man." After a lively canvass the cane was voted to John Callahan, the well-known hatter, who is a large owner of real estate.

The Cause of Low Prices.

We sometimes get a new idea started from the other side of the Atlantic, but more often old ones refurbished up and put forward as new, that have long been laid on the shelf in Europe as rusty and of no further use. Everybody is endeavoring to account for the present depression in trade, and a sort of controversy is going on between two American papers of repute touching this very subject. The Northwestern Lumberman, a Chicago paper, rather takes to task THE RECORD AND GUIDE, which is published at New York, for maintaining that the present dullness of trade is caused by a lack of sufficient currency, and a natural reluctance of manufacturers to produce goods on a falling market. Then it goes on to say:

"Well, what is the reason there is a falling market? Let us get at the beginning of the matter. First, there was a drop in iron, as a result of producing too much for the market. Coal followed suit, then woolen, cotton, lumber and grain. The iron makers overdid the thing, because a boom in railroad construction was too much for them. They became excited, and gave too much head to their team. The momentum carried them too far. Just so it was with every industry. All were overdone. There has never been any lack of money to do the business with, but an over-feeding of the markets has resulted in plethora and loss of appetite."

To this THE RECORD AND GUIDE rejoins that trade depression extends alike to the four quarters of the globe, and that no civilized country is exempt from it, and it asserts that "the produce of human labor, nearly everything dealt in by merchants, or produced by manufacturers, is cheaper than at any time during the past century." This, of course, is no answer to the argument of the other paper. But it glances over the possible causes of disturbing the equilibrium of trade all round the world, and comes to the conclusion that the secret lies in the demonetization of silver, whereby the circulating medium of the great commercial countries is too limited to answer fully to the requirements of trade, which therefore languishes for the want of it. He asserts, without the production of any statistics, that "the supply of gold has been falling off, for a decade at a time, when there was a prodigious development of modern industry and commerce. This is the natural cause of the depression." Without endorsing this particular view of our contemporary, it may be admitted that the increase of the currency is a legitimate cause of promoting trade; but it is not easy to see that by making silver a legal tender to any amount in the same way as gold the general depression of trade would obtain any substantial relief. Every man who can get hold of silver, either in coin or ingots, can realize its value in gold, and we are not aware that any silver mines are neglected for fear the world should have too much of that valuable metal. The fortunate pioneer, let us imagine, has just what he stands up in and the means of procuring a few tools to begin with, which, perhaps, he obtains out of the proceeds of his first nugget. Trade has not benefited much by him heretofore, as his expenditure was probably on the narrowest scale of decent poverty. But with his first handful of golddust he discovers that he wants a new Sunday coat, and the rest of his habiliments no less require replenishing. His ideas expand with his success. His wife and his children, probably not far away, must be reclothed from head to foot, and the stores in the nearest village are ransacked for the best that money can buy. But such fine things in a hut or a mean cottage become an intolerable incongruity, and he, by skill and handiwork, becomes possessed in a brief while of sufficient to think of building himself a better habitation, and everything about him soon furnishes evidence of his altered circumstances; not, perhaps, stopping short of a carriage and horses, of which there were hundreds of examples in the early days of San Francisco. When the gold fever broke out in Australia in 1851-2 trade in England, and in America too, became greatly inflated, but we can hardly accept the conclusion the writer in THE RECORD AND GUIDE draws from these spurts. He says, speaking of former times, "Whenever there were great gold and silver discoveries, industry was healthily stimulated, and the bulk of the population of every country enjoyed the advantage of good times." In the case of our own colony it may be remarked that in less than three years from the time of the discovery of the Ballarat gold field, British goods of various kinds were such a drug in Melbourne that there was no sale for them, consignees sometimes refused to pay the freight on them, and it was even asserted that boots and shoes were absolutely reshipped back again to England. At all events it was well known that many shippers never realized the value of the advance they had obtained on their bills of lading at home. In the meantime new manufactories had been set up. Ironworks, cotton mills, every description of wares and clothing were produced in unusual profusion, and it may safely be said for every cargo really wanted in the colony three were sent out. Granted that a great trade was started by these gold discoveries, it is by no means clear that throughout "the population of every country, industry was healthily stimulated" thereby. A great number of manufactories were soon found to be superfluous, and in order to keep them going a degree of competition arose which has in hundreds of cases reduced profits below the requirements of the establishment, till ruin stared them in the face. It is true a great colony arose out of it in Australia, but it was already a thriving portion of the British empire before the thought of gold-digging sprung up amongst the settlers. And nothing seems more certain than that, though gold continues to flow from those regions, its effect on the industries of the world is no longer appreciable. The cause of the general depression of prices may be ascribed with greater likelihood to the unlimited productive power of steam as applied to machinery, for superseding human labor, which is pervading every trade and becoming more and more universal with each succeeding year. It has been asserted that by its use one-half the iron works of England, kept in full employment, would supply all the world with that commodity in profusion, without the need of any other country producing a single bar. And in some trades vast engines are at work, requiring only to be attended by two or three men, that do the work of a thousand. In no country is this more conspicuous than in America, where mighty sawmills turn out their millions of feet of deals and boards per week, till we doubt the power of almost any conceivable demand to keep pace with them. When we consider that all the gold and silver in the world is nothing to the amount of paper money that passes into circulation for the convenience of trade in the shape of bills, bonds, shares, bank notes, &c., which are taken in exchange for commodities and property of one kind or another, the discovery of a new gold or silver mine can only be regarded as a spasmodic benefit to trade. It ushers into existence a great number of new establishments which are not wanted, and soon become a burden. It is like a high spring tide which is sure to ebb out all the farther for the extraordinary rise to which it had attained. The friendly controversy between our American contemporaries aforesaid amounts merely to this, the Northwestern Lumberman would adjust the balance of trade by taking some of the merchandise out of the heavier scale, and THE RECORD AND GUIDE would rather add more bullion to the lighter one. But where is the latter to come from?—London (England) Timber Trades Journal.

Premonitions of a Colonial Policy.

The acquisition of colonial possessions has never as a historical fact commended itself as a policy to the support either of the statesmen to whose hands the moulding or formation of this government was committed, or of those of a later period. Apart from the popular spasm for the annexation of Cuba, a quarter of a century since, followed by certain irregular negotiations under the administration of Gen. Grant for the acquisition of St. Thomas, and a diplomatic aspiration at about the same time for obtaining control of the Samana Bay, and an occasional covetous look at Hawaii, there is little or nothing in diplomatic or political records to show that foreign territorial acquisitions of this character were in harmony with American aspirations or American ambition. We could annex the lands of our near-by neighbors without stint or limit, as witness the annexation of Texas and other Mexican territory, and the purchase of Alaska from Russia; but while thus enlarging our borders by the absorption of conterminous territory, we have scrupulously abstained from appropriations or acquisitions elsewhere. In all this we have been following the "traditions of the fathers;" but as the world moves and the advance of civilization acquires new momentum under the wonderful applications of modern science, along with a corresponding expansion of commercial adventure, the spirit of the age would seem to be insensibly breaking away in spite of ourselves from those traditions, as tending to unduly restrain the impulses of a great people naturally ambitious to occupy a commanding position among the family of nations. The stay-at-home and mind-your-own-business precepts which were applicable to three millions of people, cooped up in the original thirteen States, it is felt are ill-adapted to fifty millions, with thirty-eight States and a territory extending from ocean to ocean. And so the "ships, colonies and commerce" dream of Napoleon, in planning the future greatness of France, is in some sense become the American dream. We have lost our "ships," but we expect some day to get them back. The "commerce" we are endeavoring to extend by reaching out our hands to such countries as will make reciprocity treaties with us—an endeavor, however, which can lead to results comparatively unsatisfactory to those which must follow anon an intelligent and statesmanly revision of our existing tariff. As to "colonies" it is surprising what progress we have been making, quietly, in a modest way, during the few years past. The active interest manifested by this government in the diplomatic arrangements for defining the rights and privileges of the International African Association, in the Congo Valley, for example, is not only a manifestation of a lively interest in the future commercial importance of the Dark Continent, but in spirit a signal departure from our foreign policy in such cases. The President, in his message the other day, referred to the "valuable premises" which the United States already possessed at Tangier, and to a similar acquisition from the government of Siam, Japan has agreed to concede to us some real estate at Tokio, which may become the nucleus of an American settlement there; while there are intimations not less distinct that advantages of the same kind may be, with a little diplomatic management, obtained from China and Persia. In discussing the subject the President went as far as to speak of the "due assertion of our territorial rights in those countries." This is a novel phrase in our official literature, but it is significant as showing a new drift of thought on the part of our publicists and statesmen, if not a positive new departure from the traditional grooves in which our foreign policy has heretofore run. We gladly accept it, as far as it goes, as possibly the manifestation of latent suspicion that, after all, we cannot as a nation either afford, from a commercial or political standpoint to fence ourselves in from the rest of mankind or maintain a cynical indifference to the course of affairs in the great world beyond our geographical limits. The "universal Yankee nation" deserves to be something better than a 4th of July figure of speech, and if Uncle Sam, by peaceful processes, is to have a colonial progeny in the future who does not perceive that his universality as a matter of fact will be inevitable?—Commercial Bulletin.

The New Markets of the World.

The participation of the United States in the Congo International Conference, and the appointment of a special commissioner to the Congo country, referred to in Bradstreet's of September 6, are events of more than passing interest. They indicate a change of policy, and open up grave questions which may tax the highest order of American statesmanship to elucidate and shape for the public good. Indeed, this policy may be regarded as an entrance into the European circle by the United States, unless it be dropped in deference to the policy of national isolation based upon the Monroe doctrine, which was in fact suggested by Mr. Canning, the brilliant English minister, to check the aggressive foreign policy of the great European monarchies. It defeated the Holy Alliance, but it has stranded American commerce high and dry on a lee shore during an ebb tide of trade. Furthermore, adhesion to the Monroe doctrine narrowed the range of questions which American statesmen could handle, and the consequence is that our public men of this day are far less fully equipped for entering upon the broad plane of international politics than were the founders of the republic or their immediate successors. The latter were called upon to grapple with fundamental questions of constitutional government and to establish political and commercial relations with the world at large. Since the war of 1812 there have been few questions of international debate except those arising out of England's attitude during the war of secession, but that controversy with Great Britain was conducted by men of a past generation. The pregnant sign, therefore, of a departure from established usage by our government in this Congo affair suggests considerations of policy which no change of administration should be permitted to obscure or reverse. The end to be kept steadily in view is to create new markets for American products in the new countries of the earth. The markets of Europe are practically closed against us for two reasons—fiscal and economic. Our example is being followed in the matter of a "protective tariff" to an extent which in time will amount to an embargo upon American trade; but apart from this artificial barrier there is the economic one of cheap production which legislation cannot touch and which necessarily regulates prices. This last consideration also shuts us out of the Asiatic and South and Central American markets and restricts our Australian trade to special products mainly. We must therefore look to the new countries which European enterprise is opening for consuming markets, and it is therefore the duty of our government to protest against any compact or agreement between the powers of Europe which would give special trading advantages to themselves. This country cannot recognize on the part of any power a greater claim to territorial possessions or commercial and trading privileges in Central Africa than the United States possesses. Indeed, for very obvious reasons the United States should have a controlling voice in shaping the future of equatorial Africa, from which so large a percentage of its labor population has been drawn. But England and Portugal have already established by treaty certain exclusive rights on the lower Congo, while the French agent has been elbowing Stanley and the International African Association out of commanding positions on the line of the upper Congo. Germany has likewise come to an understanding with England as to trading privileges on the Congo and Niger, leaving the execution of the convention to England. At the various African factories or colonies established by Germany of late, north and south of Congo, the policy of exclusive trading will certainly be enforced, and as there is still a good deal of unoccupied territory along the West African coast, which lies well for American trade, unless our government acts promptly and with firmness, we may find ourselves cut off from a commercial field which promises well for the future. Of course we may establish our right to participate within the sphere of the International African Association's operations, but that is a very limited field and does not begin to cover anything like the available ground. It will commit the Washington government, however, to an African policy, and that in itself is a great deal. In the Franco Chinese question and the Madagascar affair the American people are likewise directly interested. France has established a practical monopoly of trade in Madagascar by means of partial blockade and arbitrary quarantine, giving exclusive trading facilities to French merchants. A similar result is certain to follow in Formosa and the Indo-

Malay peninsula unless French aggression be checked by the moral force of American public opinion. Madagascar was opening a promising American trade, but French aggression and cupidity have thrown back that country half a century and ruined what trade existed. It is similar in degree in Tonquin and Formosa. The interests of American trade and manufacture suggest the preservation of these and other new markets of the world against the piracy of organized governments which resort to force to establish exclusive commercial advantages. England is extending her dominion in the south and west Pacific, and will probably come to an understanding with Germany which would secure the support of that empire to her annexation policy. All the time, however, the field for American enterprise is receding from view, and nothing can check this tendency but a vigorous and intelligent declaration of African policy on the part of the United States.—Communication to Bradstreet's.

The Bankruptcy Bill.

The bankrupt bill before the House of Representatives is the bill that was passed by the Senate last winter. It had previously been known as the Lowell bill, taking its name from its chief framer, a Massachusetts man. Under its provisions a bankrupt or his creditors can institute proceedings in every Congressional district instead of going to the seat of the United States district court, which was necessary under the old law, and was in many cases a great hardship. The commissioner of bankruptcy, before whom the proceedings may be begun, has all the powers of a master in chancery. His compensation is fixed at $2,000 a year, but may be increased by order of the court not to exceed $3,000. There is to be a supervisor for every State, whose business it is to inspect the commissioners' offices and to instruct the clerks, trustees and other persons engaged in administering the law; his compensation is also limited to $3,000 a year. The fees provided are $50 for the application, 1 per cent. of the full amount realized on the assets, and one-half of 1 per cent. on any composition of indebtedness. As all these fees are paid into court to be transferred to the United States treasury, they offer the officers no inducement for partiality or delay. Speedy liquidation is also facilitated by giving the United States Circuit Court final jurisdiction of all questions of law. The exemptions are confined to the necessary family wearing apparel and such property as is exempt from attachment under United States and State laws. Undoubtedly the pending bill is a great improvement over the old law, which was simply an act to benefit lawyers and officials at the expense of creditors. So great were the abuses under the old law that a man able to pay seventy-five cents on the dollar could compromise for twenty-five or thirty-three cents, because it was known the ring of receivers and other court officials would not let more than a small percentage of the assets slip through their fingers. The public finally got tired of the grand swindle and the law was repealed, leaving so obnoxious a taste behind that the people have not yet brought themselves up to a clear and emphatic demand for another law. Fair play would give a man who had been unfortunate in business another opportunity to win a competence; and if a wholly just and simple measure could be devised no doubt it would receive the sanction of all fair-minded men, no matter whether they live in Massachusetts or Texas. But it should be clear that the act is as simple and just and economical as the business of the country admits of, before it is made law. It should secure the best possible results for both creditor and debtor, and it should show no favor to the professional or official class. The object of such a law is not fees or delay, or emoluments of any kind. In the old law the true object of a bankrupt law was wholly lost sight of in the eagerness to enlarge the official class and to fill the pockets of the lawyers who handled bankruptcy cases. The law now before the House should be carefully scrutinized before passage. The country outside of the Eastern cities is not vociferously demanding its passage. On the face of the bill it seems to render it easy to turn a plain debt and plain assets into an intricate and long-winded judicial proceeding; for it gives any party a right to carry a given case to the Circuit Court of the United States. Fortunately no appeal is allowed to the United States Supreme Court. It may be the very best bill that can be devised; but the House should not pass it until all unnecessary intricacies are thrown out of it, until provisions are inserted bringing the cost of proceedings to the lowest possible point, and it is made clear that both creditor and debtor would fair better than they now do under State laws. The people of Georgia want no repetition of the rascalities of the old law, and really no new law unless it is the very embodiment of justice and simplicity and economy in the adjustment of assets and liabilities.—Atlanta Constitution.

Our Natural Market.

In the year 1826, the republics of South America made a proposition to the United States to deliberate with them upon measures for common advantage, at a congress to be held at Panama. This led to serious opposition on the part of the South, for the reason that, as some of the South American republics had recognized the equality of the negro by admitting him to citizenship, it was regarded an indirect way of recognizing negroes as citizens. But that cause no longer exists as a bar to the sort of commercial congress proposed by the South Americans nearly sixty years ago. If the American International Commission, now visiting these Southern countries, should be succeeded by an International Congress of the republics on the American continent, there is reason to believe it would result in a commercial alliance of mutual advantage. We are separated from the South American republic by the Gulf of Mexico, with its archipelago, the Caribbean Sea, which the late Lieutenant Maury styled "our Mediterranean," laid out by nature on a scale for commerce far more grand than its type in the old world; for the countries in Africa, Asia and Europe which comprise the river basins of the Mediterranean are but little more than one-fourth the size of those which are drained by this sea on our southern borders. "Here, upon this central sea," wrote Maury, "nature has, with lavish hand, grouped and arranged in juxtaposition all those physical circumstances which make nations truly great. Here she has placed in close proximity the natural outlets of her grandest river basins. With unheard of powers of production, these valleys range through all the producing latitudes of the earth, embracing every agricultural climate under the sun. Upon this sea perpetual summer reigns, and upon its shores climate is piled upon climate, production upon production, in luxuriance and profusion. With this American sea between two hemispheres, and in the lap of both, nature has endowed it with commercial resources and privileges of infinite variety. It is owing to the diversity of climate and production afforded by the States of this Union and to the facilities of intercourse with them that the trade of a single State, as Massachusetts, with the rest, exceeds in value the entire foreign commerce of the whole country, with all the world besides." If true of inter-State commerce, how much more important a truth of international commerce as against the foreign commerce of the old world. We have only to study the export and import statistics of these countries to appreciate the magnitude of this commerce and to realize how independent of the old world are the countries of the American continent. If the older continents of the earth should sink beneath the seas, so far from feeling the loss, the "two Americas" would be the gainers. There is nothing that the South American republics need and obtain from Europe that the United States could not supply, from flour to agricultural implements and wearing apparel, and there is nothing from coffee to spices that we import thousands of miles across the oceans from distant tropics that South and Central America and Mexico could not supply to us across this "Mediterranean of the new world," which Maury has fitly characterized as the destined focus of the commerce of the world. The suggestions in the recent message of the President, therefore, looking to freer interchange of commodities with the Western Hemisphere rather than with Europe, rise to the acme of wisdom in political economy and cleave the Gordian knot of the tariff problem with the keen edge of practical statesmanship. The Southern States, which are producing flour and plows in exchange for coffee, fruits and spices, and the Southern sea ports, which must become the gateways of this commerce, cannot wisely oppose obstacles to such a consummation. Canals across the isthmus, and railways along that narrow strip of land will facilitate an interchange of commerce which must vastly increase the shipping interest and make an enormous market for the thousands of acres of undeveloped coal lying dormant in the bosom of the Tennessee River valley.—Nashville American.

One of the Signs of the Times.

It is worthy of remark that the great dullness which has settled down on business is not followed by widespread loss of confidence and grave apprehensions as to the future. The business community appear to accept the situation with complacency, if not with absolute cheerfulness. At no other time since the subsidence of the boom can we recall a quieter state of affairs than is to be noticed now, or a more hopeful feeling than that which pervades nearly every branch of trade. The manufacturer, merchant or other manner of person who a year ago this month was anxious to bid adieu to poor old 1883, is apparently unmoved by the near approach of a successor to 1884. The circumstance is exceptional, interesting and perhaps more significant than is commonly supposed. The cheerful acceptance of a bad situation is due to a great many things; too many in fact to be grouped in one article and explained in detail. We shall therefore speak in a general way of the circumstances which led up to the present condition of affairs. In the first place, time has played its part in familiarizing business interests with and reconciling them to a changed order of things. The inexperienced soldier sees his funeral procession in every flying bomb and roll of musketry, but his fears are mastered after a time. In business circles a not dissimilar effect is produced by the approach of hard times. In 1883 business had sunk to a low point, and the apparently never ending changes from bad to worse irritated and alarmed people, so much so that everybody was glad when the year went out of the back door to return no more for ever. And while 1884 has been a year of smaller profits than was 1883, people are a twelvemonth further removed from the boom and its disquieting memories, and a twelvemonth better trained in the methods of living in and outliving hard times. Another and a very agreeable feature of the situation is the comparative ease with which collections are made. In despite of the fact that the banks are carrying extraordinarily large surpluses, and capitalists are unwilling to invest in new enterprises, collections have vastly improved within the last two or three months. This indicates in no uncertain way that the business of the country is being conducted upon sound, conservative principles; that people are buying for actual wants and paying for what they get. Finally, there is this in the situation: a feeling that the present order of things "can't last always." And this, moreover, is not a feeling which has sprung up in some unaccountable way. People have reasoned that the elements of prosperity are not out of sight; that the crops have yielded bountifully; that banks and the national treasury are gorged with money, and still there is money enough in circulation for the present volume of business; that stocks of manufactured goods are light and would be swept out of existence with the first upward turn.—Age of Steel.

The Tehuantepec Ship Railway.

For the benefit of those of our readers who may not be familiar with the Eads Tehuantepec ship railway project we give the following description: The ship is elevated from the sea level to that of the railway by means of a large floating dock or pontoon about 450 feet long, 15 feet deep and 75 feet wide. It is arranged to float or sink in a basin. On each side of the basin there will be twenty or thirty iron rods, arranged vertically, and secured to the bottom of the basin. These rods will be capable of holding the pontoon so as to prevent it rising above the level of the railway when the ship and cradle have been taken from off it. The deck of the pontoon is laid with rails which will correspond exactly with those on the land line when the pontoon is floated. When in this position a cradle on wheels, and capable of carrying the ship, is run on to the pontoon, which is then submerged by admitting water into it through sluice gates, which are regulated from the top of two quadrangular watertight towers attached to the deck of the pontoon. When the pontoon has been submerged to a sufficient depth for the bottom of the ship to clear the supports upon which it is intended she shall rest, the vessel is floated in from an adjacent basin, and secured over the top of the carriage or travelling cradle. The pontoon is then pumped out and the deck rises up to a given height above the water, its further progress being stopped by the heads of the vertical rods before alluded to. The rails on the deck of the pontoon now range precisely with those on the land, and while the pontoon is in this position locomotives are backed up and attached to the travelling cradle, and it is started on its journey across the isthmus. On reaching the end of the line the travelling cradle is run on to another pontoon, which is submerged, and the ship floated off into another basin on its way to its destination. It is necessary that the weight of the ship should be evenly distributed over the wheels of the cradle, so as to limit the weight upon each wheel. This is effected by placing in the deck of the pontoon throughout its length and breadth a number of hydraulic rams. These rams are all connected together by a common system of pipes fitted with valves, by means of which they may be separated into certain groups. Now, if all these rams with their diameters relatively adjusted, be forced up with a gentle pressure against the ship while she is still floating, and the water valve admitting the pressure be locked until she is lifted up by the pontoon out of the water her weight will be evenly distributed right away through from stem to stern. The next problem is to transfer her weight from the pontoon to the cradle. The heads of the rams do not come into direct contact, either with the girders or the ship, but over every ram is a vertical screw jack which passes up through the girder, and when pressure is applied by the ram the head of the jack is pushed up against the bottom of the ship. When the ship is floated in over the cradle, the heads of the screw jacks with the nut beneath each, are all down resting on the platform of the cradle with their stems hanging below in the water directly over the rams. The cradle is mounted on about 360 wheels, each wheel being flanged on both sides. Each of the platform girders is supported by 12 strong spiral springs resting on the bearings of 12 of these wheels, and as each girder carries but 100 tons of the dead load, each spring transfers to a wheel eight-and-a-half tons. Each spring requires 20 tons to close it and has a range of 5 inches. When the rams are withdrawn the weight of the platform rests on these springs, and of course partially closes them, leaving still 2½ inches or 3 inches of play in each spring to allow the wheels to pass over any inequality of the rails which may happen to exist. The wheels are hung independently—that is, each is separate from its fellows, having its axle protruding on each side sufficiently far to furnish a proper bearing. The speed will be limited to ten miles an hour. In order to avoid having curves, and at the same time the necessity of making enormous excavations to preserve the straight direction of the road, floating turn-tables are introduced wherever it is necessary to change the direction of the route. The floating turn-table consists of a large rectangular pontoon, which would be about 450 feet long by 70 feet wide and 12 feet deep. This pontoon is placed in a segmental basin, in which it is secured by a central pivoted joint. An ingenious device for maintaining the equilibrium of the pontoon is the hydraulic governor. This governor consists of four pairs of hydraulic cylinders, a pair being placed at each of the four corners of the pontoon, one cylinder of each pair having its bottom end pointing upwards and the other downwards, and each being secured to the sides of the basin in which the pontoon works. The cylinders are fitted with plungers which are connected with the corners of the pontoon near the deck, so that when the pontoon descends one of these plungers displaces a certain quantity of water from its cylinder. At the same time the other plunger is withdrawn from its cylinder, leaving in it a space exactly equal to the water driven out by the first plunger. In lifting a ship the pressure gauges on the hydraulic governors would at once indicate the excess of weight which one end or the other of the cradle would have to sustain.—New York Maritime Register.

More Railroads Needed.

There is a vast amount of foolishness in the cry that there has been too much railway building. Such is not the case. There is requirement for many thousand more miles of railway than we now have. It may be true that we need no more trunk lines between Chicago and New York, as there are ample accommodations at present for the ordinary through traffic. But in the West, Northwest and South there is an actual and legitimate demand for largely increased railway facilities. An inspection of the map will show that even the great State of New York has use for more roads than she now has. Compare the railway facilities which Illinois and Ohio possess with those of New York, and it will be apparent that the latter State can build many hundreds more miles of track without danger of an excess. Even in Ohio and Illinois there is room for additional lines, but these will be chiefly for connecting purposes, or to facilitate reaching certain properties like coal mines and quarries. Then, too, the exigencies of railway management sometimes require the construction of a line to some particular point as a defensive or protective measure. It is a known fact that many small lines which in themselves are hardly self-sustaining become very valuable adjuncts to large roads, as originators of freight that require long haulage. In does not signify because the new roads built in the sparsely settled regions of the West do not pay largely on the investment for the first few years of their existence, that therefore their construction was untimely and ill-advised. New roads go before the grand march of settlement. Their existence is a necessity before the country can be thickly peopled. Their advent is an inducement for the emigrant to locate along their line. Railroads in modern days precede settlement in the broad domains embraced under the title of government lands. Any one traveling through Nebraska, Dakota, or any of the other Territories will observe the pressing necessity for many thousands more miles of road than are now laid. In those regions new roads are constantly talked of, and the new era of railroad building, which is not far distant, will commence by the construction of these Territorial roads. It cannot be said that there is no idle capital for railway investment. The banks of New York, Philadelphia and Boston are flooded with idle capital, and millions of dollars are hoarded in safety deposit vaults. Besides there is an unlimited supply of foreign capital that would be only too glad to seek profitable investment. The reason why it does not come here now for that purpose is that men of wealth have become frightened at the thought that we were building too many roads, and that the business could not, in view of the probable competition, be maintained on a paying basis. Time will demonstrate that this is a mistaken view. The public do not understand all of the mysteries of railway management. Not a few of the supposed railway fights were simply the carrying out of certain desirable plans for stimulating trade during dull periods, or for effecting other ends equally beneficial. When railway building commences again on something like a large scale then will follow a great revival of industries. Emigration will largely increase, and the demand for and consumption of breadstuffs and provisions will be enlarged, and every other material interest of the country be quickened.—The Industrial World.

An Upward Tendency.

Money is being distributed among the farming communities of the West and South in larger volume than in any previous period of the year. The deliveries of cotton by planters have averaged in the last three or four weeks in excess of all precedents, and sales are being made at relatively good prices. About 320,000 bales per week have been coming from plantations, representing a weekly average of $14,500,000. Receipts of hogs are also of maximum dimensions, and grain has been coming forward in large quantities. Western produce, except cattle, is selling throughout the East at low prices, but the aggregate represents at least $50,000,000 at the present scale of deliveries. This big movement of cash products may be considered, in view of the general business environment, the prelude to improved collections and a more active trade. The one great drawback is the low range of prices for foodstuffs, which is an evil which can't be talked out of the way, but which, at least, affords a safe promise that the important changes of the future will be in favor of values. New crop tobacco is selling in Louisville on the largest scale ever before known at this period of the year, though in other centres the movement has not commenced. It is selling relatively low for the principal types offering, but is paying the farmer much larger profits than any other product of the soil.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Contractors' Notes.

Estimates for furnishing materials and performing masonry work, iron, carpentry, plumbing and steam-heating for the new armory building, a 9th avenue, 61st and 62d streets, will be received at the Armory Board, No. 301 Mott street, until December 23d, at 12 M.

The State Commission on Land Transfer Reform held its last meeting on Saturday last, at the offices of the chairman, Mr. Southmayd. A representative of THE RECORD AND GUIDE was present with the object of reporting the proceedings, but the commission unanimously resolved to exclude the press for the present, the sittings being, they said, of a preliminary character

Messrs. A. H. Muller & Son will remove from 7 Pine street next May. It is understood that their removal is due to the improvements to be made by the Astors on the property owned by them on Pine street. This old established firm may yet find it to their advantage to secure offices in or near the new Real Estate Exchange building on Liberty street, which will naturally become the focus for all the large firms in the business.

The project for constructing a building at the corner of One Hundred and Sixteenth street and Eighth avenue in which will be an elevator for the accommodation of "L" road passengers at that station has not by any means been abandoned. Over $30,000 has been collected, but the season is too late to commence now. However next spring or summer at the latest the work will be started, but not till an assurance is given by the subscriptions to put up a fine edifice. Mr. John H. Sherwood and his associates do not want to erect any ordinary building for this purpose. They desire to improve the neighborhood by the erection of a fine but not too fine apartment house with a store underneath as well as the elevator.

Real Estate Department.

The past has been one of the best weeks of the season in the real estate market. There was more trading than usual; the attendance at the auction room was large and the bidding spirited. The break in the stock market on Wednesday seemed to depress the real estate bidders on Thursday and Friday. On the whole, however, the week has been a good one and productive investment property brought very fair prices. This is true of every parcel sold in the First and Eighth wards, as well as the east side property offered on "'Change." It was, however, noticeable that the sales of Messrs. Harnett, Ludlow & Co. and Smyth called together a particularly large number of bidders, due to the efforts made by these auctioneers in advertising and otherwise. The Riverside Drive lots did not bring full prices, due, doubtless, to the lateness of the season and the pronounced indisposition to buy vacant property not in the line of immediate improvement. All shrewd dealers concur in saying that anyone who can afford to wait can find no more lucrative investments than well-located west side unimproved lots.

On Wednesday the four-story brick building No. 78 Fifth avenue, 30x107, was sold for $91,000 to L. F. Von Ohlsen, of Sixth avenue. This property is rented until May 1, 1887, at $9,000 per annum, with privilege of a renewal for five years at $11,000. Parcels on Grand, Stanton, West Forty-first, East Twenty-fourth and East Twenty-sixth streets were also sold and brought good prices. On Thursday the office building No. 35 Nassau street, 25.8x110, was sold for $93,500 to Corlies, Macy & Co., who own the adjoining property, comprising the southwest corner of Nassau and Liberty streets, 54.4x about 111, which they purchased in January, 1881, for $185,000. Four lots on the southeast corner of Boulevard and One Hundred and Thirty-first street were sold for $6,975, the corner bringing $2,100, and the others $1,675 and $1,600 each; two lots on One Hundred and Thirty-first street, adjoining the above, brought, respectively, $1,010 and $950. After quite a spirited contest Mr. Isidor Cohnfield, for $50,300, bought a plot with a frontage of 172 feet on Riverside Drive, 225 feet north of One Hundred and Sixteenth street. Three lots on the drive, near One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, were knocked down at $8,000 each, and two lots on Claremont avenue, in the rear of the above, at $3,100 each. The four-story stores Nos. 229 and 231 Water street, which are rented to May 1, 1885, at $5,000, were sold for $53,150, and No. 122 Beekman, rented at $600, went for $7,500.

Morris Wilkins will sell on Tuesday, December 23d, some very desirable property on West One Hundred and Eighteenth street and on Ninth and New avenues.

Special Notices.

The conflagration which recently took place at the factory of the Boston Terra Cotta Co., Boston, does not appear to have materially impaired their ability to meet the immediate requirements of their customers. They have five large kilns in operation, and their machinery is intact. The company expects to meet all its contracts. The Boston Terra Cotta Co. has supplied its material to many of the largest buildings in New York, Boston and elsewhere. Architects and others are referred to their announcement on another page. The office of the company is at 394 Federal street, Boston.

William C. Le Gendre and Julian W. Robbins have opened an office at room 4, 150 Broadway, where they will transact a real estate business, making a specialty of taking charge of estates. These gentlemen enter the real estate business under the best of auspices. Mr. Le Gendre was formerly with Brown Brothers & Co. Mr. Robbins is the son of George A. Robbins, formerly a banker in the city. This new firm will doubtless have, as it deserves, all the business it can do.

Attention is called to the card of Peter F. Callahan, real estate and insurance agent, whose office is at No. 725 Second avenue. Mr. Callahan takes entire charge of estates and gives special attention to renting and collecting.

The statement that the tile drainage industry has come to be one of the most important in Illinois seems incredible; but the figures go far towards substantiating it. There is expended annually in the State for labor and material in tiling operations about $4,488,000, and the capital invested in the various branches of the business, including the manufacture of ditching machinery, is not less than $5,000,000, while the wealth of the State is increased to the amount of $10,000,000 a year, it is estimated, through the reclamation of swamp and waste lands, and the improvement of farms.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

BUILDING MATERIAL MARKET.

BRICKS.—It has been a pretty dull market for Common Hards all the week, and neither buyer nor seller appeared to make much of an effort to change the condition of affairs as prevailing. A necessity for purchasing created a demand to just the extent of wants actually known to exist, and an opportunity to sell found an offering of stock sufficient for the outlet while operators agreed upon about former rates without any very protracted negotiation. If there was a change at all in cost it was in favor of the buyer during the early portion of the week, but of late the feeling has been comparatively steady again, and sellers talk with a trifle greater confidence. This is mainly due to the snow storm, which brought the first good touch of winter, and while it may be some time before the river is closed it is more than likely that many captains will haul off and lay by until spring. The general quality of the stock has averaged about the same as for some time past, and the distribution was toward the usual channels with a fair number of cargoes afloat, though nothing to create uneasiness at this season and with values standing at their present level.

HARDWARE.—Dealers are doing a little something in the way of distributing holiday goods, fancy hardware and generally seasonable stock, but outside of that the market is very dull and void of other noticeable features. There is no addition to the accumulation at the moment, nor likely to be until well into the new year at least, and values are largely nominal, as it is more than likely that all lists will receive a good overhauling within the next month or so. Among some of the recent announcements we note that the manufacturers of locks have decided to issue a new list generally ranged a little higher, but for the low-priced goods making small reductions and that the discount is to be 70 per cent. On augers and bits it has been resolved to retain the old discount of 60 per cent. and preserve greater uniformity than heretofore.

LATH.—So far as actual business was concerned it has been a quiet and uneventful market, the moderate arrivals coming to hand mostly under engagement on previous contract and buyers waiting for stock meeting with disappointment. Such conditions, however, were favorable to receivers, affording not only support but stimulus to values and while up to the present writing no sale appears to have been really made in excess of $2.50 per M. we have reports of bids at $2.60 refused on cargo lots and some receivers asking quite a little margin over the latter rate. A great many dealers are carrying scant yard stock.

LIME.—Arrivals have continued to come to hand in an irregular sort of way but the demand continued full enough for all received, and the cargoes were placed without much difficulty with about former rates ruling. Little or nothing now coming forward from the State kilns.

LUMBER.—Nothing has taken place to change the general conditions of the lumber market since our last. Buyers find an absence of features to stimulate them into increased animation, and, indeed as the year draws rapidly to a close, the tendency is to restrict rather than expand investment simply as an ordinary seasonable business measure. At the best, however, there is not much use for supplies either for manufacturing or building purposes, and the export movement is too erratic to place any dependence upon It is possible that a little desirable stock carefully offered from first hands could be placed at full as good rates as for some time past, but there is no open demand except in an occasional way for specials from the eastern and southern product. Some stock could be reached at interior points by rail without costing very extreme figures, but offerings of that kind are treated with more or less indifference. Advices from the woods are somewhat conflicting, but as a rule assume that the intention is to make a small cut.

Eastern Spruce is supported in price by the advantages of the season, the cutting off of chances for anything except an occasional offering naturally strengthening the position of sellers. Buyers in some cases have even gone so far as to request notification should anything happen to come forward, and a desirable cargo or so could no doubt be placed every few days without difficulty. This is called "a better demand" by some, but in the open season would be considered of little importance as an aid to the market. Rates remain at $13.00@15.00 for randoms, and extra sizes would do better, and as high as $17.00 per M. is asked for specials.

White Pine does not appear to improve. Some operators who have commenced going over their books express a little surprise at the amount of business they have really accomplished during the year and we believe these discoveries will be more general, but there is a universal complaint of the narrow margins shown and the poor prospect for any immediate improvement. Home wants are small, and exporters cannot be depended upon to give any permanent relief, though they have taken rather more of late. The river is still open to Albany but dealers are not supplying their wants to half the extent they would have done had that market declined earlier. We quote at $16@17 for West India shipping boards; $18@27 for South American do.; $13@14 for box boards, and $16@18 for extra do.

Yellow Pine is bought only to the extent of actual wants and that basis brings very few orders upon the market. In fact matters are quite as dull and apparently as unsatisfactory as ever, with no promises of early improvement, though some of the trade still express confidence that business will be brought around into better shape before spring operations are commenced. Values remain nominal, except on flooring boards, which are firm. Of f. o b. orders a few continue to be placed. We quote as follows: Randoms, $17@19.50 per M; Specials, $19.50@21 do.; Green Flooring Boards, $20@22; Dry, do., do., $22@23; Siding, $20@22 do.; Cargoes f. o. b. at Atlantic ports, $13@15 for rough. and $18@20 for dressed Cargoes f. o. b. at Gulf ports, $12@14 for rough, and $20@21 for dressed.

Hardwoods have quite as likely a market as any class of stock, but at the moment are moving slowly and principally in odd parcels to cover actual necessities, with values about as before. We quote at wholesale rates by car load as follows: Walnut, $65@100 per M.; ash, $33@40 do.; oak, $30@35 do.; maple, $20@32.50 do.; chestnut, $25@30 do.; cherry, 50@80 do.; whitewood, $27@35 do., do.; elm, $22@25; ckory, $45@50 do.

Shingles dull beyond an occasional shipping order, and said to be worth about former rates, but pretty well held, as the stock is scant. We quote Cypress at $8.00@8 50 per M. for 5x20 and $11.00@12.00 do. for 6x20 regularly assorted shipping. Pine shipping stock $2.00@2.50 for 18 inch, and Eastern saw grades at $2.00@2.50 for 16 inch, as to quality and to quantity. Eastern shaved cedar $4.00@4.50 per M. Machine dressed cedar shingles quoted as follows: for 30 inch, $15.00 @20.00 for A, and $23@28.50 for No. 1; for 24 inch, $13.00@15 for A and $18.50@20.50 for No. 1; for 20 inch, $8@9.50 for A and $11.00@12.50 for No. 1.

GENERAL LUMBER NOTES.

STATE.

ALBANY MARKET.

The Argus reports for week ending December 16, as follows:

The last boat, probably, of the season was loaded yesterday, and left in last night's tow. Most of the dealers have gone down town to their winter offices, though many have left salesmen to attend to the wants of buyers who may come. The stock on hand in the district is large and well asssorted. On December 1st there were 37,000,000 more on the yards than at that time last year. All kinds and qualities can be readily obtained, and the prospects for a large rail trade later in the winter are considered very good. Manufacturers have prepared for cutting logs sparingly during the winter, that they may keep up paying prices. Park's planing mill was burned yesterday, but it was the one used mostly for the retail trade, and there are enough left to care for all the business required.

THE WEST.

The cargo season is over at Chicago and in referring to the yard trade the Northwestern Lumberman has the following:

While there is no cause for anything but a hopeful view in regard to late winter and early spring business, there is nothing in sight that should induce any dealer to attempt to make his customers believe that lumber is cheaper than natural causes should make it, and that the prospect is that there will soon be an advance. The situation is simply this: The lumber business of this city has gone into winter quarters with ample, though not excessive stocks. Though the receiving season is over, there is lumber enough in pile to meet the wants of any possible demand until spring, with perhaps an occasional supplimentary reception of sorts by rail. In addition to this consideration we must realize that there is plenty of lumber at other points—on the river, in Wisconsin, in Michigan—that will be ready, at hard times prices, to fill up any gap that may be made in stocks here. This alone should be sufficient to check any disposition on the part of some to bull prices on the ground that the receiving season is over. It is a little different this year from former conditions. The business of the country is struggling in the midst of overload and financial stress of circumstances. All who hold marketable commodities are eager to sell, this rule holding good in regard to lumbermen. It certainly seems only reasonable that the handlers of lumber stock should aim only at maintaining steady prices. It is all that they can do anyway, try they never so hard.

The sum of the matter is that there is lumber enough here for the trade, and plenty more waiting to come forward. But there is no reason for crowding off stocks at a slaughter. The trade should simply take a conservative view of the matter, supply the current demand at as steady prices as possible, and attempt no startling performances.

In regard to prices nothing new can be said. Several houses are using their own lists, while others are taking the general list of the trade as the basis for delivered prices, where such are made, or otherwise, as the case may be. No list that can be printed or written can be a true representation of actual trading in every case, though it appears as if dealers were trying to sell as near the list as possible. Instances are frequent now as always, when yards are overstocked with particular sizes or grades, and concede to purchasers in order to make sales. There is, however, an endeavor to get back to a unity of understanding about values, as between yards, and straighten up the trade from the groggy condition that prevailed through the summer and fall.

Referring to hardwoods the Lumberman says:

Quotations on oak and ash as given in our report below have been revised. It has been evident for some time that there has been a lower tendency on these stocks, but it has been difficult to determine what prices were being paid. We feel confident that the figures we now give represent very closely the actual state of the market. Undoubtedly there is some lumber sold below these figures, and some of extra fine grades or of special dimensions above them; but the market, taken as a whole, is fairly represented by them. The lower range is what is paid by close buyers or for large lots, and the upper limit what may often be obtained by careful sellers for good grades or in small quantities.

Yellow pine seems, as far as the city demand is concerned, to be losing ground, though an occasional contract comes into the offices. The permanent demand seems to be for car building and kindred purposes, while for building it is subject to great fluctuations.

The following figures represent the prices paid by wholesalers for hardwood lumber on cars in the city, Chicago inspection:

LUMBERMAN AND MANUFACTURER, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

The dullness of a dull winter prevails in all the lumber markets of the country. In the Northwest the fraternity seem to be better prepared to carry over the stock than ever before, hence there is but little anxiety manifested to sell stock at a discount beyond reasonable interest for cash advanced. We are busy gathering up the reports of stock on hand and, as will be seen from the figures, there is not found the excess of lumber on hand which has been anticipated everywhere. The failures among lumbermen have been surpassingly few in number and compare favorably with any other branch of trade.

We still adhere to our opinion that there will be far too many logs cut this winter for the good of either loggers or lumbermen. This applies to all three of the States. This is due in part to the widely advertised (in certain newspapers) report that there would only be about 40 per cent. of the usual log cut made. We think a lumberman who would endorse such a statement ought to be given a leather medal and have a guardian appointed.

SOUTH AMERICA.

From mail accounts just at hand a report on the Rio Janeiro market is obtained as follows:

Pitch Pine.—There are still no arrivals, and in absence of reported transactions we continue to quote at 40$000@41$000 per dozen, firm. White pine—The arrivals have been 83,432 feet per Albatross, 38,026 do. Wallace, 252,298 do. E. S. Powell, all from New York. The greater part of the receipts are on order; the balance was sold at 125@130 reis per foot. Spruce pine—Nothing whatever to report. Swedish pine—The Ulrika from Abo brought 833 dozen which are on order. Quotations unchanged.

ENGLAND.

Referring to the recent sale of redwood the London Timber Trade's Journal says:

The California redwood, ex Prince Rupert, sold remarkably well, the price per foot-cube for planks averaging fully 3s. 6d. against an average of 2s. 10d. at the Glasgow sale. The whole of the lots were sold. The impression is that the wood will form a capital substitute for yellow pine, and in this anticipation doubtless the trade were ready to acquire stock to a moderate extent; till the experiment has been made, however, it will be unwise to come to any hasty conclusions. It is amongst consumers that the question will have to be solved whether it can replace Quebec wood. That it may to a limited extent is quite possible, but that its introduction will have any cheapening effect on yellow pine we cannot bring ourselves to believe. The general belief is that the Californian wood is easily workable, besides having great durability, and will fully answer the purposes expected. How far this will be borne out by practical results remains to be seen. From the sample we have seen we consider it in appearance very similar to southern pine with the turpentine extracted. In the Forestry Exhibition, held at Edinburgh, a section of this wood was amongst the exhibits 13 feet in diameter. The tree from which this was cut was 295 feet high, and counting the rings it was estimated to be fully 2,000 years old; 75,000 feet board measure were cut out of this tree.

One thing can be pretty confidently relied on should the wood take with consumers here, viz., that there will be no difficulty about quality; being culled from virgin forests, it is only natural to conclude that there will be an abundance of the finest trees to select from. The only thing that struck us in common between the Californian redwood and 1st yellow pine was its dimensions and freedom from knots.

Later dates from London per Timber Trade Journal report:

American Black Walnut.—A fair amount of trade is doing in this; of late more perhaps has been sold by private contract than by public auction. The consumption for cabinet making purposes is still very considerable. Straight grown, sound, sizable logs continue to command full prices; small and poor logs also seem to move off pretty well. Supplies of late have been upon a more moderate scale, which we anticipate will have a hardening effect upon the market.

American Whitewood is somewhat dull just lately, but we know no reason why this should continue so. There are now in the docks some exceedingly fine grown logs, of unusually large sizes, also a considerable stock of prime planks, of various thicknesses, so that intending buyers will find no difficulty in obtaining supplies of really good stuff, and we believe at very reasonable prices.

American Oak.—There is a good stock of prime logs, wainscot and useful plank stuff which, we are told, is being offered at low prices, but we cannot hear of much trade doing.

NAILS.—Operations are narrowing down somewhat, as pretty nearly all classes of buyers feel more or less inclined to work as much on accumulated supplies as possible for the short remainder of the year. It is claimed, however, that production has become adjusted to the condition of general trade and that sellers can retain the advantage without much difficulty, and especially on regular standard sizes, of which the assortment has become somewhat broken. We quote at $2.05@2.10 per keg for 10d. to 60d. for ordinary invoices, with some allowances to be obtained on large purchases.

PAINTS, OILS, ETC.—Between calls from the ordinary run of customers and a few shipping orders dealers manage to place a little stock, but there is no animation shown and apparently little hope of any for the present. Stocks, however, are kept down as close as possible by careful production and importation, and so far as quotations are made the changes in cost are few and unimportant. Linseed Oil has been moderately active and is valued at 52@53c. for domestic and 54@56c. for foreign. Spirits Turpentine without much animation and the tone easy at 31½ @33c., according to size of invoice, style of package, etc.

PITCH AND TAR.—The demand is moderate from nearly all sources and a generally dull market prevails. There is not much change in the views of holders, however, and about old rates are asked on small lots, though large parcels could be bought lower. We quote Pitch $1.75@2.00 per bbl., Tar $2.00 @2.25 do., according to quantity, quality and delivery.

MORTGAGES.

NOTE.—The arrangement of this list is as follows: The first name is that of the mortgagor, the next that of the mortgagee. The description of the property then follows, then the date of the mortgage, the time for which it was given, and the amount. The general dates used as headings are the dates when the mortgage was handed into the Register's office to be recorded.

Whenever the letters "P. M." occur, preceded by the name of a street in these lists of mortgages, they mean that it is a Purchase Money Mortgage, and for fuller particulars see the list of transfers under the corresponding date.

J. T. LINDSEY, Business Manager.

What a change would come over the business situation if a stop was put to the payment of the public debt, and the surplus money in the Treasury was spent in constructing harbor defences, building a navy, encouraging lines of steamers to foreign countries, improving our water ways and harbors and erecting in the cities, where they are called for, new custom houses, postoffices and buildings for Federal courts. Such a policy would change as if by magic the whole business situation, for it would create a demand for iron, timber and building materials, and better than all for labor. It would be economy, for the government would then get the advantage of the prevailing low prices. It is so obviously the wisest thing to do that it is surprising there is not a general demand for the government to use its now worse than wasted funds to stimulate productive industries.

The press of New York seems determined not to emphasize the significance of the failures which occurred on the Vienna bourse immediately upon the announcement that Austria was about to resume specie payment on a gold basis. Items are given grudgingly of the suicides, failures and embarrassments; indeed there seems to be a "conspiracy of silence" touching the moral to be drawn from the attitude of Austria on the currency question. It is now repeating the history of Germany and the United States when they demonetized silver in 1873. In addition to what it had previously published, the Herald of yesterday gave the following items in a quiet way:

VIENNA, Dec. 25, 1884.—The Discount Bank at Layback, Carinthia, has failed. Its liabilities are 1,500,000 florins. Two sugar factories at Sadsko have stopped work.

PRAGUE, Dec. 25, 1884.—The liabilities of the Bohemian Land Credit Company, which suspended recently, amount to 23,000,000 florins. The assets exceed that amount, but it will be difficult to collect them. Numerous small banks are involved in the failure, and some are ruined. The shareholders lose the whole amount of their investment.

Unless we are greatly mistaken there is a good deal more of the same kind of news to come from Austria. But the anti-silver papers will not see the point.

As we predicted some weeks ago the cattle ranch fever is developing itself into a widespread international speculation. The money for the purchasing of lands and cattle comes in great part from England and the continent. A railroad scheme has been evolved out of this land and cattle speculation. It is proposed to build a road from Cheyenne to Hudson Bay, by which route it was claimed 500 miles of water transportation to England can be saved and $10 a head added to the value of the cattle. A dinner was given by George H. Stayner, of Brooklyn, on Wednesday evening, to ex-Secretary of War McCreary and Captain Bedford Pim, of the British navy, and others who represent an immense ranch company with stockholders on both sides of the ocean. We may expect this speculation to rage for a time to the ultimate loss of those who get in at high prices, but the meat consumers will probably be benefited by the increased attention given to the breeding of cattle.

Our Chamber of Commerce is a very curious body. It opposes every measure likely to help New York in its struggle for foreign trade. It antagonizes every measure on the part of the Federal government to aid New York capitalists in establishing steamship lines with foreign ports. The Chamber has also announced with emphasis against the treaties now before the country, the main object of all of which is to extend our commerce with other nations.

This would be a puzzling attitude for the Chamber of Commerce to assume, were it not explained by the fact that we really have no merchants, because we have no merchant marine. We have, it is true, shippers of goods, but they are Americans in partnership with foreign shipping lines. True, our navigation laws give a monopoly of the coasting trade to American ship owners, but the merchants who are engaged in that field do not seem to be influential in our chief commercial body. Foreign merchants and steamship lines are better represented in the Chamber of Commerce than are the interests of American commerce proper. It is also a curious fact that the Journal of Commerce and the Commercial Bulletin bitterly oppose every effort on the part of the Federal government to give our ships foreign markets.

The Mackay-Bennett cable is now open for business. It is, it seems, the only direct cable between Europe and New York city. Although it has all the advantages of the recent inventions in cable telegraphy, yet it is doubtful if it will be a commercial success. The laying of the cable has, it is understood, taxed Mr. Bennett's resources very severely, and he has had to sacrifice a great deal of his property to make good the subscription to the shares which were in the name of his brother-in-law, Mr. Bell. A cable is at a disadvantage compared with other telegraph lines in that it can only transact business at either end. A line from New York to San Francisco gives and receives messages every few miles. Then the new cable is handicapped in another way. The old companies have direct business relations and prompt connections with every city in Europe, while on this side the Western Union can supply them with messages from every point in North America. The new cable will, it is true, have the service of the Baltimore & Ohio, the Postal Telegraph and the Bankers' and Brokers', but these cannot gather one-twentieth of the business at the command of the Western Union. Hence the new company will be forced to open offices in the large cities and will in every way be at a disadvantage with its old-established rivals. Mr. Bennett is plucky and Mr. Mackay is reputed rich, but they have yet to show that they possess any business faculty outside of mining and journalism. The probable fate of the new cable will be to fall into the hands of the old monopoly at much less than its original cost.

This cable experiment will probably repeat the old, old story. There is no such thing as permanent competition between natural monopolies such as railways, telegraph lines, cables and the supplying of water and gas and the like to municipalities. The cables of the world should really be owned by a syndicate representing the several commercial nations. Private persons should not have the reporting of market news, nor should they be the depositors of business and family secrets. It is this consideration which has induced every government save ours to incorporate the telegraph system into their postoffice machinery. The several governments should supply cable facilities to the people of all nations at a minimum charge. The final result of the Mackay-Bennett cable construction it is now probable will be to add just so much to the already large expense of telegraphing under the ocean.

How history repeats itself! When De Lesseps first suggested the building of a Suez Canal it was pronounced impossible, and even derided in England. The London journals declared that it was an impracticable project. Lord Palmerston, representing the official judgment of the nation, pronouncedthe scheme visionary. The great body of English engineers, with George Stephenson at their head, declared that the physical difficulties were insurmountable, and that what had been accomplished by the Pharaohs before the beginning of recorded history was an impossibility to the science of the nineteenth century. Nevertheless De Lesseps has lived not only to see his canal completed but all his English enemies confounded. Great Britain to-day has the most vital interest in this important artificial channel of trade. Americans are now assuming the same attitude toward the Panama Canal that England did to the Suez Canal. It is, we are told, a waste of money and time to even attempt it, the physical obstacles to be overcome being insuperable. From this time forth the difficulties in the way of De Lesseps will be the theme of tens of thousands of newspaper articles. The most experienced engineering experts in the country will pledge their professional reputation that the canal will never be built, and hundreds of speeches will be made in Congress showing up this latest French folly. But, notwithstanding, by 1890 the canal will be opened and will become the great channel of commerce for the shipping on the Atlantic Ocean which may have business with the ports on the east of Asia and in the Pacific Ocean. Then by the close of the century by an attraction as strong as that of gravitation the canal will fall under the control of the American government. The fact to be kept steadily in mind by all sensible men is that modern engineering science backed by sufficient money can overcome any ordinary physical difficulty in the way of constructing a canal.

The danger is that, prompted by this feeling of hostility, we may begin the construction of a Nicaraguan canal which will involve great cost, trouble with foreign nations, and in the end be a failure, not because it cannot be constructed but for the reason that a canal 170 miles long, with thirteen locks, will never be able to compete with a canal less than one-third the length and not having any locks. The building of a Nicaraguan canal to compete with the Panama Canal would be like starting a horse-car to rival the speed of a locomotive. As a nation we are in danger of committing a similar folly and go ahead with this preposterous Nicaraguan scheme.

Our Prophetic Department.

MR. HOPEFUL—It seems to me that the prevailing view of things is altogether too gloomy. Everybody one meets is in the dumps. Inquire of anyone in any business and you will find that the coming year is set down as promising more distress than any year we have had since the panic of 1873. Even your forecasts, Sir Oracle, are tinged with melancholy.

SIR ORACLE—Well, I confess to being something of a pessimist so far as the near future is concerned; not because matters are really so desperate, but on account of the general lack of comprehension of the cause of the trouble and the obliviousness of the government and financial authorities as to the proper means of bringing about a better state of affairs.

MR. HOPEFUL—It is not natural for the average man with healthful blood in his veins to be without hope. Americans, especially, are natural bulls. Now, whatever the natural advantages there may be in the situation will be dwelt upon by everyone in business. "Hope springs eternal in the human breast." On looking around us what do we see? To begin with, the most abundant crops ever grown on this planet. Wheat goes begging, corn is within a few cents of the lowest price ever known. Oats and the other small grain were never so plentiful. Cheap corn is going to give us by and by more hogs and lard than we can consume. Meat, for the first time in many years, is actually being reduced in price. Then the machinery for supplying all human wants in the way of raiment was never so efficient. Now, with these general conditions I cannot believe that the world is going to suffer. Surely, it is not scarcity and high prices, which in the long run are a benefit to mankind.

SIR O.—You are quite right in supposing that good crops and cheap production are in the long run a good thing, but certainly the course of prices for the last four years on the downward track has impoverished the rich and brought suffering to the poor. Producing on a falling market necessarily causes loss to all who grow, manufacture or sell. With you I am inclined to believe that early next year there will certainly be a better feeling in the stock market. But I see no hopeful sign in the general trade of the country; the shrinkage in prices must go on. A good summary of the situation is contained in the following extract from a recent circular of John A. Davis & Co., every word of which is true:

> The purchasing power of money, as applied to breadstuffs, has increased to such an extent as to throw the ordinary relations of trade out of gear. The farmer gets but little more than half as much for a bushel of wheat as he got a year ago. It is clear that he cannot pay as much for labor, for freights, for groceries, for luxuries as he paid a year ago. He can bring down the price of what he buys most effectually by going without it. Going without on a large scale reduces the demand; supply presses and prices fall. This is the nature of the great readjustment in progress. The purchasing power of money has risen rapidly on breadstuffs. It is rising slowly on everything else, and the movement will continue until equilibrium has been restored. The price of anthracite coal must fall; the wages of labor must be lowered in the mill, at the workshop and on the farm. Rents must be reduced to meet lessened incomes; lower rents will bring a fall in real estate. Railroad freights must be lowered; dividends must be cut down and capital must be satisfied with smaller returns on investments. Just when and where the balance will be restored is not clear, but we fear the year 1885 will not see the end.

The significance of the above is the admission that the prime cause of the depression is the increased purchasing power of money. The financial and commercial worlds have agreed that silver must be discarded as a money metal and that gold, which is diminishing in quantity, shall be the sole measure of value. This augments the purchasing power of this one metal and hence the distress in trade over the whole surface of the planet. This is a splendid thing for those who control the gold or are in possession of all forms of debt, government, corporate and individual, for they must be paid in a metal which has immensely increased in value since the debts were contracted. Yet nearly every daily and financial paper in the East practically upholds this gold mono-metallism, which is the cause of nearly all our woes, and never tire of ringing the changes upon the wickedness of coining or using silver. Nearly all these papers have been half ruined by the shrinkage in prices, which extends to their own issues and their advertising columns, yet the howl against silver is kept up unceasingly. What disheartens me is the utter incapacity to appreciate the prime cause of our troubles by the classes most injuriously affected by it, which includes every business man, producer, debtor and laborer.

MR. HOPEFUL—But surely low prices are not bad things in themselves? Does it not teach every one the lesson of economy and prepare business for a new departure because of the decreased cost of production?

SIR O.—Well, we may console ourselves in that way perhaps, but you have read the history of prices in vain if you have not found out that the bulk of the race is always happier when prices are advancing than when they are declining. In the one case the wheels of commerce are kept in motion, in the other they are checked or stopped. Show me a nation where wages are low and prices cheap and it will prove to be a backward one, lagging in the rear of civilization, but a well-paid laboring class and high prices is an assurance of prosperity and a superior civilization.

MR. HOPEFUL—What other discouragements do you experience?

SIR O.—Well, look at this matter of our commercial treaties. Their object is to extend our commerce and open new markets for our surplus goods. A few selfish interests object and the negotiations come to a standstill. The very representatives of our commerce in New York are the most bitterly opposed to anything that will give us foreign markets or create a demand for new ships. We are without a navy, and the Senate justly thinks that new cruisers should be built and that some guns should be constructed for the defence of our seaports; but a Democratic House objects, and, so far as the press is concerned, it seems to endorse the do-nothing policy of the Representatives. Yet any tenth-rate naval power could inflict damage upon us of fifty times the pecuniary value of the cruisers proposed. Public works of all kinds are needed for the defence of the nation and the improvement of its harbors and waterways and incidentally to employ labor now in distress. Yet where is the popular demand to put a stop to our preposterous debt-paying policy and the using of the money so wasted in productive outlays for needed improvements? Yes, I confess to being discouraged.

The House of Representatives has passed a bill making the head of the Agricultural Bureau a cabinet officer. This is in response to a demand from the South and West. The Eastern press object, but it is hard to see upon what ground. Indeed there is very little reason in their arguments, the proposed new department being rather an object of ridicule. But there does seem many substantial reasons why the greater interests of the country should be represented in what is really the chief executive council of the nation. The trade and prosperity of the United States depends primarily upon its agricultural productions. We give a seat in the cabinet to a Secretary of the Navy; but we have no navy, nor shall we have anything worthy of the name for ten years to come. Then our trivial military force is the merest apology for an army, and yet we give this smallest of interests a seat in the cabinet, with the title of Secretary of War. Now in times of civil strife or foreign war it is quite right that the President should have advisors and helps in managing the army and navy. But we have not made a business in this country of war, nor are we likely to do so. With us everything depends on agriculture. A really ideal cabinet would include a Secretary of Labor, one of transportation, another of commerce, one of manufactures and mining, as well as a minister of education. But the War and Navy Departments could with advantage be consolidated into a Department of Public Defence, with two bureaus.

In other words, as this is an industrial age, the chief executive council of the nation should represent all its larger interests. This is in the line of the development of modern communities. There was a time when kings endeavored to perform all the functions of modern cabinet ministers, but in the evolution of nations ministers of State, financial ministers, ministers of justice, of war and the like made their appearance, thus following the well known law of differentiation. Compare the cabinet of Queen Victoria for instance with that of Harold or Canute, and it will be seen how much more representative of the powers and industries of the nation is a modern cabinet compared with ancient kingly rule.

Some time since we ventured an estimate that the depressed times would lower the means of the consuming classes by some $60,000,000 per week—that is over $3,000,000,000 per annum. We argued that there are at least 12,000,000 persons whose incomes would be lessened in the aggregate one-third by the shrinkage in prices, the smaller demand for labor and the reduction of compensation. We made this estimate to show what might be expected by the wholesale trade of the country until business revived. Bradstreet's has been collecting statistics showing how many people have been deprived of all employment throughout the manufacturing district of the country. Its figures are to the effect that some 350,000 of the wage-receiving class in the manufacturing regions are entirely out of work. Of course this cannot be half the real number, for this estimate does not take into account the workmen in smaller establishments. Calling these 150,000, we have 500,000 entirely out of work in manufacturing alone. Estimating their wages at $10 a week, and the average must be higher, we have a total of $5,000,000 which these unemployed workmen no longer spend in the retail trade establishments. This would be at least $250,000,000 per annum, without taking into account the lack of employment in other than manufacturing businesses and the reduced wages of those who are kept at work. How strikingly these figures show the falling off in the wholesale trade of the country, due to the decreased purchasing power of the working classes. Every interest in the State depends upon the employment of the laboring people at fair wages.

And this suggests a new field for our government statisticians. The returns collected by Mr. Nimmo are exceedingly useful, but how much more valuable would be a knowledge of the condition of the working classes, for instance, than the number of hogs produced or the bushels of grain exported. The consuming power of the nation is a vital matter, and figures showing how much the working people make and spend would furnish data for manufacturers and producers such as they have never had before. Our statistical bureaus, that of the Agricultural Department especially, have done us excellent service, but the field is not by any means occupied as yet.

Dr. Adler on Tenement House Reform.

In a further interview on the above subject with a representative of THE RECORD AND GUIDE Dr. Adler said:

"One of the difficulties which Octavia Hill was obliged to meet was that of securing the prompt payment of rent in times of industrial distress. Now this is one of the sorest points in the tenement house problem. There is a class of tenants of whom it might almost be said that they live by not paying their rent—a migratory class, who wander from house to house, from quarter to quarter. The landlord, indeed, being forewarned, endeavors to recoup himself for the threatened deficiency of income by raising the rent somewhat of those tenants who do pay. us the frugal, the steady tenants, are made to pay for the thriftless and the unreliable.

"At the same time we must not use too severe language of those who do not pay their rent. Very often they cannot pay, especially in hard times, when the factories are shutting down everywhere, and thousands of men who would be glad to work cannot find employment. Miss Hill (see 'Homes of the London Poor' published by Macmillan) tried to remedy this state of things by finding work among her friends for the tenants under her charge. But it is evident that such a plan could not be pursued on a large scale. When there is no work to be had it is useless to look for work. The margin of unemployed labor is determined by the working of the general laws of trade, and private philanthropy cannot alter the facts. We may be able to take one or the other person out of the ranks of the unemployed, and may delude ourselves into the belief that we have done a good deed, but we are only pushing someone else into the same ranks from which we take our protege. The thing to do is to devise a plan whereby the payment of rent can be secured in hard times, and to this end I suggest the application of the insurance idea to the rent problem of the poor. It has been proved that very decent and comfortable accommodations can be supplied even to the very poor which shall net a return of about 6 per cent. Let a company of capitalists be formed who will content themselves with 4 per cent. This is surely not an unheard of proposition, since the bonds of the government do not return more, nor indeed as much. Then there would remain a margin of 2 per cent., which might be used as an insurance fund for deserving and industrious tenants in times of general depression. Take the case of the man who pays $7 rent per month, that is $84 a year. Deduct one-half to represent taxes and the cost of maintenance. The $42 remaining represents the 6 per cent. profit. Deduct therefrom $14, or enough to pay two months' rent, and you would have the insurance found. This fund would only be touched in cases of necessity, and would therefore go on accumulating. The result, I imagine, would be of great benefit to the landlords as well as the tenants. The interest on the investment, it is true, would be less, but the flow of income would be steady, where it is now liable to frequent interruptions. Much of the wear and tear caused by frequent change of occupancy would be saved, and if the return on the capital would be small the element of greater security would come in as a compensating advantage.

"Perhaps it may be said that the landlords of their own accord will never consent to take 4 per cent. if they can make 6, 8 and 10 per cent. I therefore return to the proposition already made, that a company of capitalists be formed who shall agree to content themselves with 4 per cent. and who shall raise an initial fund of say $500,000 as a guarantee of their good faith; and who shall then receive a large loan from the public treasury, city or State, in order to carry out their operations on a large scale. The government must take an interest in the housing of the poor. Something must be done to alleviate the terrible evils from which they now suffer, and suffer unnecessarily. The poor of the great cities are daily becoming more restive under the present state of things. Those who have the means should extend to them a helping hand, or the time may come when they will take matters into their own hands."

The daily press seems delighted with the discomfiture of Mr. Kane, the manure contractor, by the ladies of Beekman Hill. But is there not another side to this question? Manure must be removed from New York, and the docks where the vessels come to take it away must necessarily be offensive to people who live near by. This is a matter for municipal regulation, and if we had a responsible city government docks would be set apart for this necessary work. Rightly considered, the contractors who remove offensive manure heaps from New York are public benefactors. The denunciations of Mr. Kane by the press are quite uncalled for.

The report that the new Produce Exchange is to be changed into a skating rink is understood to be premature.

The New Administration.

[From an Occasional Correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, December 24, 1884.

Editor RECORD AND GUIDE:

The cabinet of President Cleveland is as good as settled. There may be changes, but once Mr. Cleveland has made up his mind he is a very difficult man to move. The following is the slate: Secretary of the Treasury, Thomas F. Bayard, of Delaware; Secretary of State, General Lamar, of Mississippi; Secretary of the Interior, William C. Whitney, of New York; Secretary of War, Geo. B. McClellan, of New Jersey; Attorney-General, Senator Garland, of Arkansas.

The Secretary of the Navy and the Postmaster-General have not yet been determined upon, but will be given to the South, and there may be changes in the above; but I have reason to believe that there will be no alteration in the nominees for Secretary of the Treasury and Secretary of the Interior. A perfect shower of remonstrances have been sent to Mr. Cleveland against putting Bayard in the Treasury Department. The Greenback men object to him because he is an avowed enemy of the paper money, which brought the Civil War to a successful issue. The advocates of silver detest him because he is a fanatical gold mono-metallist. His personal enemies say that August Belmont will be the real Secretary of the Treasury in case Mr. Bayard is appointed, and that the financial policy of the United States will be controlled by a syndicate of European Hebrew bankers, with the Rothschilds and others at their head.

The appointment of Whitney to the Interior Department would be a triumph for the railroad corporations. Whitney is very wealthy and has been backed by his father-in-law, Senator Paine, of Ohio. The corporate interests of the nation will be safe, and there will be no raids on the land grants with Mr. Whitney at the head of the Interior Department. The appointment of Allan G. Thurman would have caused a panic in Union Pacific, Northern Pacific and the other subsidized railroads. The railway magnates, by the way, have great confidence in Mr. Cleveland. He made most of his money as a railway lawyer, and all his vetoes as Governor were in their favor.

The Parsee merchant, J. S. Moore, who is here in Washington, reports that Horace White, of the Evening Post, was asked by the President-elect whom he should select for members of the cabinet. Mr. White replied that in his judgment the Independents should not be recognized, and that it would be policy for Mr. Cleveland to surround himself with the ablest leaders in the Democratic party. There must, said Mr. White, be no surprises. It is further understood that the Independents to please Charles Francis Adams and the great corporate railway magnates in Boston and New York have joined in recommending Whitney for the Interior Department.

THE RECORD AND GUIDE has so often protested against exclusive lawyer rule that its conductors will be pleased to learn that the present Senate, for the first time in its history, is not entirely dominated by lawyers. Twenty-five of its members are business men of the first class, and practically control that body. The Senate consequently transacts its business with far more promptness than the House, and is never behind in its appropriation bills. On all national questions, such as the need of a navy, it is always right. The pottering, delaying and inefficiency complained of is confined to the popular branch of the Legislature, nine-tenths of whom are lawyers. SPECTATOR.

Decision Affecting Judicial Sales.

Judge Truax in the New York Superior Court has just rendered a decision of great interest to purchasers buying real property at auction at judicial sales.

In the partition suit of Frederick Lewis, as assignee of Simon Mack, against Thomas L. James, as assignee of Ferdinand Mayer, the property on the southerly side of Hester street, running from Bowery to Elizabeth street, was sold on October 16 last at the Exchange, and Lewis Ash became the purchaser of the factory building on the southeast corner of Elizabeth and Hester streets for $42,850. At the sale, the posters and advertisement of the building purchased by Ash described the same as being a factory six stories high on the entire plot, and having independent walls on all sides. Upon examining the title and causing a survey of the premises to be made, it was discovered that a portion of the factory, 25 feet square, was only five stories high, and, furthermore, that the easterly wall of the building was not an independent wall, but had the beams of the tenement adjoining on the east resting in it. Among other objections to the title urged by Mr. Ash on his application to the court to be relieved from his purchase, he contended that no notice was given at the sale of this easement of the adjoining house to insert beams in the factory. In opposition it was claimed that both buildings having been built simultaneously by the same owners (Mack and Mayer), the wall was a party wall and no incumbrance but a benefit. Counsel for Ash while conceding this general principle, contended that inasmuch as the party wall stood wholly on the land his client bought, the ordinary rule did not apply for the reason that such a party wall was subject to appropriation and use by the proprietor of the adjoining premises, and therefore impaired the use and enjoyment of the wall without imparting any corresponding benefit or advantage. This case was entirely different from the usual party wall standing equally on both lots of land covered by the buildings of which it forms a wall for each, each tenement then being dominant over and servient to the other in equal degree.

Judge Truax sustained this view, saying that he was "of the opinion that a party wall which stands wholly on the land bought by the petitioner Ash constitutes an incumbrance upon and a defect in the title of the land on which it stands, and that Ash should not be compelled to take such title."

Mark Ash appeared for the purchaser; Herman Frank, Stern & Myers and R. S. Newcombe, attorneys in sui partition suit, opposed.

Home Decorative Notes.

—Recent embroidery in sheer material is exquisite and tempts many idle hands. A new design for work in darned stitch on such stuff is groups of crescent moons in favorite colors—amber, blue and pink.

—A very elegant wine-set is of cut-glass, which catches and reflects the light in a fairly dazzling way; the bottles are enclosed in a patent case and cannot be opened except by a secret spring.

—The Bevington pottery in the barbotine style is quite attractive, with raised fruit and flower decorations on olive, gold and shaded green ground; it comes in vases, jardiniers, baskets, etc.

—For choice Christmas decoration the asparagus vine is much used; most exquisite designs are wrought with this fragile looking green; it will hold its color for several weeks, and when it fades it is still beautiful.

—A unique pen-rack and inkstand combined is a huge brass pen mounted on invisible feet at one end, the point, and at the other are two enclosed cells for stamps and an inkstand, the open point forming the tray for a pen-receiver.

—India silk scarfs and easel draperies are in clear deep reds, greens, orange and other shades stamped with delicate traceries; they are as fine and delicate as lace.

—A charming easel drapery is of pure white China silk the ends embroidered with open disks, the background of broken cross bars in lemon yellow silk; each disk shows a flower form in outline, the ends are finished with the ravelled white silk in which are knotted bunches of lemon yellow silk.

—Three gilded fans tied together with pink and olive satin ribbons are much used for wall decorations.

—A pretty little toy for the useful purpose of lighting a match is an oxidized nutmeg in a hollow blue oxidized grater.

—Among the rubber novelties which are to be found this season is a cooing pigeon which simulates the real bird to perfection.

—The drapery over the toilet table is a scarf of madras muslin or any fancy material measuring from a quarter to half a yard wide, falling just below the sides of the top of the table, it passes over a peg fixed in the wall at a short distance above the mirror, then over two others placed some distance off and rather lower, but just above the sides of the mirror, thus forming a canopy over it.

—Gilded wood baskets have in addition to the generous bow of velvet or ribbon on the side a bunch of long natural cones.

—Gold enters more or less into the composition of all the styles of faience and pottery; glass, which was so much used last winter for both table and house decoration is not so much sought after this present season, owing principally to the fact that all the higher grades of glass are so quickly duplicated in cheap imitations.

—The newest waste-paper baskets are of bright yellow, blue or pink straw and decorated with bunches of flowers, artificial fruit or extremely generous bows of ribbon.

—Dainty little bonbon boxes are of hammered silver, with a butterfly on a spray of leaves in repousse.

—Brass is seen as much in ornamental and useful decorations as it has been for the past few seasons, new pieces constantly appearing in lamps, the newest are of different kinds of faience of the same shade as the globe, pale yellow makes a very handsome shade at evening, so also a transparent glass in shaded ruby with a vase in a similar tint; particularly effective cabinet pieces of Italian pottery come in queer looking greens and reds; a hundred conceits in china and glass are shown by Cezilly of 1208 Broadway.

—New cameo glass pungents are out in the pattern of a net-work of opal ferns over a sapphire blue surface, or a roseate glass is wreathed with fine white hawthorne blossoms.

—Chrysanthemums make a lovely decoration in painting for brass placques, vases and various fancy articles of satin, such as wall hangings, monchoir cases, fans and screen panels.

—Rattan grows in popularity, and is now more than ever being utilized in the construction of graceful pieces of furniture; among new adaptations of this material are beautiful open-work screen frames, single, two-leaved or three-leaved; among other novelties of this style offered by F. W. Richardson & Co., 28 East Fourteenth street, are book-racks, music-racks, hanging book-shelves, tables and standing book-shelves.

—The American Specialty Co, of Union square and Twenty-third street, are to be congratulated on the beauty and worth of their exhibit of novelties for Christmas gifts.

—A gilt vase filled with pink pampas plumes, shaded pink milkweed pompons, Hartford pressed ferns and fairy grasses is a beautiful object of preserved growth.

—For dining-room ornamentation, there are game pieces done in repousse brass and copper which are handsome adjuncts to the finest painted pieces; Rembrandt and Henry IV. heads come for dining-room or tudy.

—The demand for bric a-brac and novelties in household decoration does not abate, and botany as well as zoology is ransacked for designs, and all the combinations apparently possible are made, every animal in the menagerie is employed for a bonbon case; an elephant of porcelain has an opening in its back for begonias; curiously twisted ram's horns are elegantly mounted in gold for smoking and liquor sets, a stork extending itself within a lotus thicket to seize a frog supports a thermometer, and a setter dog with a bird in his mouth holds up a barometer, a half open fan of gold and studded with jewels contains a picture, a swarm of grasshoppers in bronze constitutes a paper weight and so the variety and oddity of designs increase.

Financial Points.

This journal was not mistaken in anticipating lower prices in the stock market towards the close of the year. It now looks as if the dullness and depression may be prolonged into January.

The suspension of the dividend by Lake Shore was a good policy. It may and did hurt the price of the stock, but the property is better when dividends are not declared when they have not been earned.

When the time comes, as it will some time in 1885, the Michigan Central and Canada Southern will be good stocks to have in one's safe.

The liquidation in the coal stocks is not yet over. They will all see lower figures, but the cheapening of coal will eventually have a good effect on manufacturing.

The signal for a rise will be when the New York Central comes to terms with the West Shore. The upward movement will probably be preceded by a heavy break in the price of West Shore bonds.

Long Undisputed Possession a Good Title.

The law of adverse possession of real estate is so clearly set forth in the opinion of Mr. Justice Daniels, concurred in by Judges Davis and Brady, of the Supreme Court, in the case of Ottinger against Strasburger, ust decided, that we cannot do better than give some extracts from it. Judge Daniels says:

"The appeal has been taken from a judgment denying the right of the plaintiffs to a specific performance of a contract entered into between themselves and the defendant for the sale of a lot of land on the corner of Baxter and Hester streets, in the city of New York. The contract was entered into on the 15th of February, 1882, and the plaintiffs covenanted therein to execute, acknowledge and deliver to the defendant or his assigns 'a proper deed containing a general warranty and the usual full covenants, for the conveying and assuring to him or them the fee simple of the said premises, free from all incumbrances except' a lease, &c. The plaintiffs were ready and willing to deliver the deed to the defendant in the form mentioned in the contract, but he refused to accept and receive it for the reason that the title of the plaintiffs to the land was deemed to be defective. They received their title from Samuel Hall, as the executor of the last will and testament of Robert Thompson, who died in or about the year 1870. The deed to the plaintiffs was given on or about the 28th of February, 1881, and in form conveyed to them the title to the property in dispute.

"But it was made to appear that Thompson, the testator, had no record title whatever to the property, and to establish his right to the premises proof was given of their possession by him commencing about the year 1821. Before that and on the first of April, 1788, it was shown that the premises had been conveyed by a sheriff's deed to Abraham Beekman, who did not appear to have disposed of them in any form during his lifetime. He left a will at the time of his decease, which occurred in or about the year 1789, by which these premises were devised to Abraham K. Beekman. The latter died in or about the year 1816, also leaving a will by which this and other property was devised to his executors in trust to collect rents, pay outstanding debts and divide the real estate not sold into seven equal parts, with full power of sale and conveyance. Whether his executors ever in fact conveyed this property under this power of sale was not positively shown, but, from the history given of it, it appears to have been next found in the possession of Robert Thompson. And that possession was proved to have continued either by the actual occupancy of Thompson, or the renting of the property under his authority, from the year 1821 to the time of Thompson's decease, which was about the year 1870. After that it was in like manner rented and the rents collected by the executor of his estate, the grantor in the deed to the plaintiffs. This long and continuous occupancy of the property prior to the conveyance by Thompson's executor extended through the period of sixty years, and it was further shown that while Thompson was in possession he claimed to own the property, and in addition to that his acts were those of an asserted ownership.

"This continued possession was all that could be required to vest a title in the property by means of an adverse holding. And from it and its long continuance a presumption arises that the property was in fact conveyed under the power of sale contained in the will of Abraham K. Beekman, by his executors, to Thompson, for so long a possession creates the presumption of a grant to the person holding the property.

"And the fact that such a conveyance of the property had been actually delivered by these executors to Thompson is confirmed by an action of partition commenced in 1836 and terminated in 1839, between James Beekman and another as plaintiffs against Stephen Van Courtlandt and others, who were all the heirs, devisees and their descendants of Abraham K. Beekman. By the judgment in this action all the real estate which had not been disposed of or distributed by the executors of Abraham K. Beekman was partitioned between his heirs, devisees and their descendants. But this judgment in no manner referred to these premises, and that omission indicates a very strong probability that they had been previously conveyed and disposed of, for otherwise they would have formed a necessary part of the subject of that action. And as no other person than Thompson appears to have claimed any title to the property, it is to be presumed that in their disposition the premises had been conveyed to him. And that presumption was rendered entirely controlling by the long possession of himself, his agent and his executor, and left no reason for doubting his ownerhip of the property. If a title by means of such a possession, fortified by the presumption arising from the form of the judgment in partition, can ever become absolute and capable of being conveyed in fulfillment of a contract of this description, this was such a title. For it enabled the plaintiffs as the grantees of the executor of Thompson to do what they had covenanted should be done by their contract, which was to convey to the defendant the fee simple of the premises free from all encumbrances except a lease."

"The proof of this long continued possession and use of the property establishes the further fact that no heir of Abraham K. Beekman could, by the addition of any period of infancy, entitle himself to a recovery of this estate. What the law required at the time when Thompson's possession commenced for the acquisition of a title by means of adverse possession was the continuation of that possession for a period of twenty-five years.

"Abraham K. Beekman died, as already stated, in the year 1816. If he left infant heirs they were in being at that time, and whatever the period of minority may have been would have lapsed after that time. And in addition to that the twenty-five years of continued possession required by the statute then in force would also have expired prior to the time when the executor of Thompson conveyed the property to the plaintiffs. And that was clearly sufficient to extinguish all claims of all infant heirs of this owner, if any had been left by him at the period of his decease, and to perfect title by possession in Thompson. The statute in cases of this nature do not, and did not, permit to cumulate disabilities.

"The consequence, therefore, is that if either of the heirs of Abraham K. Beekman was an infant child, the suspension of the application of the statute would not be permitted to extend beyond the completion of his or her minority. But it would begin to run as soon as the infant heir or heirs of Abraham K. Beekman attained the age of twenty-one years, and would then continue, as the party in possession of the property was undisturbed, until the statutory period had expired. And that would operate as an extinguishment of every possibility previously existing upon which Thompson's title could have been questioned or disturbed. This possession, together with that of the executor, did continue for so long a period as to exceed any possible minority and the statutory time required to complete an adverse possession. There was not even a bare possibility, therefore, that the right of the plaintiffs to this property could be in any form questioned. It has become fixed and determined as any title well could be depending on long continued possession and the presumption of the law arising from it that the possession had originated in a grant of the property. It further appeared that the property had been assessed to Thompson as the owner from the year 1824, and that he had paid the taxes upon it, which is an additional circumstance confirmatory of the conclusion that his title was entirely indefeasible. It had become all that the plaintiffs had obligated themselves to convey, and the defendant should have been required to accept it and pay the purchase price. And as these facts were all found by the learned justice before whom the trial took place, and are completely sustained by the evidence, the judgment entered upon his direction should be modified so that judgment will be directed in favor of the plaintiffs, requiring the defendant to receive and accept the property in controversy. The plaintiffs should also have their costs upon this appeal."

Increase of Municipal Indebtedness.

It is a fact, not without curious interest, that while the national government nearly always has more revenue than it needs, and the States find it expedient frequently to reduce their tax rates, nearly all the large cities in this country are continually straitened in their resources. They never have an income large enough. They tax lands and buildings; they tax stocks, bonds, money and franchises; they tax furniture, plate, carriages, drays, mules and horses; they even tax dogs; they tax various kinds of licenses—water licenses as well as liquor licenses; they levy special taxes on railroads, steamboats, horse-cars, telegraphs and telephones; and yet, after having tapped and exhausted all these sources of revenue, they are forever in want, and many of them are compelled to issue bonds and mortgage their future to supply their immediate need. The New York city government costs as much per annum as the United States government cost under Polk's administration, and it has a debt greater than the national debt was at any time down to 1861. The city government of St. Louis costs three times as much as the State government, and the city debt is two and a half times as large as that of the State. The explanation of this increasing cost of municipal government is to be found partly in the multiplying needs which civilization brings with it. A municipal population cannot have an abundant supply of good water and light, parks, smooth, clean streets and wharves, capacious public buildings, an elaborate fire department, hospitals, schools, courts, asylums and prisons; that underground apparatus of sewers, water-pipes, steam-pipes and electric wires which is indispensable to modern business and comfort, and the system of amusements, pageants and shows that the people demand, without paying for them, and the price to be paid is steadily increasing as the things demanded grow more complex and elaborate. The main question is, therefore, not how to reduce a municipal community's wants, and thereby its expenses; for repeated efforts followed by repeated failures in this direction serve to show that only fitful and temporary retrenchments are practicable, and almost invariably these are followed by periods of still more excessive expenditure. The problem is to discover new sources of revenue. It will not do to levy higher tax rates on property, or to make the valuations of property higher. In most cities property is already carrying all the weight it can bear, and in not a few taxes are impairing its value. The internal revenue system of the national government has revealed the marvellous revenue-yielding capacity of spirits, beer and tobacco, and as the national government is gradually loosening its hold on these articles, and will probably let go two of them entirely in a few years, it is probable the municipal governments will have to take them in hand and make them permanent sources of income. Spirits, beer and tobacco are capable, under a simple and effective system of excise, of yielding in St. Louis $1,000,000 a year without hardship either to those who deal in or those who consume them.—St. Louis Republican.

Why Americans Succeed.

The English trade papers are devoting a great deal of attention to the question of American competition in Australasia. Mr. Arthur Clayden furnishes the Ironmonger with a number of interesting facts relating to our trade with New Zealand. He says: "The great secret of American success is the enterprising manner in which they conduct their business. Shall I say that it comes from their appreciation of the colonial or pioneer spirit, and of the wants of such a people? Yet, whatever be the reason, the fact remains that there the Americans are, and are not only likely to continue, but also to rapidly extend their connections. The characteristics of American imposts into that colony are that they are tasteful, light and cheap. * * * If there is one thing more than another that the New Zealanders abhor it is to be behind the times, and they feel that the English manufacturers are inclined to lag behind: or, if they attempt to take to the track with the Americans, then they go to the other extreme, and send out stuff that can only be considered a disgrace to the country. It seems a remarkable thing. I cannot in the least account for it; but the impression has somehow got abroad that anything will do for the colonies Anything will not do; it is an insult to the intelligence of the people; and the sooner the English makers disabuse their minds of that idea, so much the better. On all hands it is 'American,' 'American,' 'American,' and to my certain knowledge several good firms stood out against American hardware and fittings until they could endure no longer."

Relighting Furnace Fires.

According to a dispatch from Pittsburg, a number of iron furnaces that have been lying idle will resume operations during next month, notwithstanding the complaints of dull trade and low prices. This would appear an unwise proceeding, but perhaps it is not so much so as it seems. The demand has been so greatly restricted for some time past, owing to consumers confining their orders to the barest needs, that increased supplies will soon become an actual necessity. The stock of pig iron now piled up may, when the increased orders come, be insufficient for the immediate wants, and in view of that possibility the furnaces are resuming operations. It may be that there is still another reason. During the practical cessation of iron making in a part of the Northern iron districts the new Southern iron furnaces have been busily at work, and the owners have seized the opportunity for introducing their product into the Northern markets. Considerable shipments have been made to all the Northern Atlantic States at prices lower than the Northern iron makers east of the Alleghanies could offer with any hope of profit. Several shipments of Southern iron to the West and Northwest have been reported, though not with equal success in competing against the iron of Ohio manufacture. There are conflicting statements as to the ability of the Southern iron makers to maintain themselves at the prices obtained for their product, there being more than a suspicion that the exceptionally low rates asked are merely for the purpose of introduction. It may be that the fear of being crowded out by Southern competition has had something to do with the starting up of idle Northern furnaces. Unexpected orders for iron have been received at Ohio establishments within the past week or two, some of these works being in Cleveland. The orders, as a rule, are not large and the prices in some classes of work are lower than can be filled at a profit. But in accepting these orders, entailing an actual loss on every ton delivered, the proprietors have acted on the principle that it is better to hold their customers and keep their men at work, even at a sacrifice, than to be without both when trade revives and remunerative prices again rule. To shut down altogether at this time, refusing orders that can only be filled at a loss, would be to drop out of the run of business. The customer who has been compelled to go elsewhere to get his present small and unprofitable order filled may not come back when business is brisk and profitable. It is this consideration that keeps so many establishments running at an actual loss, and that may have had something to do with the starting up of furnaces which have been allowed to grow cold.—Cleveland Herald.

Shall the Amazon be Opened?

There are some in Peru who are wise enough to recognize that the interior of Peru is destined to play an important part in the future of the country. They know that however many Chinese may be introduced under a more liberal system than that adopted in past years, the Chinese are not colonizers, any more than they are improvers. Their older civilization objects to improvement, even though coast mandarins willingly trade men off to Macao or other similar ports, and Hong chiefs deal in the commodity furnished. These euphuisms are employed to cover the former slavery under the cloak which has been deliberately stripped from it in the Western States by the Argonaut and other writers, who applaud the law prohibiting the entrance of the Chinese into the United States, as distinctly as they denied recognition to the Sand-Lotters. If the members of the "Future of the Amazon Society," recently formed, meet good recognition in their own country, they will be able to achieve great results. If they even prove unsuccessful they will be able to show they have attracted attention in the world of science. For this reason we append a translation of a portion of a speech delivered by Dr. Pedro de Solar, president of the Amazon Society already referred to and which we are convinced will be widely copied by geographical journals the world over. Dr. Solar spoke as follows: "Time, money and lives are required to study the Amazon regions and the principal rivers which traverse them. Yet we are as convinced our great object can be achieved as we are that it is of incalculable importance. There are three routes which appear necessary and practicable at present. The Southern, following the Mollendo and Puno railroad, already built, and carrying it on to Cuzco, thence by Paucartambo to the Madre de Dios, a tributary of the Purus; and thence through the valleys of Ollaitambo, Vilque, Guadquina, and the splendid plantations of Santa Ana would arrive at Port Mainique, on the River Urubamba, whence navigation is open to the mouth of the Amazon by way of the Ucayali River. The adoption of this route would enable the numerous affluents of the Ucayali to be thoroughly explored, as also the vast Sacramento plains, which embrace an extent of rich agricultural ground which is much greater than the whole of that under cultivation on the coast. There is also the central route which commences at Callao and follows the railroad to Chicla, and which is to be prolonged to the Oroya. At this point it would bifurcate. One line would run northwards to Cerro de Pasco and thence to the German colony at Pozuzo, from which it is only distant twenty-five leagues, and thence eight leagues farther to a point on the Mayro River, at which port navigation commences, and whence the Amazon can be reached by way of the Pachitea and Huallaya. The other route would be following the present route from Oroya to Tarma, thence to the colony at Chanchamayo, thence following the banks of the Paucartamba or Perene to its confluence with the Ene, where it takes the name of Tambo, and whence steam navigation is practicable by the Ucayali to the Amazon. The route by Chanchamayo possesses the advantage of already being in communication with the coast by rail, cart and mule roads, all of which can easily be improved. This route embraces the valley of the Ucayali and the Sacramento. The distance between Callao and the Oroya is 210 kilometres; between Oroya and Tarma thirty; between Tarma and Paucartambo and a port on the Tambo, 120; or in all 455 kilometres from Callao to the headwaters of navigation, which could easily be traversed in two days were a railroad constructed. No railroad at present exists beyond the 210th kilometre, therefore the remaining 245 kilometres or 153 English miles would have to be effected on horse back. To do this roads would have to be made from Paucartambo to Ene. Thus without the construction of a railroad over the unfinished section the journey could be made in five days from Callao to a navigable point on the Tambo, which is an affluent of the Ucayali. The northern route can be commenced at any of the ports between Iten and Pacasmayo, which are in connection with the Pacasmayo & La Vina Railroad. Thence runs a mule road, which passing by Cajamarca goes to Chachapoyas, and over which cargo mules easily carry two hundred pounds. From Chachapoyas, running in the direction of Cahuapanas, there is a road 16 kilometres in length which ranches to Chisquilla. To the upper lands of Cahuapanas there is a distance of almost 90 kilometres. The river of the same name, and which here becomes navigable, runs through the town. The work which has to be effected then is reduced, firstly, to the opening of a clearing through the forest from Chisquillas to the port which has to be founded at the town of Cahuapanas, on the river of the same name; and, secondly, to the construction of a bridge over the Maranon between Cajamarca and Chachapoyas, at Balzas. The opening of this road to Cahuapanas is neither an unknown nor difficult task. It is now upwards of twenty-five years since a society was formed under the name of the "Patriots of the Amazon," and which has now been renamed the "Laborers of the Future of the Amazon." During this period numerous exploring parties have visited Cahuapanas. The last was under the orders of the engineer, Mr. Arthur Wertheman, who entered the river at its confluence with the Maranon, and went up stream until he reached the before mentioned town of Cahuapanas. From these expeditions we have acquired a knowledge of the wealth contained in those regions and the facility with which communication can be established with them. The route by Pacasmayo to the Amazon possesses among other advantages that of being nearer the outlet of the Panama Canal, and being from 10 to 15 per cent. shorter than the others, a great impulse would consequently be given to Amazon and Cajamarca, which would then powerfully contribute to the aggrandisement of Peru. There is one point of importance to which I wish to call your attention, and in the decision of which the patriotism of all and the intelligence of our public men are deeply interested. Our political relations with our Amazon territories have always been slight. To-day they scarcely exist, and their commerce and industry with the rest of Peru amount to next to nothing. Even family connections are gradually leading the natives of Amazon and Loreto towards Brazil. What can we expect to result from this state of affairs? Our culpable want of foresight has caused us to lose a portion of our territory, our public and private fortunes, and our honor. Shall we allow carelessness to bring about the loss of what remains? Let us promote the navigation of the Amazon and the opening up of its resources, and thus pacifically and efficaciously work for the regeneration of our country. I know we shall meet only obstacles and difficulties, but by overcoming these we shall only prove the excellence of our work."—The Daily Star and Herald.

Token Coinage in Europe.

The gentlemen who are so sensitively desirous that our metallic coinage shall be brought up to a level with that of Europe, and especially of England, are referred to an article in the London Economist of May 3, 1884, in which the writer says:

It can be proved that as matters now stand there are already more tokens, or base money as they would have been called in old times, in the metallic circulation of England than in that of any other country in the world. The eighteen or twenty millions' worth of token silver coin, added to the pence, halfpence, and farthings in circulation, completely answers the proved demands of the public. As silver and brass token coins are constantly being added whenever the call for them arises—the government being a willing manufacturer, as it always gains by the seigniorage on such coins—it may be stated without fear of contradiction that the metallic circulation of England has, from 1816 down to our own times, been always kept in a state of saturation, so far as concerns the amount of limited tender tokens kept up for internal use in the country. * * * *
The standard gold coin, under present regulations, taking the amount in deposit at the banks, as well as that which circulates, may be about £100,000,000 sterling. Say that the silver tokens alone are £18,000,000 sterling. We have then (exclusive of bronze coin) £123,000,000 sterling, or thereabout, of effective metallic circulation. The token coin is therefore 13 per cent of the whole. In France, the proportion is only 4 per cent. of token money. In the United States it is 9 per cent. In Germany it is only temporarily higher, as a transition period is being passed through, during which the old silver thaler will be in course of elimination. In Italy and Belgium, the two most important allies of France in the monetary union of 1865, the proportion of token coin is about 9 and 5 per cent. respectively of the whole metallic circulation. In fact, if the figures, so far as they are known, of the metallic circulation of the whole world are put together, it will be found that under 8 per cent. of the whole is token coinage with limited tender.

The fact is that England is not content with having a token coinage of silver, but is moving, through Mr. Childers, to substitute for the present half sovereigns, containing a metal value equal to their par value, a new debased or token coin, partly of gold, which is to circulate as ten shillings without containing ten shillings' worth of gold, but containing about 10 per cent. less. So far from dreading such a contingency, the English government deliberately prefers it, partly for the expected profit or seigniorage it will make on the new coinage, and partly, perhaps, because the recoinage would secure a supply of metallic currency for home use more certain because non-exportable.—The Inter-Ocean.

The Wealth of London.

The London Review has presented a statement of the amount of business done in the year 1883 by the various insurance companies in the metropolitan district of London, whereby some estimate may be formed of the value of the insurable property in this great capital. According to this statement, the companies took risks within the London area last year to the value of $3,655,362,935. This represented the value of property susceptible to damage by fire. In order to obtain a comparative idea of the wealth of London, it may be well to say that the amount of insurance carried in Boston is not over $250,000,000. As our population is about one-tenth of that of London, and as it is presumable, in consequence of our greater liability to loss by fire, that property owners in Boston insure their buildings and goods quite as much as the dwellers in London, it will be seen that the wealth per capita of London is probably considerably larger than that of this city. As the taxes in London are not assessed as those in this city are, it is impossible to obtain an accurate valuation, but, on the basis just given, London, in proportion to her inhabitants, would seem to be about 40 per cent. wealthier than Boston.—Boston Herald.

Real Estate Department.

As might have been expected the real estate market has been very dull during the past week and will probably be still worse next week. There is little or nothing doing at the Exchange Salesroom. The conveyances have fallen off for the past two weeks nor will there be much activity until toward the end of January. Plans for new buildings kept up pretty well until last week when they, too, showed a falling off. The opening of the new Exchange will undoubtedly mark a new departure in transactions, but the market will be a listless one until this event takes place.

Out Among the Builders.

A new church and chapel is to be erected on the corner of Sixth avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-third street. The chapel will be commenced as early as possible and the church later on. The Rev. G. Hutchinson Smyth, the pastor, informed our reporter that a building committee has been appointed to obtain plans and specifications for the new structures. The church has adequate funds in hand for the improvement.

Special Notices.

R. M. Walters, manufacturer of the Narvesen piano, of University place, corner Twelfth street, is offering some very handsome cabinet upright pianofortes of beautiful design, in French walnut, rosewood and mahogany, especially suitable for holiday presents. Mr. Walters has been very successful in introducing his Narvesen piano to the public, and during the past year it has been adopted by the Board of Education for use in the public schools of this city after a severe competitive test with other makes. He has a large assortment of new and second-hand pianos of all makes always on hand for cash, credit or rent.

A reporter of THE RECORD AND GUIDE called the other day at the timber yards of T. H. Simonson & Son, at the foot of East One Hundredth street. They extend the entire block from First avenue to the East River and from One Hundredth to One Hundred and First street. They have docking facilities for handling lumber unsurpassed by any yard in the city. They have a slip on the river front 200 feet wide, 60 feet deep and containing over 1,100 square feet of dock room. Their property comprises some fifty or sixty lots in all, and their two-story shed has a storage capacity for about a million feet of lumber. Their specialty is hemlock, though they deal principally in pine and spruce, and partly in hardwoods. The firm was established by the late Mr. Simonson nearly half a century ago.

The patent automatic elevator hatchway guards and gates, covers and safety attachments manufactured by W. R. Stearns & Co. are simple, practical, durable and convenient, and are applied both single and double as required. They have been supplied to numerous buildings in this and other cities, including Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, &c. Prices and estimates can be obtained at Messrs. Stearns' offices, No. 145 Broadway.

The Manhattan Automatic Anti-Freezing Valve Co., of No. 52 Broadway, has perfected an invention the value of which to all house owners and builders will be perceived at a glance on an examination of their circular, which is sent on application. The device is a very simple one, consisting of a copper wire on the outside of the house, which, when there is liability of frost, contracts, opening a valve in a joint of the water pipe inside the house, which causes a slight running stream to discharge into basin or sink from a small pipe attached for the purpose, and thus guarantees positive safety from bursts in any part of the building; the water continuing to run while the copper rod remains contracted, which is as long as the temperature is below the freezing point. The invention is readily attached to buildings of every description.

The commissioners appointed to assess the damages for private property taken for new parks and parkways in the Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth wards, will meet at the office of the Aqueduct Appraisal Commission, Room 303, in the Mutual Life Insurance Company's building at No. 32 Nassau street, on December 30, at 1 P. M.

The consolidation of the Coffee with the Importers' and Grocers' Exchange is a step in the right direction. There are more exchanges to-day than there is business for them to do, and there are altogether too many brokers. It is safe to predict that the ranks of the latter will be seriously thinned during the coming year.

Dr. Otto Fullgraff, of Irving place, has succeeded in adapting electricity to the wants of the laryngoscope. The improvement consists of an electric light, with a tiny glass globe and carbon loop fitted on a handle the exact counterpart of a street lamp-post in miniature. The illumination produced by the electric light in question enables him in all laryngeal and nasal diseases to perfectly view the part or parts affected, and by an application of medicated spray afford early, if not instant relief. Dr. Fullgraff was not only one of the first in New York to use the laryngoscope, but improved it vastly. The insufficiency of ordinary gas light led him to construct an oxy-calcium laryngo-vaginoscope to which he will now, no doubt, apply electricity. Dr. Fullgraff has treated for laryngeal disorders almost every celebrated operatic singer who has appeared in this country during the last quarter of a century, and was the founder and for twenty years the director of the old Bond Street Dispensary.

Carefully conducted experiments have demonstrated the fact that seasoned wood, well saturated with oil when put together, will not shrink in the dryest weather. Wheels have been known to run for many years, even to wearing out the tires. Very many dollars might be saved annually if this practice were adopted. Boiled linseed oil is the best for general use, although it is now known that crude petroleum, on even old wheels, is of great benefit.—Exchange.

Another illustration of the rapidity with which lawyers and judges dispatch business is presented in the history of the suit of Benkhard & Hutton vs. Aug. Schell, collector of customs, in the United States Circuit Court, New York city. The case was begun in 1859. The first trial was in that year. The jury disagreed. It was tried again fourteen years afterward, and the jury disagreed the second time. After the lapse of six years it was tried a third time; verdict for plaintiff. Then it was put to sleep in a way known only among the mystics of the legal profession till another case involving similar issues was tried. On the 16th of December, 1884, the judgment was affirmed, and the litigation finally ended. All this happened within twenty-six years! The original parties to it are all dead. Only one of the lawyers who started in with it survives. Moral: If anybody engages in a controversy that is to be submitted to the courts for settlement he had better begin early in life if he hopes to see the end of it.—Exchange.

A recent German invention composed of pulverized iron and linseed varnish is intended for covering damp walls, outer walls, and, in short, any place or vessel exposed to the action of the open air and to the weather. Should the article to be painted be exposed to frequent changes of temperature, linseed oil varnish and amber varnish are mixed with the paint intended for the first two coats, without the addition of any artificial drying medium. The first coat is applied rather thin, the second a little thicker, and the last in rather a fluid state. The paint is equally adapted as weather-proof coating for wood, stone and iron; nor is it necessary to previously free the latter from rust, grease, etc., a superficial cleaning being sufficient. This paint will prove a valuable auxiliary to manufacturers.—Exchange.

Work has been closed upon the lower levels of the Comstock mines, and all the machinery is to be removed. There is occupation for years in the low-grade ores of the upper levels, but the great fissure, in many respects the most remarkable mine in the world, can hold no more "bonanzas," and "prospecting," which has caused an expenditure of $120,000 per month, all raised from the stockholders, is at an end. The Comstocks have yielded such enormous sums of money that unity of action and avoidance of litigation would have made all their shareholders millionaires. As it is, five or six men have made large fortunes and thousands have lost their little all.—The Hour.

An exchange says large articles of brass and copper which have become very much soiled may be cleaned by a mixture of rottenstone (or any sharp polishing powder) with a strong solution of oxalic acid. After being thoroughly cleaned the metal should be wiped off with a cloth moistened with soda or potash, and a very light coating of oil should be applied to prevent the further corroding action of the acid. A more powerful cleaning agent, because more corrosive, is finely powdered bichromate of potash mixed with twice its bulk of strong sulphuric acid, diluted (after standing an hour or so) with an equal bulk of water. This will instantly clean the dirtiest brass, but great care must be taken in handling the liquid, as it is very corrosive. Brass which has been lacquered should never be cleaned with polishing powders or corrosive chemicals. Wiping with a soft cloth is sufficient, and in some cases washing with weak soap and water may be admissible. Dry the articles thoroughly, taking care not to scratch them, and if after this they show much signs of wear or corrosion send them to the lacquerer to be re finished.

BUILDING MATERIAL MARKET.

BRICKS.—About the only noticeable feature on the market for Common Hards during the week has been the extreme dull tone and general absence of change. Light trading might of course be looked for under the influence of the holiday feeling, but considering the condition of the weather, the check to navigation and the consequent reduced offerings it is a little surprising that cargo rates did not make a positive advance. They have stiffened somewhat to be sure, and outside figures are more frequently heard of, but when a higher range was talked buyers declined to continue negotiations. This is attributed in part to the light and uncertain consumption at present taking place and in part to full supplies in the hands of a great many who would under ordinary circumstances be considered buyers. It is generally understood that the Long Island manufacturers are in a position to ship and will do so as soon as there is any demand for the stock, and receivers say they do not imagine the supply will come in very heavily. They also find some comfort in the fact that "Up River" points are about all shut. Sail shipments have ceased from Haverstraw Bay, and Jersey is to a certain extent blocked out, and these features are not likely to change except under very mild weather. There is one portion of the market at least showing greater firmness and that is on deliveries made from yard, the heavy condition of the streets adding to the difficulties and expense of placing goods in the hands of customers, and dealers naturally and generally insisting upon somewhat increased rates.

LUMBER.—The week has been a broken one and the desire of all hands appears to have been in favor of doing as little business as circumstances would admit. Buyers do not care to increase their indebtedness or even make any additions to cash expenditures and sellers having become so accustomed to a dull market would now prefer to stand it a week or two longer in order to have more favorable opportunity for straightening out affairs against the passage from one year into another. The holding in the meantime is upon a comparatively steady basis as stocks here are fairly controlled and there is no probability that much competition between sellers will take place on a market lacking elements to resist any direct pressure. Advices at hand are still more or less uncertain respecting the probable result of work in the woods this winter, but there is a great deal of testimony to indicate that a strong effort will be maintained to keep the log-cut within narrow bounds.

Eastern Spruce shows a certain degree of firmness on the general tone of the market owing to the probability of continued small offerings. Randoms can hardly be expected and the manufacturers to whom special bills could be offered are so few that they have very fair engagements against the capacity of their saws, and buyers in consequence labor under more or less disadvantage. Values, therefore, are very well maintained and the selling side of the market loses no ground though there is no special effort made to secure an advance. Probably $13 50@15 00 per M is about as fair as can be quoted on randoms, and on specials the range will go up to $17 per M.

White Pine presents much the usual slow features. Here and there an operator may be found who refuses to admit any more than seasonable dullness and predicts considerable life as the new year gradually opens, but in general the market is not satisfactory, and it is only on the best of stock that a showing of steadiness can be made. Supplies are holding out very well, and in case of shrinkage dealers "know where they can get more." The export trade has been very good this month, and dealers who cater to the foreign outlet appear to be in the best humor. We quote at $16@17 for West India shipping boards; $18@27 for South American do.; $12@14 for box boards, and $16@18 for extra do.

Yellow Pine is still open to a great deal of improvement. Continuous efforts are making on the part of many of the trade to work the market around into a healthier form, and they speak more or less hopefully of ultimate success, but as yet a great deal of the old drag remains and the selling interest finds no special reason to rejoice. Locally occasional good showings have been made during the past month on 1¼ inch flooring boards, but not enough to invite any materially increased supplies. Contracts find plenty of bidders and on an easy basis, though no lower. Within a few weeks arrivals have been pretty full, and we are informed that a number of them were simply pushed forward for a market and have gone into basin to await sale. We quote as follows: Randoms, $17@19.50 per M; Specials, $19.50@21 do.; Green Flooring Boards, $21@22; Dry, do., do., $22@23; Siding, $20@22 do.; Cargoes f. o. b. at Atlantic ports, $18@15 for rough, and $18@20 for dressed. Cargoes f. o. b. at Gulf ports, $13@14 for rough, and $20@21 for dressed.

Hardwoods are all right if quality is high and uniform. It is, however, useless to attempt forcing trade on anything faulty, as buyers insist upon making the business themselves, and even at modified cost will not lay up stock against future wants. The export movement of walnut has been smaller for a week or two, but a number of small lots of oak, poplar and ash have gone forward. We quote at wholesale rates by car load as follows: Walnut, $65@100 per M.; ash, $33@40 do.; oak, $30@55 do.; maple, $20@32.50 do; chestnut, $25@30 do.; cherry, $50@80 do.; whitewood, $27@35 do., do.; elm, $22@25; hickory, $45@50 do.

LATH.—No change has taken place in the general features of the market. We find some of the leading dealers with a better supply in hand than they have been credited with, but there appears to be enough who want stock to afford an outlet for the continued moderate arrivals and few if any objections are made to about former cost. Receivers claim very limited amounts on the way and predict small offerings for a considerable time, and if they are not misinformed the general prospects for the market are very good.

LIME.—Not much stock came in and all the arrivals were wanted, so that cargoes found quick sale. This was an ample support to values and the general line of cost remains without change.

GENERAL LUMBER NOTES.

ALBANY MARKET.

The Argus reports for week ending December 22, as follows:

The extremely cold weather has restricted trade during the week. A few car loads have been shipped to the East, and sales will probably be small for the winter months, as generally a pretty full stock has been put in by the retail yards South and East. Should they want replenishing, the large and well assorted stock in the district will enable the dealers to accommodate them.

THE WEST.

LUMBERMAN AND MANUFACTURER, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

The extreme cold weather of the week has almost suspended shipments and orders for lumber in the Northwest. With mercury 30 degrees below zero there is no such thing as doing any business among lumbermen. The blizzard is not yet finished. News from all the markets to be found in our columns show that the Northwest is not alone in her winter dullness, Saginaw, Toledo, Chicago, St. Louis, and the river cities to Minneapolis are equally afflicted while the interior of Wisconsin mills are neither doing nor expecting anything.

The stocks of lumber on hand are not proving so large as expected, but great difficulty is experienced in ascertaining the proper figures. All interest centres in logging operations for this winter. Reports agree that many more concerns are in the woods than were expected to operate this season, and the cut will be correspondingly larger on all the streams. There has been so much infernal nonsense about reduction of the cut that about all the tailors, blacksmiths, and homesteaders are yoking up their cows and starting for the woods to cut logs without a dollar and only a sled load of provisions.

Wages range from 10 cents a day down in Michigan, to $18 a month in Minnesota, and hundreds of idle men ready to go at these figures. The outcome of this will be a stock of logs for 1885 nearly corresponding to 1884.

ENGLAND.

The London Timber Trade's Journal says:

The Oregon pine planks ex Princess Royal, to which we alluded last week as being a novelty in the wood trade, seemed hardly so well appreciated as the sequoia wood sold at the previous sale of this firm. There is, however, nothing in common between the two, one being an especially soft description, and the other a very tough wood for carpentering. The Oregon planks answered to their description, clean and free from knots, being, we understand, cut from the prime parts of well-selected logs, and will doubtless fetch their price sooner or later, especially now that high-class stuff is at such a premium in the market. It was undoubtedly a disadvantage being submitted at a private wharf instead of at the docks, as there is a certain disinclination amongst big houses to purchase goods offered in this manner, especially so with the dealers who sell by specification from stocks in the docks, and who probably would not care to introduce their customers to a rival in the trade. A lot or two of the broad planks (4x24) were sold to a country buyer at 3s 9d. a foot cube, being 3d. on the upset price. This would equal about £9 per load, at which, prior to the sale, we understand some of the planks were turned over. There is this to be said that, if wood of the kind is slow of sale, it fetches its price in the end, and perhaps is, after all, more profitable in the long run than stuff that is turned over much more rapidly.

METALS.—COPPER—Ingot has continued very dull and generally quite tame in tone, with operators indeed at times talking more or less demoralized. Foreign advices have afforded no encouragement, and in some respects appear to be worse off than our own, while home outlets are of the most indifferent character, and have to be constantly forced to lead them into the absorbing of even a moderate amount of stock. Low and weak prices are the natural sequence of such conditions, but do not appear to be appreciated by buyers. Nominally 11¼c. is about the top for Lake, with no fair indication of value for other descriptions. Manufactured copper is dull for all kinds and valuations still made from a nominal basis. We quote as follows: Brazier's Copper, ordinary size, over 16 oz. per sq. foot, 20c. per lb.; do. do. do., 16 oz. and over 12 oz. per sq. foot, 22c. per lb.; do. do., 10 and 12 oz. per sq. foot, 24c. per lb.; do. do., lighter than 10 oz. per sq. foot, 26c. per lb.; circles less than 24 inches in diameter, 28c. per lb.; 24 inches in diameter and over, 26c per lb.; segment and pattern sheets, 23c. per lb.; locomotive fire-box sheets, 21c. per lb.; Sheathing Copper, over 12 oz per sq. foot, 18c. per lb., and Bolt Copper, 21c. per lb. IRON—Scotch Pig has found sale on a few small orders, but generally the demand was slow, the offering plentiful and the market weak for all grades. We quote at $18 50@21.75 per ton, according to brand, etc. American Pig has benefited by the recent decline, and more especially the product of the companies first making the reduction, a large proportion of the output being sold ahead, with the feeling steadier. There is no reaction on value, however, except that [illegible] advance is made over wholesale rates for small orders. "Outside" irons are not finding much favor on this market at the moment. We quote $18.00@18.50 per ton for No. 1 X foundry, $17.00@17.50 for No. 2 X do. do., and $16 00@16.50 for gray forge. Old material of all kinds has secured but moderate attention, and the call when made was generally found to be against some urgent and unexpected necessity. Offerings fair and prices nominally unchanged. We quote at $16 50@17.50 for old tee rails, $18@19 for double-heads, $17.50@18.00 for No. 1 wrought scrap ex ship, $18.50@19.50 for selected do., $16.25@16.50 for old car wheels, and $18.50@19 00 for crop ends. Steel rails not very active, but sellers have shown a fairly confident tone and generally refused to enter upon negotiations at any modification of former values. We quote at $27.00@29.00 per ton for heavy sections. Manufactured Iron aside from an occasional store order has been very dull, and prices remain nominally unchanged. We quote Common Merchant Bar, ordinary sizes, at 1.70@2c. from store and Refined at 1.90@2.40c.; Rods, round and square, 2.00@2.30c.; Bands, 2.30@2.50c.; Norway Nail Rods, 5¼@6c., and domestic sheet on the basis of 2.70@3.00c. for common Nos. 10@16. Other descriptions at corresponding prices, with 1-10c. less on large lots from cars. LEAD—Domestic Pig has remained slow and the business confined almost wholly to jobbing orders. Cost does not vary much, but generally the tone is easy and extreme figures difficult to realize. We quote at about 3½@3¾c. per lb., according to brand and the size of invoice handled. The manufactures of lead are steady and quoted: Bar, 4½@4¾c.; pipe, 5¾c.; and sheet, 6¾c., less the usual discount to the trade; and tin-lined pipe, 15c.; block tin pipe, 40c., on same terms. TIN—Pig fluctuated more or less in tone, but mainly in sympathy with the foreign advices, as the home trade is indifferent beyond the handling of a few jobbing parcels. We quote at 16¾@16¾c. for Straits, 16½@16¾c. for Australian, 17@17¼c. for English, and 19@19½c. for Banca. Tin Plates continue to sell moderately, and the market without much character at the moment. More or less weakness is shown on prices for all kinds of stock. We quote I. C. Charcoal, third-class assortment, $5.00@5.05 for Allaway grade, and $5.50@5 60 for Melyn grade; for each additional X add $1.25, and $1.50 respectively; I. C. Coke, $4 50@4.52½ for B. V. grade; $4.62½@4.65 for J. B. grade; Charcoal terne, $4.40@4.57½ for Allaway and Dean grades 14x20; $9.00@9.30 for do. 20x28; Coke terne, $4.30@4 35 for Glais grade 14x20, and $8.75@8.87½ for do. 20x28—all in round lots. Spelter in light demand, but offered less freely and is possibly a shade firmer in tone. We quote at 4½@4¾c. for domestic and foreign, according to brand, quantity, etc. Sheet Zinc in moderate demand at about 5¼@6½c., according to quality, quantity, etc.

NAILS.—Trade has been erratic and unsatisfactory in the majority of cases. Occasionally an operator insists that reports should assume a cheerful tone in the face of current evidences, but the majority confess to a dull market, with no indication of immediate improvement. Such conditions, however, are more or less seasonable, and complaints are not as serious or positive as they would be at a time of the year when the attendance of buyers might naturally be expected to show much larger. Supplies are ample and values slightly nominal, though quoted at $2.05@2.10 per keg for 10d. to 60d., with a shading on large parcels.

PAINTS, OILS, ETC.—Demand for all kinds of paints, colors, etc., continues to be limited somewhat closely to the most binding necessities of the moment, and business has a dull tone. It is expected that after taking inventories deficiencies in assortments will be found among both retailers and jobbers, and a call sufficient to "fill up" follow. First hand supplies are in fair shape for carrying, and owners very generally look for about old rates, especially on standard goods. Linseed Oil has sold slowly and closes at about 52@53c. for domestic, and 54@56c. foreign. Spirits Turpentine has further slightly shaded, with the market a shade steadier at the close at 31@33c., according to size of invoice, style of package, etc.

PITCH AND TAR.—Dealings are moderate and unimportant, and the market as a whole without features of special interest at the moment. We quote Pitch $1.75@2.00 per bbl., Tar $2.00@2.25 do., according to quantity, quality and delivery.
